MERGING WPA DISTRICTS WILL SAVE IN COST

By United Press
SAN ANTONIO, May 20.—Consolidation of the original 20 Texas WPA district offices into 12 administrative units was announced today by State Works Progress Administrator H. P. Drought.

District offices formerly at Tyler, Beaumont, Palestine, Wichita Falls, Abilene, Brownwood, Uvalde and Big Spring are being consolidated with adjacent districts. Remaining district offices are Marshall, Dallas, Houston, Waco, Austin, Fort Worth, Laredo, Amarillo, Lubbock, San Angelo and El Paso.

"The consolidation affects only administrative offices," Drought said, "and will have no bearing on the number of persons operating WPA projects. The general reduction of the case load in each office section of Texas makes it possible to handle WPA activities efficiently through 12 offices and will save about $30,000 in administrative costs each month."

Relief of 187 clerical employees will be effected by the consolidation.

Counties transferred to New WPA districts include: Andrews, Martin, Howard, Mitchell, Nolan, Taylor, Ector, Midland, Glasscock, Coke, Runnels, Coleman, Brown, Concho, McCullough, Menard, Kimble and Mason have been added to the San Angelo district.

Hardiman, Foard, Knox, Wilbarger, Baylor, Wichita, Archer, Haskell, Throckmorton, Young, Shackelford, Stephens, Callahan, and Eastland have been added to the Fort Worth district.

Seamen's Prosperity Hurts Waterfront

By United Press
HOUSTON, May 20.—Prosperity of American seamen is causing operators of waterfront hotels and cafes much worry these days.

Easily available jobs on almost every ship tying up in the ship channel are keeping the sailors on the water and are depriving the hotels and eating places of revenue.

Also, the sailors have moved to better quarters in other sections of the city while they are in port.

J. T. Taylor, manager of the Seaman's Church Institute, reported that his place is almost empty for the first time since the depression began.

"We have only 15 men here and they are all deck boys, oilers and ordinary seamen," he said.

"We have calls for able-bodied seamen every day and can't supply them. Several foreign ships have taken on men, too."

When the sailors arrive from a voyage, they go to the uptown business district, buy clothes and spend their money. They return to the Turning Basin "broke" and ready to take the first ships out.

BIG-TIME RODEO DRAWS LARGE NUMBER OF CONTESTANTS AND A CAPACITY CROWD OF FANS

Between 1,000 and 2,000 rodeo fans attended the first big-time night rodeo, held here Wednesday evening, and between 250 and 400 were estimated to have been turned away at the gates because of limited seating facilities.

Both the spectators and the contestants were delighted with the show and declared it the only really top-notch rodeo ever staged within 100 miles of Ranger.

Many of the contestants from other towns remarked after the show that many others would have been present had they known the show was so well planned, and that another rodeo of its kind would draw many more contestants and spectators. Financially, the show broke even, despite the fact that several hundred dollars had been spent on its preparation.

Plans were being discussed this morning for adding to the seating capacity so that between 1,000 and 1,500 more seats could be provided and a big three-night event staged later in the summer. The tentative plans, as being discussed, call for the installation of bleacher seats along the entire south side of the field from the inside wire fence to the top of the board fence around the field.

Good time was made in all the events, though better time would have been made had the field been somewhat smaller.

Winners in the contested events were as follows:

- Calf Belling: Felton Herrington, Breckenridge, first, time 16 1-5 seconds; Everett Shaw, Lehigh, Oklahoma, second, time 17 2-5 seconds; Ray Matthews, fourth, time 18 3-5 seconds.
- Calf roping: Joe Welch, Carlisle, N. M., first, time 19 2-5 seconds; Everett Shaw, second, time 20 4-5 seconds; Burl Hittson, third, time 35 1-5 seconds; Bill Pough, fourth, time 27 4-5 seconds.
- Steer riding: Huey Long, Fort Worth; Hike Walwick, Denton; Lyn Sodberry, Breckenridge, and Chuck O'Connor, Calif., riders.

The official schedule of the 1937 season will begin Tuesday night after the official opening Monday.

All teams have met in a round-robin of play in the early season and kinks and shortcomings of most of the teams have been worked out, so that real ball is expected to be seen from the start of the season.

The bill, as passed by the House would return state ad valorem taxes to the counties where collected.

The House spent the morning debating the $12,000,000 rural school aid appropriation.

Governor Allred scotched rumors of possible repeal of the race track law by a rider on the departmental appropriation bill.

Race betting was permitted by such a rider. It had been suggested it might be repealed in the same way.

"I would not approve that," Allred said.

Governor Allred also announced he will strike out everything in the appropriation bill that can be eliminated without interfering with the normal conduct of government because the legislature has not provided money for other expenditures.

Monday Set As Date For Hearing Of Motion Asking Dissolution Of Canvass Preventing Injunction

Judge George L. Davenport of 91st district court Thursday set Monday, May 24 as the date for a hearing upon a motion asking dissolution of an injunction granted wets recently which prevented canvass of the May 1 prohibition election.

The date is tentative because the jurist may be called to preside in a case at Amson. In that event the hearing will be held when he returns.

The suit contesting the election was filed by nine Cisco, Eastland and Ranger beer retailers and wholesalers, who challenged the vote validity because of "improper notices" and an "improper ballot."

The motion for dissolution was filed by Criminal District Attorney Earl Conner, Jr., attorney for commissioners court, which is defendant in the case.

The election, unofficially, resulted in the victory for the drys in the proposition that all liquors shall be prohibited from sale.

Hearing of the case upon its merits will be Monday, June 7, when the next term of 91st court begins.

A. F. OF L. SENDS PROTEST UPON PWA POLICY

The American Federation of Labor protested to President Roosevelt today that a Public Works Administration order barred thousands of unemployed building workers from PWA projects because they are not actually on relief.

William Green, A. F. of L. president, said the order was issued April 24 by Deputy Commissioner Horatio Hackett, and provided that only laborers directly on relief would be given government-financed jobs.

Green said President Roosevelt explained the administration was cutting costs and its first duty was to relief cases. Green said, however, that Mr. Roosevelt would study the situation.

Green also urged appropriation of "at least $300,000,000" to continue the PWA.

A sit-down strike, meanwhile, closed the assembly line of the Plymouth Motor Car Company plant at Detroit, Mich., forcing idleness of between 3,000 and 4,000 workers.

Germany Protests Cardinal's Speech Concerning Hitler

BERLIN, May 20.—Germany has made official representations to the State Department at Washington against a speech by Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, considered disparaging to Adolf Hitler, it was announced today.

The diplomatic move described as "representations" rather than a formal protest, was made by Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, new German ambassador.

The ambassador was instructed to lodge objections against the cardinal's speech in which he criticized German trials of Catholic clergy on charges of immorality and referred to Hitler as an "Austrian paper hanger."

It was considered likely Germany would make representations to the Vatican. The official Nazi press joined today in the general newspaper attacks on Cardinal Mundelein.

How Times Do Change!
British Lion Is Bluffed

The British battle cruiser Hood is a fine figure of a warship—40,000 tons of applied science, fast and tough and hard-hitting, capable at one blast of blowing half a dozen ordinary warships clear out of the water.

This was made clear when the British cabinet, after going through all the motions traditional to Britons when their sea-going rights are endangered, quietly backed down once again and allowed that British merchantmen had best keep out of the war-torn port of Bilbao after all.

The incident is worth looking at, as one more bit of proof that England, instead of ruling the waves, is waiving the rules these days.

Spanish rebel warships have been blockading Bilbao. Under the international non-intervention agreement—signed by Britain and other powers—shipments of arms and ammunitions are prohibited, but shipments of food-stuffs are permissible.

General Franco, rebel commander-in-chief, announced point-blank that if any of these ships made for the port of Bilbao they would be sunk. And it was then that Britain summoned the mighty Hood up from Gibraltar and talked loudly of enforcing British rights on the seas.

It is important to realize just what these rights were. Under the non-intervention agreement, British merchantmen have a perfect right to enter Bilbao with foodstuffs. Furthermore, the British government has not yet granted the Spanish insurgents the rights of belligerents.

Now if your memory goes back to the spacious days before the war, you can see that this was a situation made to order for the growling of the British lion. In these days a rebel leader would think twice or three times before laying hands on a British ship.

But they haven't. For the cabinet admitted, finally, in the House of Commons, that it will not force the issue. If British ships try to enter Bilbao they will do so at their own risk. The Hood is just there for looks. The rebel blockade is being accepted at its face value.

The British lion has become a cautious old beast in late years. The day when "lesser breeds without the law" ran to cover at his first growl has gone.

Such men as Hitler and Mussolini have made an epoch-making discovery, impossible to imagine in the old days. The lion can be bluffed.

 JOAN BARRETT, heroine, secretary to John Hendry.
 JOHN HENDRY, intrepid investigator.
 BOB ANDREWS, Hendry's junior partner and Joan's father.
 SYBIL HENDRY, scientist, John Hendry's niece and Joan's rival in love.

Yesterday's Police are called in to investigate the murder of Joan's father, recently occurring in a New York rooming house in New York.

CHAPTER XXVI

BEFORE noon on Friday, Sybil drove out to the airport to meet Bob. She had wired him about the cruel murder of her uncle, sparing the details, and begging him to return at once. In reply, he promised to take the first available plane.

Sybil's eyes were red with weeping as she greeted him. "You don't mean it, Sybil!" he protested, searching her face for a denial.

"It's true, Bob. I can't believe it myself. But there's no doubt—" "Who did it? When did it happen? Where?"

Briefly she explained how she had come to find the body. "I couldn't sleep, Bob," she emphasized, "thinking of Uncle John all alone in the house with that money—"

Bob started. "The money! I'd completely forgotten it. Whoever did this—" He broke off abruptly. "That's what the police believe," Sybil agreed. "Someone who knew about the money—"

"But that's impossible, Sybil," he protested. "Nobody knew about it except Joan and I—by the way, how is Joan?"

Sybil sighed. This was not the moment to tell him—not yet. She must lead up to it slowly, with infinite patience. Above all, he must believe that he was getting the truth from her, against her will.

"I haven't seen her this morning," she replied, evasively. "The poor girl!" he exclaimed. "I know she's as broken up about this as you are—"

Sybil broke into fresh, violent sobs. Bob waited a few moments in awkward silence until she composed herself.

"WHO did it?" he demanded then. "Haven't the police any idea?"

Sybil did not answer immediately. "Tell me, Sybil," he insisted. "Who did it? My God, I could tear the fellow apart with my bare hands."

"Bob, my dear, I'd sooner cut out my tongue than tell you—" "What are you driving at?" He frowned as he tried to read her thoughts.

Sybil looked up into his eyes with a plea for understanding. Her voice was low, and it trembled as she answered: "The police think—oh, I know they're wrong, Bob! I know there's been a horrible, inconceivable mistake—" "Whom do the police think did it?"

"Joan Barrett." She breathed the name tremulously, as if it were torn from her very heart.

Bob's face became instantly distorted with a terrible anger, and he grasped Sybil's shoulder in a cruel grip. "D— you, Sybil!" he fairly shrieked. "What are you trying to say?"

She raised her eyes to his pitifully, and as she saw the anger in his face, she drew back instinctively. For the moment she thought that he would strike her. "It is ridiculous, of course, but that is what the police are saying. I was afraid, when they told you, that you might do something—"

Bob, you must be sensible about this. "Sensible! The whole thing would be crazy, if it weren't such a damnable outrage. I'll wring their necks if they dare to suggest such a thing to me—" "But that is what I'm trying to prevent, Bob. Don't you see, you won't help her that way—"

Gradually his anger subsided, and he sank back, stunned. After a moment, he asked, quietly: "Where is she? Have they—?"

Sybil shook her head. "They haven't arrested her—they haven't taken her yet." "Where is she?"

"I don't know, Bob. She disappeared—" "Disappeared?"

"Yes. That's why—" "I know. That's why they suspect her. The police always suspect whoever disappears. But why in the world should she have run away? I know about it!"

Sybil shook her head and sighed plaintively. "Nobody knows, Bob. It's all such a mystery. Dorothy Starke admitted that Joan went to see Uncle John last night about a private matter. . . . Bob laughed, brutally. "I SEE," he said with biting sarcasm. "Joan went to your uncle and asked him to raise my salary because we're getting married. . . . or perhaps she asked for an extra week's pay in advance. He refused, so she killed him and took the $40,000."

He broke off, a catch in his voice, and the frown on his brow deepened. His tone was serious as he added: "I can't for the life of me see what made her run away. How do the worthy police explain that?"

"They think she may have been frightened—" "Frightened? Afraid of being accused of murder, you mean?" Sybil nodded.

"Don't be a fool, Sybil," Bob cried rudely. "Why should she be afraid of that?"

"Because—oh, Bob, my dear, please believe me. I'd do anything in this world to spare you—" "So I see," he replied curtly. "Well—" He turned the ignition key and started the motor again. "I might as well go and ask the police."

Sybil laid a restraining hand on his arm. "No, wait, Bob. I'll tell you. The police have found out that—Joan's father was a murderer—that he killed a man—" "What?"

"That's what they say, Bob. It happened in San Francisco—" "I don't believe it!"

"He was hanged at San Quentin—" "What of it? Many an innocent man has been hanged. Why, that girl's father never killed a man any more than I did! Nothing could make me believe it."

"Naturally not—" "But that is what I'm trying to prevent, Bob. Don't you see, you won't help her that way—"

Gradually his anger subsided, and he sank back, stunned. After a moment, he asked, quietly: "Where is she? Have they—?"

Sybil shook her head. "They haven't arrested her—they haven't taken her yet." "Where is she?"

"I don't know, Bob. She disappeared—" "Disappeared?"

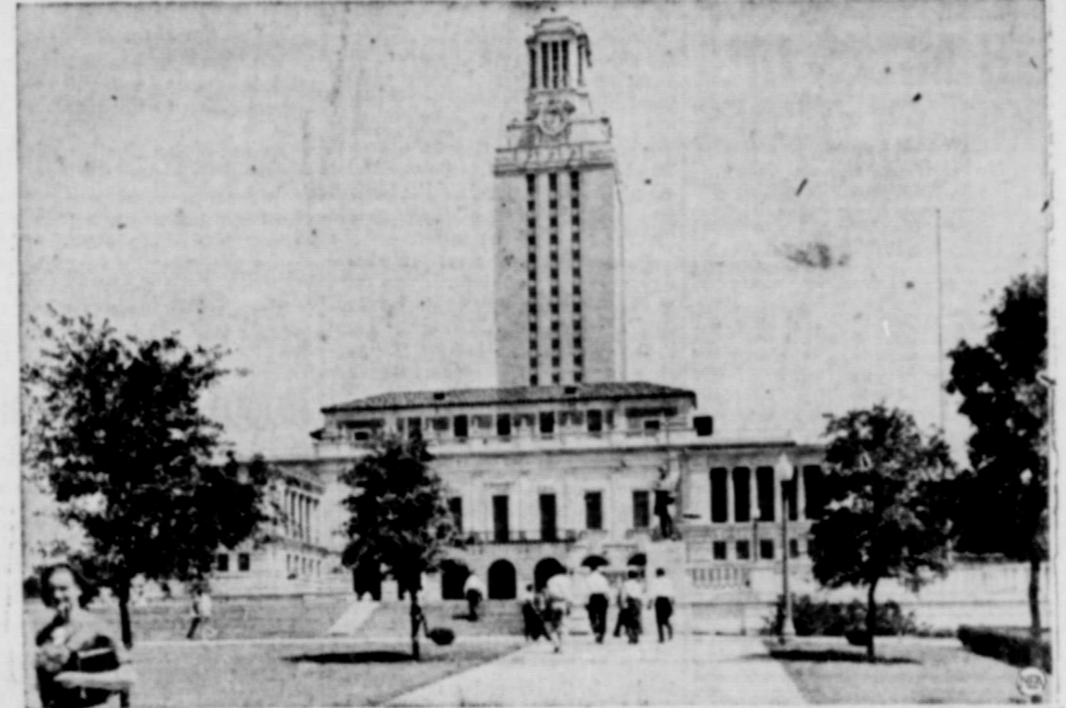

"Yes. That's why—" "I know. That's why they suspect her. The police always suspect whoever disappears. But why in the world should she have run away? I know about it!"

TOWER OF NEW $3,000,000 LIBRARY DOMINATES CAMPUS AT U. OF TEXAS

Its 308-foot tower dominating the campus, the newly completed $3,000,000 administration-library building at the University of Texas, Austin, is pictured above. It is of Spanish Renaissance architecture, combining classic arches and columns with smooth planes of modern design. Separate suites have been set aside for the Wrenn, Aitken, and Stark libraries of valuable first editions. The general library's half million volumes are in the tower, as are the historical Bexar Archives. The university executive offices are in the front wings. Completion of the building brings to a total of 10 million dollars the campus construction of the last decade. The money came largely from oil revenues on university-owned land.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—it is not on record that any holder of an insurance policy has ever recommended that the management of the insurance company should be placed in the hands of professional politicians.

A large part of the administration of the biggest insurance company in the world, however, will be turned over to politicians if a certain powerful clique in the Senate gets away with the demands on which it has stubbornly insisted for many weeks.

It's quite likely that you have a policy with this concern and that you're paying in money on it every month. It is the federal Social Security system which is threatened.

The Senate voted into the Independent Offices Appropriations bill a rider requiring that all the Social Security Board's lawyers and experts receiving over $5000 a year must be confirmed by the Senate. Obviously this provision would apply to the cream of the crop, some 40 or more lawyers, economists, directors of bureaus and assistant directors who represent the brains and experience upon which the huge social security system depends for successful operation.

EXPERIENCE shows that when Senate confirmation of appointments customarily become a matter of political spoils. To date the SSB, which operates under civil service except for exemptions as to lawyers and technical experts, has hired about 210 of those lawyers and experts. The Civil Service Commission has approved these exemptions after setting up standards for appointees so high that SSB officials often have squirmed and cursed.

The House, which voted to put all the experts and lawyers under civil service, has stood out against the Senate rider, while the Senate conferees have refused to repeal the rider. The Senate conferees are Senators Glass of Virginia, Byrnes of South Carolina, Russell of Georgia, Adams of Colorado and Steiwer of Oregon.

One effect of the Senate hold-out is that the delay in passing the appropriation bill has held up May payments on grants to states for 1,258,000 aged poor, 330,000 dependent children and 32,000 blind.

THE loudest toot of anybody's own horn that has been tooted here for some years came recently from the United States Flag Association, which announced in a press release framed as a news story:

"Washington, D. C.—In the midst of perplexing sit-down strikes and other elements befuddling the employer-employee relations of a nation, there comes a big patriotic society, like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, with an entirely new approach, radically different from anything yet suggested, to the solution of this all-important problem . . ."

Whereupon the association, which has President Roosevelt, Chief Justice Hughes and President Bill Green of the A. F. of L. among its high officials, announced a "Fellow-American Service" which would distribute "industrial-patriotic tracts" illustrated by Howard Chandler Christy, to be distributed among employers and employees. The Flag Association insisted that the tracts would be "of such a nature that they will develop among employers and employees a mental attitude that will substitute goodwill and tolerance, understanding and co-operation, for envy and greed, misunderstanding and strife in employment relations."

Repercussions of the "thunderbolt" have been rather soft and low. But in case you agree the association may have something there, its address is 923 Fifteenth Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C.

LET'S KNOW TEXAS-TEXANS

WILL H. MAYES, AUSTIN, TEXAS

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. What is known of Capt. Claudius Buster aside from his Mexican expedition record?

A. He was born in Pulaski County, Kentucky, Jan. 26, 1816. While living in Washington County, Texas, in 1838, he joined the Texas Rangers. In 1842, he recruited a company of volunteers to resist Mexican invasion and was with the group that went to Mier. When released from Perote prison, Sept. 16, 1844, he made his way back to Washington county. He raised a company for the Confederacy in the Civil War and was its captain. After that service under McGruder at Galveston and along the Texas-Louisiana coast, he served several terms as county judge of Washington county and died there Dec. 27, 1889.

Q. Who organized the Texas Congress of the Parent-Teacher Association and when?

A. Mrs. Ella Caruthers Porter of Dallas, who is honorary president, organized the Texas Congress at Dallas, in October, 1909.

Q. How much land was granted to settlers in Texas under the constitution of 1836?

A. Heads of families were to be granted 4,605 acres, single men one-third as much, the grants subject to forfeiture for disloyalty, for aiding enemies of the government and for refusing to go to war.

Q. What prompted Capt. Thomas

J. Morgan, of Washington, Pa., to bring a company to Texas in the fall of 1836?

A. Reports of Mexican demonstrations along the Rio Grande encouraged young Morgan, just out of college, to raise a volunteer company to aid Texas. His company reported to Gen. Felix Huston at "Camp Independence," on Matagorda Bay, in November, 1836, and remained in service until Gen. Sam Houston furloughed the entire Volunteer Army indefinitely, in the summer of 1837.

U. S. Aid Urged For Education

By United Press
 CHICAGO—Steady migration from farm to city—particularly from poorer farming areas, is making Federal support for education necessary, according to Prof. Newton Edwards of the University of Chicago.

Edwards said the need was most acute in that 25 per cent of the population which had moved from home states. This group, constitutes more than $25,000,000 persons, 3,000,000 of whom are Negroes he said.

There has been a heavy movement from the underprivileged areas of the South to the metropolises of the North, he said.

Many of these, he said, are children and youths under age, and their education in the towns and cities to which they have moved is a vital problem.

"It is of no slight significance," Edwards said, "that the youth of the nation who are being provided the most meager educational opportunities are the ones who, in large numbers, will find it necessary to seek occupation opportunity outside the community in which they were born."

"Sound social policy," he said, "requires an extension of educational opportunity for a large part of the rural youth of the nation.

"What is needed is a reorientation of rural education to meet the educational needs of both those who live in the towns and cities and of those who will remain in the country. The successful development of such a program will require liberal financial support from the Federal government."
