Sea Protects America; Why a Greater Army?

The House Appropriations Committee has approved a bill by which Uncle Sam would spend some $416,000,000 on his army during the coming year. It accompanied this approval by asserting that the nation's defenses today are "unprepared to offer resistance to any force equipped with modern offensive weapons."

Technically, this may be true enough. If some magician put the entire United States army down at Columbus, O., and the entire French army down at Indianapolis, Ind., the Americans probably would be quite powerless to keep the French from moving on to Columbus. The French have more men, more planes, more tanks, and more guns. The equation can give but one answer.

But practically the committee's statement is widely misleading. For it leaves entirely out of consideration the most important factor of all.

Whenever we start figuring out our national defense program, we ought to start by asking just who is going to come over here and assail this under-equipped army of ours, and how they are going to get here.

If the lessons of the World War mean anything at all, they prove that there is not a nation on earth today that could land and maintain on our shores an expeditionary force capable of defeating our army.

For we have, after all, a navy—and a pretty fair one, as navies go. To make invasion of America possible, our nameless foe would first have to beat that navy—and not only beat it, but practically annihilate it. There does not exist today any fleet whose command would dream of trying to come over to our waters and do that. The thing simply isn't in the book.

Assume, though, that it has been done. The next step is to establish a secure base on our coast—a base with a big harbor and ample dock space, which means one of our principal seacoast cities. And while our army may not be very big, the experience of the British at Gallipoli ought to be enough to show that in such a venture the cards would all be stacked in our favor.

Suppose the base is seized, however; what next? Our invader must now get his army over here. Where does he get his ships? Transporting half a million men and all their supplies and equipment across 3000 miles of ocean is no overnight job. Transporting two or three times that number, and keeping them fed, clothed and fully equipped is next door to impossible, unless you have practically all of the world's shipping at your disposal.

It just doesn't add up. Our army may be in dire straits—although, considering the money we have spent on it in the last decade, it ought to be fairly respectable—but you have to do some involved, flighty, and opium-scented dreaming to figure that we are in any real danger of being overrun by designing men from beyond the seas.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOAN BARRETT, heroine, seen to John Hendry.
JOHN HENDRY, missing investigator, partner and Joan's boss.
PHIL ANDREWS, Hendry's junior partner and Joan's rival in love.
PHILIP HENDRY, Sybil's father.
DOROTHY STARRKE, Joan's childhood friend.
CHARLES SUTTON, California police promoter.

She heard him chuckle. "Elementary, my dear Watson," he said, "elementary. Well, go back to sleep now. So long . . ."

Go back to sleep! She sat up in bed, more wide awake than she had ever been, and hugged the information to her heart.

Joan Barrett, the meek-as-a-mouse, doll-faced sweetheart, was the daughter of a murderer. Her father had been hanged, at San Quentin. Who could tell what outrageous ideas lurked behind the sweet blue eyes of the man's daughter?

And that was the girl Bob Andrews wanted to marry! No wonder she had told him that she'd rather die than have him find it out. Imagine living one's life with a murderer's child! Why, at any moment, she might commit the same crime herself. It was in her blood to kill . . .

Bob would be thunderstruck when he found it out! It was like Sybil not to consider how intensely he might be hurt; her mind was too full of the supreme satisfaction she would know when he learned the truth.

But who should be the one to tell him? Philip? She could not wait for Philip. This was Thursday. Friday morning, rather, on Saturday, they planned to be married. No, it could not be Philip. Uncle John, then?

YES, Uncle John would be the one to tell him. She would speak to him the first thing in the morning, before he left for the office. . . .

Suddenly she remembered what Bob had told her that evening about her uncle. Tonight he was alone in that little house with 40 thousand dollars! And Abraham might not be home until morning. . . .

She got out of bed quickly. She would go over to see Uncle John immediately. She would tell him that she had been unable to sleep worrying about him alone in the house with all that money. And then, very carefully, pretending the utmost reluctance, she would tell him of Joan Barrett. . . .

Hastily she dressed. She would run over the few blocks to Uncle John's. It was too late to get out the car. Besides, she hated the struggle of opening garage doors and starting up a cold motor. And if she called Jennings at this hour, he would take an eternity to dress himself. . . .

Within ten minutes she was out of the house. Eagerly she turned her steps in the direction of her uncle's house, with as wild a song in her heart as Joan had known when she hurried along these streets a few hours previously. The same bright stars looked down on Sybil; the community rested in the same lushed quiet.

She saw the same light burning in her uncle's living room, and it disturbed her. It indicated that her uncle was still up, and if that were the case, he would not be alone. Mr. Norton would be with him, and over their liquors they would have reached a mellow state of good fellowship by this time.

She did not want to see Mr. Norton tonight. And she did not want her uncle to be too entirely consumed with the spirit of good fellowship. In such gentle mood, he might even see fit to condone a murder. Or a murderer's daughter. . . .

NEVERTHELESS, she did not turn back. She had come this far. And it would flatter Uncle John to know that she had been sufficiently concerned over his well-being to get up out of her bed.

Coming up the steps, she noticed that the front door was ajar. It was almost always unlatched, but it was strange to see it ajar. Strange, too, she heard no voices. Perhaps Mr. Norton had gone back to town, after all. She crossed the hallway to the living room.

Suddenly she stopped in her tracks. Uncle John sat there, gazing at her from his lifeless eyes, even as he had gazed at Joan two hours earlier. But now his figure was more slumped in the chair, and the cold grey pallor of death was upon his face.

Sybil's scream filled the house and echoed outside upon the street. Again and again she screamed, as the horror of the sight before her eyes chilled her soul. But she made no move toward him; rather she backed slowly toward the door, fearful of being left alone in this house of death.

And as she reached the door, her left foot caught in something upon the floor and she looked down in terror. It was a black kid glove, a woman's black kid glove. . . .

Quickly she bent to pick it up. And as she looked at it, her eyes widened with sudden comprehension and understanding. She remembered picking up that same glove once before that evening—a plain black kid glove, trimmed with petit-point embroidery. In her own house she had picked it up and handed it to Joan Barrett! Big Pecan Crop For Texas Forecast

GONZALES, Texas.—C. Pape, pecan orchardist of Monhalia, has predicted a bumper crop in Texas this year.

He based the forecast on the small crop harvest last year, plenty of moisture last year, early blooming and the fact that trees are loaded with small pecans.

"The wet year last year gave the trees an opportunity for strong growth, especially for the improved varieties," he said. "Last year there were comparatively few blossoms."

CHAPTER XXIV

SYBIL lay in the rose and silver boudoir, fathoms deep in a dream of contentment.

The telephone on her bedside table jangled, and she stirred restlessly. Within the second, she awoke again. It rang again, at this time its call was more insistent. Sybil opened her eyes sleepily. A third time it rang, and she sat up quickly. She looked at the tiny clock alongside her. Two o'clock.

Who could be calling at two o'clock in the morning? She picked up the phone, answered it impatiently.

"Long distance calling," she heard the voice of the operator. "One moment, please." The operator's voice droned on. "I'm trying to connect you. Hello, San Francisco. Hello. Here's your party. . . ."

Sybil listened breathlessly. "Hello, New York! Hello!" that was Philip's voice.

"Hello, Sybil? Did I wake you?" "I did." Well, I'm sorry, but it's worth it. Listen to this, Sybil, are you listening?"

"Yes, yes, Philip. Go on." "All right. Here's the story. The Barrett case was one of San Francisco's most sensational murder trials. . . ."

"What?" Sybil gasped. "Murder, I said. Ten years ago, right here in San Francisco. A man named Thomas Barrett was convicted and later hanged at San Quentin. And listen to this; he was only a daughter, Joan; 13 years old. . . ."

Sybil's eyes were wide. "And this one we know is the same girl?"

"No doubt of it. I'm sending you copies of the pictures published. You can see the resemblance for yourself. . . ."

"Oh, Philip, send everything on. Get me everything you can, and send it air mail. . . ."

"Before I do another thing, I'll send it airmail, special delivery." "Philip—you've handled this beautifully. . . ."

Killingsworth, Cox And Lone Star Win Games Here Monday

Killingsworth, Cox won a snappy softball game from the Elks Club Monday night by a score of 5 to 3 after which Lone Star staged a batting spree in defeating Strawn by the topheavy score of 18 to 3.

Killingsworth, Cox got off to a one run lead in the first inning, and scored three more in the second and their final tally in the third, while the Elks threatened continuously throughout the game, making one run in the second, one in the fifth and another in the seventh, when it appeared that they might overtake their opponents.

In the Lone Star-Strawn game, home runs were as numerous as hits in a closely contested game. In the first inning Landers and Littlefield hit consecutive homers, Littlefield connecting for another round trip in the seventh, followed by his third home of the evening when he came up to bat the second time in the seventh, making two trips to the plate and Peterson of Lone Star hit the other homer for the team when he hit for the circuit in the fifth.

Strawn started out like they meant business when a Leody connected for a round-trip blow in the first when two runs were scored, but their hitting spree ended with the first inning and they did not score again until the seventh, when they marked up a lone tally.

Mingus plays Montgomery Ward on the local diamond tonight and TeeFée plays Caddo at Caddo.

Next week the league will be re-organized, a new schedule drawn up and the official playing season will start. The games played to date will not be counted, because the season started too early and cold nights prevented many from attending and hampered good ball playing.

Wednesday night Ranger's big rodeo of the season will be staged at the park, with contestants and fans from all over this part of the country being present for the affair. A big motorcade visited nine towns in this part of the country Monday advertising the rodeo and many indicated that they would be present as visitors or contestants.

 Program proper had for the preface the interesting topic, "Life in America" given by Margaret Jo McCleskey. Remainder of the program brought the following papers, "Some in Poverty" Huberta Mitchell, "A Bean Picker" Katharine Thomas, "In His Name," Annabell Wright, "G. A.'s Visit in Bulgaria" Elizabeth Jay, "A Connecting Link," Geneva Williams, Prayer: Jimmie Beth Todd and closing hymn, "Have Thine Own Way."
 Members of the organization were in charge of the prayer meeting last week and presented a program of high inspiration. Saturday, was picnic day with the group enjoying the pretty Butler Springs.

Mrs. Mae Healer, Dean of Women of R. J. C. was elected president of the Beta Upsilon chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma society, at a Founder's day luncheon at Laguna hotel, in Cisco, Saturday.

Rehearsals Are Set For Kid Movie to Be On Wednesday

Interest is high in the Kid Comedy, a moving picture to be filmed here using about 100 Ranger children between the ages of 3 and 12 years, according to B. E. Garner, manager of the Arcadia Theatre, where registrations for participation are made.
 All types of children are needed for the cast. Some singing and dancing acts will be used, but it will not be necessary for a child to be able to sing or dance to get a good part, he pointed out.
 Casting for the picture began Saturday morning, William D. Patton, casting director, having established his office in the Green Room of the Gholson Hotel, on the mezzanine floor, where a meeting in the rectory for a study to be hosted by Mrs. Helen C. Yonker.
 The meeting is called to the attention of each member of the society.

large number have already been cast for the picture.
 Those children who have not had an opportunity to register or who wish to come back for a try-out, may do so by seeing Mr. Patton at the Gholson Hotel in the Green Room just before rehearsal.
 Rehearsals for the picture will begin Wednesday afternoon at 4 p. m., and these rehearsals will also be held in the Green Room of the Gholson Hotel. Those children who have reserved a place at rehearsal are to report promptly at 4 p. m.

"Black Legion" Truest To Life Film Ever Made

On the very day—almost at the same hour—that Judge Joseph A. Moynahan of Detroit passed sentence in the Black Legion case, the exact thing was being enacted on a Hollywood stage, with Samuel Hinds, character actor, as the Judge.
 The film version of "Black Legion," showing today only at the Arcadia Theatre, is a Warner Bros. production based on the activities of the society of that name, and the big trial scenes are the climax of the story, with Humphrey Bogart as the guilty night rider.
 The coincidence of time is heightened by the fact that words of the screen judge in passing sentence were almost identical with those used in Judge Moynahan's indignant castigation.
 Both the real Judge and the actor Judge uttered scathing denunciations of secret societies that strip up racial and religious hatred among American citizens.
 "Black Legion" is a daring and thrilling melodrama based upon the actual operations of the secret, hooded, night-riding order which terrorized Michigan recently.
 The cast includes, besides Bogart, Dick Foran, Ann Sheridan, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Helen Flint, Joseph Sawyer, Dickie Jones and others.

Summer Round-Up
 Wednesday has been designated as Summer Round-Up Day for pre-school children of Ranger. Between the hours of 1 and 3 o'clock, those who plan on entering their children in either Cooper or Hodges Oak Park schools next September are asked to bring them to either the Ranger Clinic or West-Texas Clinic and Hospital where Drs. Walter Jackson and P. M. Kuykendall are to be in charge of examinations.
 The health of your child is of paramount importance and a general check at this time might save a health disturbance during the summer. Committees are in charge of this summer round-up, and the same plan is followed each summer under the sponsorship of the local parent-teacher associations.

BATTER UP!

IT'S TIME FOR A COMPLETE LUBRICATION CHECK UP!

Summerize YOUR CAR
 REMEMBER that the light motor and gear oils you used for quick winter starting are not made to stand the blistering heat of Southwestern summers. Anti-freezes should be drained and your radiator cleaned. A Magnolia Summerize job includes all these important points, plus a thorough inspection of your battery, tires, lights and other services you may need to prepare your car for safe, economical summer driving. Stop at the sign of the "Flying Red Horse."
