Speed Demon Is Chief Cause For Highway Deaths

By United Press
AUSTIN, Aug. 12.—The speed demon again held high cards in traffic deaths last month in Texas. Figures compiled by the department of public safety show 142 fatal accidents resulting in 150 deaths in Texas. Half of these deaths were non-collision and fixed object wrecks, caused by speeding and reckless driving, losing control of a car and plunging off the road. Nearly 50 per cent of the drivers involved in fatal accidents have no one to blame but themselves, the department officials reported. Cars crashed into culverts and fences and draped themselves around trees, hurling occupants through the windshield. In several cases hours elapsed before the tragedy was discovered.

Cisco Man Leaves Tucson With Bodies Of Wife and Child

TUCSON, Ariz., Aug. 12.—Charles J. Kleiner, Cisco, Tex., oil man, prepared to take back home the bodies of his wife and son, fatally injured in an automobile accident that also injured his three other children. The body of Mrs. W. M. Barnes, the Kleiner governess, killed in the same accident, will be taken to Cisco at the same time, leaving here today. A coroner's jury investigating the tragedy on the Benson highway east of Tucson, returned a verdict ruling that "death resulted from injuries received as a result of an automobile accident caused by a flat tire on the machine in which the persons involved were riding, and the car being driven at an excessive rate of speed." Mrs. Kleiner, said by Highway Patrolmen James Contreras to have been driving the car, and her son, Charles, Jr., 9, died early Wednesday. Mrs. Barnes was killed instantly. Contreras said the car was traveling "in excess of 70 miles an hour" when a tire blowout caused it to leave the road and overturn three times. Kleiner said two of his children, Mary Louise, 5, and James, 18 months, will accompany him to Cisco. The other surviving child, Elizabeth Anne, 3, must stay in the hospital for about 10 days, but is expected to recover.

SLAYER SOUGHT BY OFFICERS NEAR AUSTIN

By United Press
AUSTIN, Aug. 12.—Officers searched a wide area east of here today for an armed bandit who shot and killed B. N. Payton, 51, seriously wounded Mrs. Payton and one son, Norman, kidnaped the other son, Leon, stole the family automobile and escaped. The Paytons lived at Govalle, a small community near here. The fugitive was believed, earlier, to have escaped an officer's ambush. The police were barricaded in a house awaiting thugs suspected of the $1700 robbery of the Public Service Company of San Antonio. About two hours after the thief escaped the Payton automobile was found wrecked near a bridge. In the car officers found $321. Payton, early today, saw a strange man at his garage door. He ran out of the house and engaged the stranger in a fist fight. The thief knocked him down. Norman Payton, 23, and Leon Payton, 16, ran to aid their father. The thief knocked him down. Mrs. Payton rushed out to help and the thief started shooting with a pistol. Payton was killed. Mrs. Payton shot through the stomach and Norman shot in the hip. At gun point the thief forced Leon into the family's gray coupe. A short distance away the man showed the youth from the car. City policemen, highway patrolmen and deputy sheriffs conducted the search in radio-equipped cars. For three days officers had been hiding in a house here expecting a "car load of thugs." Two women living in the house were arrested several days ago and held by officers.

The People's Interest in Coming Elections

Despite other evidence to the contrary, the "next election" campaign is on. And it is gathering momentum so fast that from now until 1940, the electorate is going to have to be the best read, the best informed and the keenest in the nation's history if the vote follows the real issues.

This is assuming, of course, that campaigns generally will follow the course indicated in Pennsylvania and New York City. Political quarrels which already have attained robust proportions in those places provide cues for what may be coming in other localities.

Just what the issues will be is as much a problem to the politicians as to the voters. Maybe they will all develop as nicely as the issue in Pennsylvania, which was handed to Mayor S. Davis Wilson on a silver platter when a state policeman was arrested for tapping phone wires leading to the home of the mayor's secretary.

In reprisal for this attempt to "ruin him politically," and to meet the "challenge" from the New Deal governor, George H. Earle, Mayor Wilson announced that he would reverse a previous decision and run for governor. So, although the election is about 15 months off, Mayor Wilson immediately opened his campaign in the coal area. That's how simple that was.

In New York City, the mayoralty race is more confusing. Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, elected in 1933 by a Democrat-Republican coalition, is running again, this time under the banners of the American Labor Party, Socialists, Communists, and orphaned Democrats and Republicans.

On the other side are Judge J. T. Mahoney and Senator Royal Copeland, fighting for Democratic Tammany Hall's support. But Senator Copeland has announced that he will enter the Republican primary. And adding to the confusion, Al Smith, a "Landon" Democrat, re-enters the scene as master wielder of the strings by which Tammany is trying to control its wayward members.

Rather than believe that invasion of a private telephone line—no matter whose—qualifies as a legitimate basis for a campaign, people would rather have an out and out fairy story with a happier ending. And rather than wade through a slough of synthetic issues and personal grudges, they would much prefer to return to voting simply for the best man.

Nevertheless, when the elections roll around, politicians will expect people to knuckle down unquestioningly again and pull the right levers or mark the X in the proper places.

The campaign is on. The politicians know it and are making the most of it. And if the people expect to do better than second best in the results they will have to get organized too—starting now.

Personally, I consider him an optimist. . . . Billy Jones of New Jersey is one of the up and coming challengers of Ambers. He hasn't lost since he turned professional a year ago. Officials would have you believe that the present ball is as lively as in Babe Ruth's heyday, but there hasn't been a 400 hitter in majors in seven seasons. . . . Ex-Legislator Is Seeking to Prove Pension Law Void

By United Press
 AUSTIN.—R. B. Humphreys, one-time legislator, was in Austin recently to request the Supreme Court to allow him to introduce a writ of mandamus before their bar.

Humphreys wants to mandamus the State Board of Control. He wants to force that body, through its agent, the Old Age Assistance Commission, to pay Mr. and Mrs. James W. Rogers of Throckmorton county a monthly pension.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers are Humphreys' "in-laws." They are not all needy, and that is the very reason that the Old Age Assistance Commission, after the routine investigation, turned down their application for a pension.

But Humphreys claims the Old Age Assistance Commission erred. It is his contention that the statute, which put into effect the constitutional amendment providing for the pensions, erred too and is, in fact, unconstitutional.

"The constitutional amendment said that pensions should be paid to all persons more than 65 years old—and that was all it said," Humphreys explained. "When the statute came along and said the persons had to be needy and necessitous, and it was unconstitutional."

Humphreys said he isn't representing any organization or any group. He just is working on the side that he has determined is right. He said that everybody more than 65 is entitled to a pension, according to the constitution, and if he can clarify the law and give it to them, then that is the course he will follow.

Merry Marries Baron as Third

Announcing her marriage to Baron Arturo Berlingieri of Italy, twice previously wed Merry Fabrey, above, 24-year-old "madcap" heiress of a Chicago patent medicine fortune, refused to disclose where or when the ceremony was held. The baron now is touring America alone, she declared in Chicago as the above picture was made, adding that she would join her new husband on the west coast soon.

sold for $12.35 on the Fort Worth market, the highest price paid for hogs in ten years. The spring pig crop for the United States is reported to be 7.4 per cent less than the small crop of a year ago and the number of sows bred to farrow is estimated at 3.4 per cent less than in the fall of 1936. It looks like a short pork crop and high prices for the next eighteen months or longer. The condition offers ample opportunities for profits for those able to properly appraise the situation. There is a distinct shortage of seed stock in the country and owners of this commodity will find themselves in an enviable position.

There are many hours of labor, both mental and physical, waiting for the farmer who raises hogs as a cash crop and many difficulties will present themselves, but it is said, "The optimist sees opportunities in difficulties—while the pessimist sees difficulties in opportunities." Too many hog producers sell out lock, stock and barrel during price depressions and find out later when prices are like they are today that they should have kept a few brood sows about the place for just such conditions as now prevail.

A 225-pound market hog selling for $27.75 at Fort Worth today means that one brood sow raising twelve market hogs per year would gross $333.00. With present feed prices, about $80.00 of this amount should be net profit. For this reason, one will find high class bred gilts and good boars selling for unusually high prices at the present time. A good registered gilt now will sell for $50.00 to $75.00.

Assets of these insured thrift and home-financing institutions total $49,044,924. Other Texas savings and loan associations have submitted applications for this protection for the funds of their investors.

Associations in the United States which have qualified for this insurance now number 1,756, having $1,327,103,165 in assets and 1,489,115 investing shareholders.

Eighty-nine of the insured institutions in Texas are federal savings and loan associations, operating under charter and supervision of the national government, and are required by law to provide this insurance for the accounts of their investors and savers. The balance which are insured are state-chartered institutions which have met the requirements of the FSLIC.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation is a $100,000,000 instrumentality of the United States Government. To obtain insurance, an association must qualify as to the soundness of its finances and policies. After insurance, it must comply with the regulations of the FSLIC, which examines the association regularly.

These insured associations have developed soundly, both as to the inflow of savings from old and new investors, and in the volume of loans being made for purchase, construction, reconditioning and refinancing of homes.

Blackland Belt Lets Cotton Staple Fall In Quality

WAXAHACHIE, Tex.—The Blackland Belt of Texas, once famous for quality cotton, has allowed its cotton to fall below the average quality for the state, E. A. Miller, agronomist of the Texas Extension Service, told Ellis county farmers.

Miller presented statistics from the U. S. Department of Agriculture grade and staple report of 1936 showing the Blackland Belt had only 7.6 per cent of its cotton stapling an inch or better while the state average was 10.9 per cent.

Texas' staple average is lower than that of any other cotton producing state, figures presented by Miller showed. Sixty-nine per cent of cotton grown in South Carolina stapled more than an inch.

Miller emphasized that since Texas exports approximately 90 per cent of its cotton, the quality will have to be improved steadily to compete with foreign countries in the world market.

Miller discussed with the farmers methods of improving Texas' cotton staple by use of pure seed and community and county standardization.

Plans were made by farmers to attend a field meeting on the U. S.

"FEMININE" GIRL SCOUTS OF FUTURE TO CAMP ON NEW TRAIL OF BEAUTY

 BRIARCLIFF MANOR, N. Y.—Beauty and charm and fashion will vie with sewing and cooking and handicrafts for the attention of the Girl Scouts of the future.

Eye-lash curlers, manicure scissors, emory boards and nail varnish may find a place in the kits that once held only pots and pans, needles and thread, embroidery hoops and camping paraphernalia.

For Miss Girl Scout of 1937 it is to be taught to be feminine.

Informal discussions at the International Encampment of Girl Scouts here at Camp Andree, where 75 American Scouts and their guests from 26 foreign countries are gathered together for a "three-week house party," will enter these new fields of personality and poise for the first time in Girl Scout history, it has been announced.

Although the majority of the members (membership now is a million and a half) are under 14, many are between the ages of 14 and 19. For these especially, the leaders of the organization are encouraging individual troops to engage lecturers to speak on subjects pertaining to social matters—poise, beauty, fashion, manners.

Germany, Italy and Russia—nations which prefer to train their own youth along strictly nationalistic lines—are conspicuous for their lack of representation at the Encampment here.

Women's Fashions For Fall Show a Coronation Trend

By United Press
 FORT WORTH.—Fashions for American women this fall will show a definite coronation influence, displays at a recent National Fashion Exhibitors convention here revealed.

Hardly an item in milady's fall wardrobe will escape the touch of England's spectacular coronation of King George VI. Fashion experts declared that the English had dominated both color and texture changes next season.

Coats are designed in richer fabrics, with the trend toward cloth rather than fur. For the more gala occasions, some coats are trimmed in Persian lamb, blue or silver fox fur.

From the military pomp that surrounded the coronation has come a fall tendency toward squared shoulder design, with padded rather than puffed shoulders. Tailored clothes are even more military with double-breasted coats that were belted back.

The English influence extends to collars, the styles were with smaller collars or none at all, and seaming, stitching, wetting needlework that of London.

Tailored suits still promise to be modish, with most attention to the jacket. Two-tone combinations with either plaid jacket or skirt were recommended by designers. The masculine influence extends to swag-length coats.

More coronation finery is in the women's formal wear. Shimmering surfaces of satins and ribbons are used. Adornments are encrusted with pearls, rhinestones and sparkling effects are used. Lines are lower, more slender, sometimes bellows.

Whether the men like it or not, the brims on ladies' hats are for the fall and crowns are higher. Turbans reflecting the dian princes who attended the coronation have been modified to the feminine taste.

Accessories have an even variety than usual. Gloves, shoes and feathers will be the again for the well-dressed woman.

Barber Gets Tired Awaiting Customers Not Doing Work

By United Press
 EL PASO.—Arch Watkins, barber, doesn't get standing all day at a barber chair.

Watkins gets tired when he sits around waiting for customers.

The most tiresome part of his work, he says, is waiting for customers.

"A lot of men get nervous when a barber cuts their hair," he says. "Well, it's harder on the barber. You've got to keep your hair, and there's a lot of ends you must nip and nip."

What Watkins likes best is putting hair tonic on hair.

"It is nice to work with hair that smells nice," he said, "and it smells nice on all day and is a good time."

Love Gets a Lift

CHAPTER I
 THILEEN O'SHAN, head tossed back to face a sudden summer breeze, ran up the flight of stone steps to her studio, but she was sweeping.

"Pat, I'm sorry!" she exclaimed. "Did I hurt you?"

"It didn't damage a thing, Miss Thileen, but me smoke." A smile touched the little man's ruddy, apple face. He retrieved his pipe from the grass beneath the walk. "A washin' won't hurtin' it now, I'm thinkin' a lot o' rhymes to write to ye seem in a great hurry."

Thileen frowned.

"I've got to write a letter for I have them or not. That almost due again you know, it's awfully hard to think I love this kind of weather."

She pulled off her beret and let wind whip her black curls as if it might bring her an idea.

"Now, Miss Kathy, it's the saints themselves will be ye under their care. Don't be worryin' yer pretty head."

He grasped the broom and stepped the steps as though he were disposing of all earthly cares after the door closed behind the girl, he stood in deep thought for a moment, his thick fingers tapping down the tobacco pipe. Then he shook his head and glanced at the window where he saw her already bending over her desk.

"Too young she is to be a little rhyme she writes pay any more than enough to keep body and soul together."

She pulled off her beret and let the wind whip her black curls. Her blue eyes with their long curling lashes gave her an appealing look.

... Miss Kathy, around her. She aint for the loikes o' ye."

"Oh I'm much too busy during the day to have time to get very well acquainted with the people who have studios in the house, Pat," Kathleen told him. "Besides, they all go home at night, so I never have a chance to be very friendly with them. Sometimes I think it would be nice to have someone to talk to. It wouldn't be so lonesome and, well—it's kind of scary staying alone in the building. It's so old it creaks. Often I imagine I can hear footsteps upstairs, when I know it's empty."

But after that conversation, Pat had moved a cot into the basement storage room for himself, instead of staying at his brother's rooming house, where all his old cronies were wont to gather.

"The owner thinks 'aint safe to be lavin' the place so unoccupied at night," he explained to Kathleen. "So if ye hear any trompin' around from now on, it's me." He did not add that he had never spoken to the owner of the building in all the time he had worked there, but dealt entirely with his agent, who rarely bothered his head about anything. If he could only find some nice young fellow for her to date, he would have felt better satisfied yet, but so far, none of the tenants of the building had come up to his standard.

KATHLEEN, herself, was entirely unconscious of the anxiety she was causing her Irish friend. He was very careful to be always quite casual and unconcerned when he was talking with her. She would have been surprised to know why he so anxiously scrutinized every new tenant who moved in.

Then the very small studio across from the Duchess's big one was taken. Kathleen realized this first when she saw a black and white terrier dog pelting past her up the stairs, and heard him scratch at a door which was promptly opened for him. Soon a typewriter, a steel filing cabinet and a big table were carried in. These seemed to belong to a tall, young man, with fair hair and nice upturned smile, who addressed the dog as Schmatz.

Kathleen became quite absorbed watching the moving from her window, wondering who he could be and what kind of work he did. "I'll ask Pat the first time I see him," she promised herself and turned back to her desk.

Pat himself had no time looking over the tenant. "About that dog now," he began. "I don't know what the agent will say. He—"

"Why bother to tell him? What he doesn't know won't worry him," the young man answered with a grin. "I'll promise good behavior—no barks on the part of Schmatz. The little rascal's lots of company for me. I don't know anybody here. I've just come to the city you know. You wouldn't make me get rid of him would you?"

Pat decided he liked his friendly manner. "Well we'll be tryin' the pup out," he promised, leaning over to rub the dog's ears. "What'd ye say yer name was now, Mr.—"

"McTavish, Bob McTavish. I write detective yarns for a living."

"Oh ye do." Pat carefully filled his pipe while he reflected how well the stranger's fair hair would go with Kathleen's black curls. What a foine lookin' couple they'd be makin' now. He lighted the pipe and remarked, "I suppose ye wouldn't be mindin' 'eevin' some other writers thin'?"

"Well I don't know," Bob told him doubtfully. "Why?"

"'Jist wonderin'." One of Pat's eyes closed to shut out the cloud of smoke that wreathed upward from his pipe.

Tokens Counterfeited For Profit to the State
 By United Press
 SALT LAKE CITY.—Counterfeiters have solved a problem which confronted Utah's state tax commission.

The commission for a while feared the profits from the sales tax would be used in the purchase of replacement one-mill sales tax tokens which Utahans dropped and refused to retrieve, saying, "What? Stoop ten times for a penny? Don't be silly!"

However, that problem seems to have automatically righted itself with the advent of counterfeit aluminum discs the size of the one-mill token, punched with the usual circular hole, but without the usual words, "Utah sales tax token" and "Utah state tax commission" stamped on their sides.

The tax commission now has a new problem—what to do about the counterfeiters. If their operations remain small no harm will be done and it will save the state the necessity of purchasing replacements.

CREAMED vegetable soups make excellent one dish meals for hot noontimes. With the garden ready to do its part, and the dairyman his, things should run pretty smooth around twelve o'clock.

Cream of Cucumber
 (4 to 6 servings)
 Three cups milk, 1 cup cooked cucumbers, 1 1/2 slices onion, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, salt, pepper, pinch nutmeg.
 Heat milk, add onion and cucumber pulp pressed through sieve. Cream butter and flour together, then to it add a little of the hot milk mixture. When smooth, add more and blend until all liquid is used in this way. Cook in top of double boiler, stirring constantly, until it thickens slightly. Add parsley, salt and pepper and dash of nutmeg. Serve very hot with toasted crackers.

Here a novelty that many people praise. Try it when you feel you must surprise the neighbors.

Peanut Butter Soup
 (4 to 6 servings)
 Four tablespoons peanut butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons onion juice, 2 cups milk, 1 cup light cream, pinch salt.
 In top of double boiler heat butter, blend in flour and add peanut butter. Stir until completely smooth. Add onion juice, salt and slowly stir in milk. Stir until it begins to thicken slightly, then stir in cream and continue to cook over boiling water for 25 minutes.

Cream of Fresh Peas
 (4 to 6 servings)
 Two cups fresh garden peas, 2 cups water, 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon chopped mint and cook for 3 minutes. Add to soup. Rub soup through sieve and reheat. Serve with Melba toast.

Tomorrow's Menu
BREAKFAST: Grapefruit filled with seedless grapes, creamed codfish on toast, buttered toast, currant jelly, coffee, milk.
LUNCHON: Cream of cucumber, toasted muffin, spiced pears, sugar cookies, tea, milk.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A substantial farmer-labor party is in the stage of discussion and planning by leaders of labor and farmer groups.

Labor's Non-Partisan League, a coalition of C. I. O. and A. F. of L. groups organized for political action, is going to have a little brother—the Farmers' Non-Partisan League.

Probably there will be no farmer-labor presidential ticket in 1940, although insiders of the movement hazard the guess that there will be such a ticket in 1944. Meanwhile the two leagues will work closely together in seeking to elect progressive candidates in 1937.

A conference at St. Paul, before long, at which farm delegates will predominate and both progressive congressmen and leaders of the labor league will attend, is being planned.

States where preliminary organization is planned are Minnesota, Wisconsin, the two Dakotas, Nebraska and Montana.

The labor league has announced it would open regional offices which would organize in all counties, urban and rural.

One factor which may hurt the movement is a widespread impression that the LNPL is a political appendage of John Lewis and the C. I. O. But the LNPL claims it has more than 50 officials of A. F. of L. unions on its executive board—none of whom have resigned—and that more than half its officials are A. F. of L. men.

E. L. Oliver, executive vice president who is in charge of the movement since Senator George Berry quit as president, is the former director of research of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, an A. F. of L. union. Nevertheless, Lewis and Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers were the prime movers behind the league's organization and installed Berry, head of an A. F. of L. union, as president.

There is still much radical feeling in Iowa, Nebraska, the Dakotas and Montana—or so one hears—as well as Farmer-Labor governed Minnesota. Labor leaders and the few farm leaders thus far allied hope farmers will respond to their program.

It may prove impossible for these men to break down the theory that farmers and workers have fundamentally conflicting interests. It is often argued that wage increases increase the cost of goods farmers must buy and higher food prices mean lower real wages for workers.

Farmer-labor people will argue that this applies equally to all groups of producers, that higher incomes enable workers to buy more farm products and farmers to buy more labor products, that unity of interest rests in obtaining necessities of life at lower cost, that farmers with their problem of marketing and distribution and workers with their problems of wages and hours should unite to eliminate waste, minimize profits and attack corruption and profiteering in business.

It's just guesswork whether this latest farmer-labor movement will get to first base.

Small Change Is Biggest Problem of Bankers In Cities

HOUSTON, Texas.—It is not the big money, but the small change that gives bankers their biggest headaches.

In fact, the demand for five and 25 cent pieces has so far exceeded the supply that banks have called on the Federal Reserve bank to solve their problem.

The government legislated against hoarding gold, but the 1937 version of merchandising via the coin vending machine presents a brand new problem of hoarding to the temples of finance.

While people go about the business of buying their cigarettes, playing the music boxes, trying to win the jackpot in a slot machine or parking their cars by simply inserting a coin, bankers are worrying over the increasing demand for small change.

The shortage has become so acute that Houston banks have received requests for small coins from banks as far away as the Pacific coast.

Many small banks in nearby towns have standing orders with Houston banks for large quantities of small change.

Fire Burns Grass At Eastland Airport

Considerable difficulty was experienced Wednesday afternoon by Eastland firemen in controlling a grass fire at the federal emergency airfield north of the city.

Chief A. W. Hennessie of the Fire Department reported nearly 200 gallons of chemicals were used to control the fire, which started from a government workman throwing a cigarette or match on the field. The field was being mowed and cleaned when the fire started.

The fire, said Chief Hennessie, burned practically all grass on the airport field and extended in several directions.

Fires Attacked In Old Coal Mines Near Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH.—Workmen have resumed their battle against stubborn fires that have raged out of control for several years through the tunnels of abandoned coal mines under metropolitan Pittsburgh.

More than 400 WPA employees have been assigned to fire-fighting duty for the next few weeks in an effort to check the flames which have long been recognized as a serious threat to surface property.

Buildings have been damaged in some instances where the undermined top-soil collapsed around their foundations. In other cases the flames have eaten their way through the surface to become an even greater hazard to the neighborhood.

WPA men will concentrate their new efforts on four separate underground fires. One of the four has spread beneath property near the University of Pittsburgh's stadium in Oakland.

Most of the fire-fighting work will consist of blocking off of mine entries and filling operations. Cost of the project is estimated at $75,392.

U. S. May Curb Japan's Fishing In Alaskan Seas

SAN FRANCISCO.—The question of Japanese fishing off the Alaskan coast is becoming more acute daily between the United States and Japan.

What makes the situation more difficult is the fact that, legally, the Japanese are within their international rights and there is nothing to prevent them from fishing outside the three mile limit. But what complicates the situation is that all of the American fisheries concerned, including those of Washington, Oregon and Alaska, as well as those of Canada, insist that the Japanese are Canadian fish and that they ought to live the protection of their respective countries.

All of these salmons are said to come from streams of Oregon, Washington Alaska and Canada waters where extensive measures for conservation have been taken and the fishing season limited, but nevertheless, as soon as they get out to sea beyond the three-mile limit they become the legitimate prey for Japanese boats the year around.

To what extent the Japanese are catching these salmon is not known. Tokio fisheries officials insist that Japan has never had more than two 6,000 ton ships in Alaskan water. On the other hand a group of commercial fishermen who flow over the waters on behalf of the Association of Pacific Fisheries insisted they were able to identify at least four Japanese floating canneries in operation.

To make the situation worse, it is charged by Pacific fisheries that the Japanese can offer their catch of American and Canadian salmon at 3 cents a salmon while the best American plants can do is a price of 14 cents a salmon.

According to union spokesmen, the Japanese are able to keep up their year-round fishing—always outside the three mile limit—by establishing camps on shore where they can come and shoot reindeer for meat as food becomes necessary and replenish their supply of water.

While numerous protests have been made by the fishing industry both of Canada and of the United States, no official action has been taken, the principal obstacle always being that under international law the Japanese are still within their rights.

Canadian fisheries, in their protests, however, have raised two points. They insist, first, that salmon born in Canadian waters are the same as Canadian citizens and are entitled to the protection of the government.

Their second contention is more broad. They insist that if the three-mile limit is allowed to remain, not only the Japanese but any other nation might be able to start fishing off the shores of Great Britain, Ireland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and any other British Dominion with a long coastline without the possibility of either England or the Dominion concerned being able to take any action.

Protests filed by Canadian and American fishing interests on the Pacific coast envisage two solutions.

The first is an extension of the three-mile limit for fishing and the second is an international conservation program between the United States and Canada for sockeye salmon.

The industry does a $40,000,000 annual business.

Prison System to Make Changes In Employing Guards

HOUSTON, Texas.—The Texas prison system, harassed in the past several years by convict mutilations and charges of brutalities against guards, will make radical changes in the manner of employing guards within the next two months.

Applicants for positions as prison guards will be given examinations patterned after civil service tests. The policy has been adopted by the state prison board.

Several members of the board, it was learned, complained that an undue percentage of the system's 400 guards were unable to read or write.

It was indicated that some of the guards of lesser experience would be dismissed, but that those of long service, who are unable to read or write, would not be penalized by the new policy.

W. A. Paddock, chairman of the board, has appointed a committee of board members to draft a sample examination, to be submitted at a called meeting before Sept. 1, when 40 or more guards will be employed.

The new guards will be assigned to picket duty and will work in three eight-hour shifts daily. Salary schedules for new guards will begin at $80 monthly.

Pioneer Days Are Recalled by Twins

MANKATO, Minn.—Mankato claims the oldest twins in the Northwest—Mrs. Clara Hodgson and John Krost, 81. (They'll be 82 next Christmas Day.)

The twins were born in 1856 in St. Anthony, now Minneapolis, the first children of Mr. and Mrs. John Peter Krost. The family moved to Mankato in 1857, the year of the Inkpadutah massacre when Mankato was a struggling pioneer settlement.

Heretofore, Donald and Blair claimed to be "about the oldest twins in the Northwest."

Krost says "they're just a couple of youngsters compared to us."

THE MEAN DISTANCE FROM THE EARTH TO THE SUN also is used as the base line for the measurement of the distances of the stars and other celestial objects outside our own solar system. For this reason, great care has been taken to see that this measurement is very accurate.
