Machine Age Bound to Benefit Mankind

You cannot travel far enough these days to get away from the problem raised by man's invention of machinery. Ernie Pyle, roving reporter, visited Alaska recently and in the town of Petersburg met a man who believes he has perfected a shrimp-picking machine.

Shrimp are relatively tiny creatures which come out of the ocean encased in little shells. Getting them out of the shells so that they can be canned has always been strictly hand-work, and quite a few people get jobs every year at the canneries, doing this work.

But this chap whom Pyle stumbled across has spent 10 years working on a machine to do the work. He thinks, at last, that he has it ready to go; he plans to install 10 machines immediately in his cannery, and each machine will do the work that 10 men used to do.

The result is that even a small fishing village in Alaska—which you might suppose would be the last place in North America to be bothered by "technological unemployment"—is going to get a taste of the machine age. A number of people who always, before this, could rely on several weeks or months of steady work will have to find something else to do hereafter. Machinery has advanced one more little step along the road toward the obsolescence of human labor.

This sort of thing has been happening on such a huge scale in the last few decades that the Alaskan development looks relatively insignificant. But it isn't. It is a grim little signpost, reminding us—in case anyone still doubted—that for better or for worse, the replacement of human labor by machine labor is going to continue.

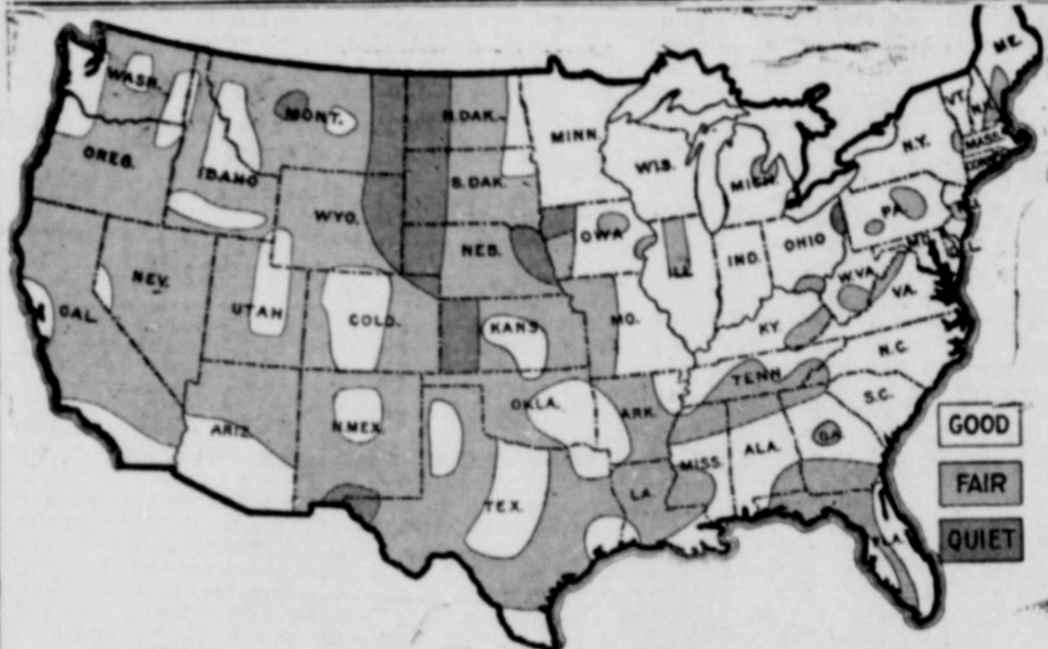

It is not merely a problem of the big city; it is something that affects far-away fishing villages just as it affects big manufacturing centers.

Now there is no use in bemoaning this development, for it is as certain and inexorable as death and taxes. And, indeed, in the long run, it cannot be anything but a tremendous boon to the race as a whole. Mankind is being relieved of drudgery; the mean, monotonous, back-breaking jobs that once were part of the universal human lot are being lifted off his back.

The trouble right now is that we reap the temporary disadvantages of the process ahead of the permanent advantages. It is hard to rejoice over relief from drudgery when at the same time one is relieved of the chance to earn a living. The man who is put into a breadline by the machine may be pardoned for viewing the machine's blessings with a jaundiced eye.

To say that we are living in a period of transition is trite—but accurate. Our job now is to learn how to translate the machine's achievements in terms of the well-being of the entire community.

SPAIN—ONE YEAR

This map represents business conditions as of July 1, 1937, as shown in "Nation's Business", official publication of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS AS OF JULY 1

June was a disturbed month in some industrial areas, northern Ohio, Indiana, parts of Michigan, and west Pennsylvania. Strikes in the independent steel mills, began late in May, involved one-sixth of the country's producing capacity. Strikes of transport workers interfered with loading and departure of vessels. Estimates placed the number of strikers at about 100,000. This was reflected in a drop in car loadings and bank clearings, the latter being the first decrease in a year. Failures, however, were fewest since September and liabilities the smallest for more than five years. The stock market was quieter but showed underlying strength and rallied easily.

The crop situation apparently held all its earlier promise. Record-breaking receipts of new wheat were recorded in the Southwest in June.

Use of electric light and power rose to new all-time highs. Wholesale trade increased but retail trade slackened somewhat. Commodity prices, after several months' decline, turned upward.

Despite widespread labor disturbances and the normally seasonally lower trend, the decline in activity in June from the high level of recent months was only moderate.

The Barometer. The Barometer chart line for June shows a strikingly small down turn, and continues well above the level prevailing a year ago.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Sea sickness is on the decline, according to Dr. William M. Wildman, for 13 years chief surgeon of the Dollar line. He says it passed out when people stopped sitting around in their deck chair and thinking about it.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

GOD PREPARES A PEOPLE

Text: Exodus 12:21-28

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

OUR lesson tells of the institution of the passover, that solemn celebration which has been through the ages the most distinctive rite of the Jews. It is associated with the idea of deliverance, and that idea has continued deep in the faith and vision of a people that in successive eras in history have been in bondage and oppression.

In the lesson as it stands, are facts and suggested teachings that are on a lesser plane than the teachings concerning the mercy and grace of God in the New Testament.

Here is an avenging God whose wrath is manifest upon an oppressive people, who smites the oppressed Jews in the dwellings where blood of the sacrificial lamb has been spread upon the lintel of the door. It is the passing over of the homes thus identified that gives its name to the passover.

One cannot but reflect upon the fact that the Egyptians who thus perished may have been free from guilt, but in history the innocent have suffered with the guilty.

It is not easy to teach such a lesson in the light of the gospel of love and forgiveness of one's enemies, and what the New Testament calls "the glorious gospel of the grace of God." We should stress in our study and teaching the idea of deliverance rather than the thought of vengeance.

The comment of a distinguished Jewish writer may be helpful. Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan, in his book, "Judaism as a Civilization," says, "The story of the redemption from Egypt, which is the traditional basis of the Pesah (passover) festival, should be made the occasion for stressing the implications of the conception of God as redeemer.

"That festival should direct our attention to the need of utilizing the redemptive energies which exist in nature and in man, the energies to which we look to break the shackles of the human spirit. It offers an excellent opportunity for becoming conscious of the true significance and the proper uses of freedom."

THE literature of oppression and deliverance in the history of every people has the discordant elements of heroic action and endurance, passionate loyalty to an ideal or cause, and great deliverance, combined with elements of cruel suffering and retribution.

When oppression arises, it is unfortunate that someone must suffer in the process of deliverance, but it is inevitable. The life of a people becomes subject to the consequences of the wrongful and oppressive acts of its leaders.

We cannot, however, be true to the spirit of the Bible and to the Christ to whom the Bible bears witness if we do not in our reading of all the records of history, both sacred and profane, remember that the supreme teaching of Jesus was that men should love their enemies and do good to them that do spitefully use them and persecute them.

It was in this way, he said, that we might lift the children of the one great Father of Love, whose justice is manifest not only in His mercy, but in the inexorable laws that bring to every act of good or evil its necessary consequence.
