IT MAY BE THAT WE ARE WRONG

This column contains timely items, suggested by the citizens of Ranger and are published at their request. They do not, necessarily, represent the opinions or editorial policies of the Times, but are written at the suggestion and request of its readers.

The following communication, in a feminine hand, was addressed to "It May Be That We Are Wrong," in care of the Times:

"It may be that we are wrong: But didn't we once hear that disease was spread by the use of the common, or public drinking cup? We are all thirsty most of the time these hot days, and the sight of a bright or otherwise tin cup hanging on a string gives the children something to think about. I've noticed that there are several business places still using a tin cup. I've also heard that our youngsters 'pass the cup at our hall games. Maybe this isn't dangerous any more. What about it? "A Reader"

When we were in school one tin cup to about every 100 pupils was considered pretty good distribution. And as long as the rust filled up the holes so they didn't leak too badly they were considered serviceable. And we survived. But then some survive a rattlesnake bite. The cups were probably almost as readily as a rattler, but not quite so sudden in their action.

The study of germs and the invention of sanitary drinking cups has been a great boon to the health of mankind. Children, who do not realize or understand, should be taught a few health precautions. Among them should be that the unsanitary drinking cup might spread a lot of disease and misery.

Thanks, Mrs. A. Reader, for the suggestion. It might be a big

Fleeing From Japanese Juggernaut

As the Japanese army knocked at the gates of Peiping with 3-inch shells, the city's means of conveyance were taxed to the limit to move refugees to points of safety. A typical Peiping family, with their most precious possessions, crowd above into a hired car (taxi) to flee from the shell-menaced capital of ancient China.

help in preventing the spreading of disease. Constructive criticism, instead of knocking is always worth while. It probably does more good than can be overcome by a lot of unfounded complaints.

Man Travels 300 Miles In Mouth of A Huge Elephant

By United Press
FORT WORTH. — Elephant travel in India is customary, but a Fort Worth man, Arthur Huff, is among the few in the world to have traveled 300 miles in an elephant's mouth.

Now Huff is no Jonah, but his elephant mileage was compiled while he was a star performer in Ringling Brothers' circus. His partner was Yasso, "the wonder elephant." Each afternoon and night for several years, Yasso carried Huff in her mouth — 285 feet in each performance, an estimated total of 300 miles. The tragic death of Alfredo Codona, famous trapeze performer, in California recently, brought recollections of the big top to Huff, who was forced to retire from the circus in 1933 because of an accidental fall of one of Codona's trapezes.

Codona and Huff were friends. One day, however, when Codona's rigging was being removed, it crashed from the top of the tent and tore Huff from Yasso's mouth. Huff's left ear was ripped off by the impact and he was knocked unconscious.

The audience saw something else that was not on the program. The bewildered elephant lifted Huff's unconscious form in her trunk tenderly and carried him to the animal tent. For several minutes she stood guard there, trumpeting defiance at all who tried to approach her master's body.

Huff was carried by the head during his act, and had only one other serious accident. Yasso one day clamped down on him too hard and fractured his skull during training.

Stamp Tax Brings State Big Revenue

By United Press
AUSTIN, Texas—Here is one that proves rather conclusively that the people of Texas want "just hog wild" during July.

As a result, the state treasurer was able to announce an all-time record in the sale of cigarettes, beer and liquor stamps during the month.

From the three-cent cigarette tax the state collected $622,228.24; from the tax on beer, $218,885.98, and from the tax on liquor and wines, $206,009.18.

In His Element When Diving Into Ocean

You thought a sea horse was a fish, didn't you? Well, here's one with four legs that wears a saddle. Elsa Rahr pilots him to water every day, in a long looping 40-foot dive at Atlantic City, and thus combines horsemanship and seamanship.

Many friends have received cards from Weldon Rushing stating that his mother, Mrs. J. H. Rushing, Sr., stood the trip to Little Rock very well. She went at once to the Research hospital where she was put on a strict diet of fruit juices. The first treatment with anti-toxin was to be given on Monday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Buchan of Raymondville in the Rio Grande Valley, were guests of Mrs. J. R. Buchan from Friday until Monday. Mrs. D. M. Buchan and Mrs. J. R. Buchan are cousins and their husbands were brothers. It had been many years since Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Buchan had visited here.

Basque Freighter Is Still a Fugitive

ALBANY, N. Y.—The Basque freighter Bizaraki Mendil, exiled from its home port of Bilbao since rebels captured the city, paused in its Odyssey at the Port of Albany.

The ship slipped through a rebel blockade five months ago and has not been in Spanish waters since, its master, Capt. N. de Bethia, said. Members of the 35-man crew are homesick.

State Department Gets "Decorator"

The U. S. State Department is going to take advantage of the experience of Mrs. Warren DeLeon Robinson, above, widow of the late diplomat, in the opening and closing of homes. She smiles her pleasure, above, over appointment as "Assistant Chief of Foreign Service Buildings" with supervision of decoration of embassies, legations and consulates.

Mousery Meeting Needs of Science

BILLINGS, Mo.—What is believed to be the country's only commercial mousery is going full blast here supplying the needs of laboratories and scientists.

Recently 1,050 of the 30,000 white mice bred here were shipped to an Indianapolis laboratory for experimental purposes.

Kept in breeding hatches, the mice are divided into lots of one male and six females. A normal increase permits the shipping of approximately 4,000 a month to all states.

The chief disturbing element occurs when a common grey mouse invades the pens.

The air in England is reported unusually clear, a report strangely coinciding with the end of the Ryder cup golf matches.

An American Contrast to Egypt's Boy King

The fact that Egypt has a brand-new king would mean little to the average American if it were not for the fact that the new ruler, Farouk I, has become the third of the world's "boy" sovereigns...

Just how a lad of high school age could be expected to take over the enormous duties of running a nation is a matter for deep contemplation in the democratic United States.

Because of our rules and customs, such a thing would be impossible here. But in the hands of the kingmakers with which Europe abounds, it's a simple trick.

Little more than a year ago, Farouk was no more fitted to rule Egypt than any American boy in knee pants. Then the death of his father, Faud I, interrupted Farouk's elementary education...

With a regency took charge of affairs at home, young Farouk was sent to Europe, where, within five months, he was groomed for the job of riding back into Cairo in a gilded coach...

Americans tempted by the delusion that all this is the glorious fulfillment of a great and wonderful destiny should try to draw a parallel in their own government.

Suppose our method of executive succession brought a 17-year-old youth to the president's chair. Then suppose the cabinet, borrowing power to rule meanwhile, sent the boy-president out of the country for a five-month preparatory course...

Suppose, also, that two million cheering people then jammed Washington to greet the little fellow as he rode triumphantly to the White House down an avenue festooned with lights, banners and flags.

It is all too preposterous ever to happen here. But the thought is valuable. It provides a refreshing foil for our quibbles over minor details of the American form of government.

Michigan opened a cherry festival with bombs, which may lead some to expect this year's shipments to be ready-pitted.

Speakers at a dental convention criticized useless tooth-pulling, a measure which will meet the approval of every taxpayer.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
KATHLEEN O'SHAN—heroine, writer of greeting card verse.
BOB McTAVISH—hero, detective story writer.
PAT—the janitor who played cupid.
PROFESSOR BRACEY—Ergonomist.

Yesterday Bob and Kathleen are settled in their respective studios in the same apartment house. And Janitor Pat has plans to have the two young people meet. He tips Bob first.

CHAPTER II
 "Wonder what that little Irishman meant?" muttered Bob McTavish, as he closed the door behind Pat. "Probably an old shuck like this lousy with writers, and artists and such. I'll have to make it very plain that I have to work for my living. Can't have the neighbors running after me."

After several hours of sorting things, and shifting them around to the best advantage, he stood back and surveyed his future home. It had evidently been the bedroom of the one-time mansion. An ornate fireplace with a large mirror above it took up one end of the room. The walls were light, the woodwork plain, and the long, narrow windows had scalloped green blinds and little inside shutters that looked as though they had never been dusted.

But Bob had flung them all open at his back, moved his big chair and typewriter stand in front of the bookcase, and noted with satisfaction that his only view was the blank wall. Blank walls were highly conducive to creative work. He could weave the threads of his plot and pursue the dastardly villain without anything to distract his attention. And Bob had to run just so many criminals to earth each week, if he had been a very hazardous step for him when he decided to come up to the city and try his hand at fiction writing, instead of going to his father's real estate firm.

"I'd smother with so much fancy hung about my neck," he had said.

"And you'll likely starve in the

"This is pretty slick, Schmatz," he told the dog. He stretched out his long legs with a sigh of satisfaction.

"This is pretty slick, Schmatz," he told the dog. "About two more real snappy murders, and we can begin to think about buying a decent couch and maybe a chair or two more, then we'll be sitting pretty." He stretched out his long legs with a sigh of satisfaction.

Down stairs in studio one, Kathleen resolutely thumbed through her rhyming dictionary, trying very hard to keep her mind on her task. The sight of the good-looking stranger who had dashed up the stairs behind the movers, intruded on her thoughts to an amazing degree. What difference could it possibly make to her that he owned a cute dog, and had a gay, breezy manner? If she did not finish a certain number of jingles before night, she wouldn't have the rent money when it was due. Then she would have to go back home to Gloversville and teach the third grade and probably eventually accept Jos Williams, with his bulging eyes, as her aunt and uncle hoped she would, and settle down to the writing of a small town. She wondered now why she had ever thought she could find a job in the city all by herself.

"Sorry, but we're not putting on any more people," had been the invariable answer, when she had to admit she did not have any experience selling things, or keeping books, or doing stenography.

THEN she had happened upon a firm that wanted rhymes for greeting cards. Yes, she could do that. Hadn't she made jingles all her life just for fun? Why not sell them then? That night she wrote Aunt Hattie that she had taken a job with a big publishing firm, which was almost true. Anyway it was better than Gloversville and Joe Williams and Aunt Hattie's fussy dictating of her every move, which was beginning to make her very restless. Though of course she really was grateful to Aunt Hattie and Uncle Henry for having taken care of her since her own parents died.

Cheer, dear, dear, dear—that dog had had the dearest, brightest black eyes, and such a cute red tongue. Schmatz was what the young man had called him. She wondered why such a queer name. Maybe some girl had given him to his master. Of course there would be a girl. No fellow that good looking could possibly escape. She hadn't seen Pat yet to ask about the new tenant. Oh dear, where was she?

A frown creased her pretty forehead, and she wrote down a line, then attentively inspected the eraser on her pencil as though it might hold an inspiration. Nothing happened, so she got up and made a cup of tea and poured it into a gay yellow cup which she took from the cupboard in her furnished apartment. What fun it she only had someone to drink the other cupful that the teapot held. Her glance strayed about the studio. It was really quite pretty. Gay cretonne drapes and red geraniums in brass pots made bright splashes of color. She ought to be able to rhyme cheer and dear—if only that gnawing loneliness would let her.

In the hall outside, Pat's broom kept pace with his thoughts too. That young fellow upstairs did seem a likely prospect as a friend for Miss Kathy, but how to bring him to her notice. She wasn't like the Duchess now, who'd speak to any man if she took a notion.

The terrier came scampering through the door just then, dived between Pat's legs and knocked the broom from his hand.

"Hey ye little divil ye! Where ye goin'?" He grasped the wriggling creature. "Listen, ye don't hae to be rushin' up to yer master's room yet. It's a good turn ye got to be doin' a loidy, see."

He ran his fingers through his mop of tousled hair, drew his chair up to his typewriter.

"This is pretty slick, Schmatz," he told the dog. "About two more real snappy murders, and we can begin to think about buying a decent couch and maybe a chair or two more, then we'll be sitting pretty." He stretched out his long legs with a sigh of satisfaction.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Marz, Austin, Texas.

Q. Is any of Count de Saligny's furniture still in the old French legation building at Austin?
 A. Only one chair used by the Count remains there, a French design in carved rosewood, upholstered in American beauty brocade. The hardware and finishings, including ornamental hinges and locks, are the same that were there in the days of the Texas Republic and the house itself remains unchanged except for necessary repairs.

Q. When did the Daughters of the American Revolution begin placing markers at historic spots in Texas?
 A. The first boulder marker in the state was placed March 14, 1908 in Sam Houston park Houston, in memory of Alexander

FOR hot nights, a cold buffet makes a hospitable and welcome form of entertainment. Especially when the tableware and food selected combine to create the impression of spacious and interesting living. Martha Logan, nationally known home economist, has a few words on the subject.

"Try this—against a setting of brilliant French provincial pottery in deep royal blue on a white pine table, spread cold meats which come ready to serve," she advises. "In a fish-shaped earthenware platter, place slices of lunar loaf with pistachio nuts (a new trio loaf), a three-toned Neapolitan loaf of beef, pork and chicken, a cheese-meat (cheese and ham loaf), or a cheese and sausage loaf. Include also beef tongue and ham, bo logna, and garnish all this with little strings of cocktail frankfurters."

Miss Logan is still hungry, it would seem. "In a small matching meat platter, place an artichoke, and form a geometric pattern with slices of cold meat wrapped around crisp celery. Also have olives, radishes and other garnishes."

There should be potato salad with this meal, iced tea and hot coffee and plenty of rolls and butter.

Hodge, one of Marion's men engaged in the Texas revolution.

Q. What is the present size of the Texas D. A. R. forest reserve and bird sanctuary?
 A. Two hundred acres, the D. A. R. having bought and fenced 50 acres in addition to the 150 donated by Mrs. W. H. P. McFaddin of Beaumont.

Q. Where do the Daughters of the American Revolution own a forest, when and how was it acquired?
 A. Mrs. W. H. P. McFaddin of Beaumont, past state regent, presented the D. A. R. a tract of 150 acres in Jasper county, Texas, as a beginning for a forest reserve, erected a fence and ornamental gateway and built a cabin, the dedication ceremonies being held Oct. 31, 1929, this being the only forest in the United States owned by the organization. The Texas Forest Service has added 2,400 trees to those already on the land.

 This booklet of 22 pages, "Texas Empire Builders of '36" is a brief record by Will H. Marz of the momentous days in Texas history from March 1 to April 21, 1836, told in a way to interest non-readers the main events of the struggle, sacrifice and suffering for Texas independence. A number of schools are using it because of its clear, brief, instructive presentation of main facts in Texas history. You will find it interesting and helpful. Mailed postpaid for only 10 cents. Will H. Marz, 2305 Salado Street, Austin, Texas. Enclose 10 cents in coin securely wrapped, or a copy of "Texas Empire Builders of '36."

Sunday's Menu
BREAKFAST: Persian melon, corn flakes, country sausage, creamed potatoes, rice muffins, coffee, milk.
DINNER: Half cantaloupe, broiled chicken, potato puffs, new peas in cream, Parker House rolls, molded lettuce and pineapple salad, huckleberry shortcake, huckleberry sauce, coffee, milk.
BUFFET SUPPER: Cream of corn soup, assorted ready to serve cold meats, potato salad, sliced tomatoes, buttered rye bread slices, chocolate marshmallow cake, canned pearsoffee, milk.

Potato Salad
 (According to Irma S. Rombauer, "Joy of Cooking")
 Boil potatoes in their jackets until tender. Chill for several hours, then peel. Marinate well with soup stock, chop or slice fine and add hard cooked eggs, onions, olives, celery, pickles, cucumbers. Add some capers and season the salad with salt, paprika and few grains of cayenne pepper. After an hour or more, add boiled salad dressing or mayonnaise. Make the salad very moist, as it will absorb a great deal of liquid. It may be made in advance, in fact, it seems to taste better the second day.
 Potato chips, warm in the oven, and hot baking powder biscuits with jelly can be used instead of the potato salad.

TAKE it from a fellow who tore up the batsman's copybook in desperation himself, Joe DiMaggio is the perfect copybook hitter.

"DiMaggio," Manager Joe Cronin was saying the other day after the young Italian slugger of the New York Yankees had belabored his Red Sox pitchers, "is my idea of the perfect hitter. He has the ideal form."

DiMag, leading both major leagues in runs scored, hitting close to .370, and a sure bet to clout 40 home runs this season, does everything in the most approved Emily Post manner of the dish, according to Cronin, who admits that he himself does everything wrong.

"Wrong, that is," says Joe, "for anybody else but me. I tried to follow the copybook, after a fashion, but it didn't do any good. Then I resorted to the stance I use now and it helped my hitting plenty."

"That's why I never try to tell a rookie how to hit unless he asks my advice. I wouldn't even suggest that anybody who has been playing the game a long while should imitate DiMaggio."

"But if a young kid, a sandlotter, came to me and asked me how he should grip a bat, set his feet, step into the pitch, and so forth, I'd tell him, 'Watch DiMaggio.'"

YOU know those books 'How to Bat' that kids buy? Well, Joe is one of those books come to life.

"And he's a rarity in that respect. Hitting a baseball, unlike hitting a golf ball, doesn't demand a certain set form—that is, there's nothing like keeping your left arm straight, your right elbow close to your body, and so forth. 'But all the great hitters I can think of lacked the perfect form a coach would try to teach a raw youngster.'

"Take Cobb . . . why no kid book on 'How to Bat' would ever suggest gripping a bat with hands inches apart. And yet Cobb, who was one of the greatest—if not the greatest—of all hitters, held a bat that way. His hands were separated on the bat handle. I asked him about it once and he told me that he found he could place it much better. His left hand, he said, could direct the bat better that way."

If Aloysius Szymanski had had a coach when he was playing around the sandlots of Milwaukee, the well-meaning tutor probably tried to break Aloysius of the habit of "putting his foot in the bucket."

And yet when Aloysius Szymanski changed his name to Simmons and became one of the greatest hitters in baseball he hadn't changed that batting stance.

The other great hitters which haven't kept them from being dangerous . . . Mel Ott kicks up his right foot against all rules, Wally Berger frequently commits the cardinal sin of taking his right hand off the bat too soon, Heinie Manush looks like he's in the throes of a St. Vitus dance . . .

"Yes, he's perfect," says Cronin, "and he's on his way to becoming the greatest of all hitters."

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Mr. Charlie Croley, world's most powerful radio station, and is seeking a license for the 500,000-watts power it now uses under an experimental permit.

Roosevelt knew about the Croley job. He told Charlie to use his own judgment. Farley specifically approved.

IN Roosevelt's first administration members of the Democratic National Committee from various states began to coin money by setting up shop here as lawyer-lobbyists "close to the White House." These men wielded many official favors at high prices. Everyone knew what was going on. But the President didn't act until rugged, honest Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska privately promised to expose the racket on the Senate floor if he didn't.

Throughout Democratic ranks today there is resentment and disgust at the tactics of the national committee in selling Roosevelt-autographed souvenir convention books at $250 price in batches to corporations. This was an idea of the late Treasurer W. Forbes Morgan, a Roosevelt relative, who nabbed a $100,000 a year de luxe lobbying job with the whisky distillers before he died.

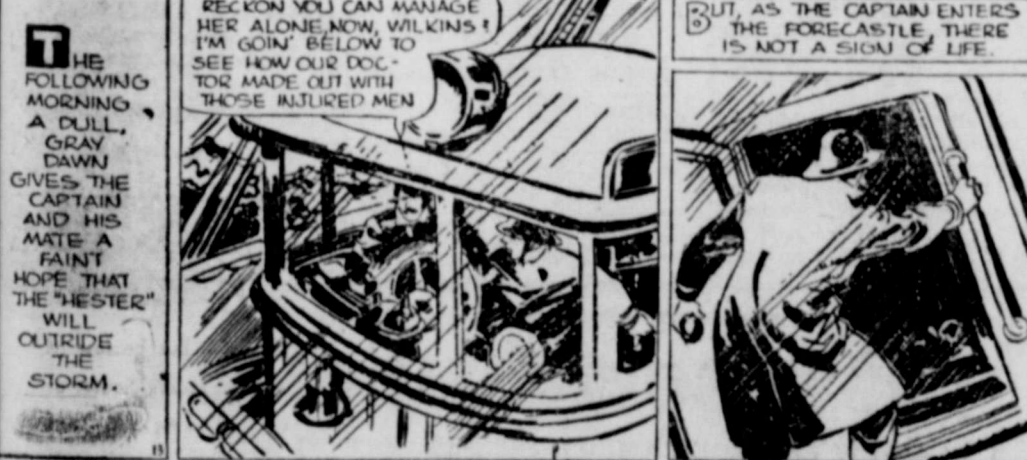

In cases of obvious impropriety on the part of government or party officials, Mr. Roosevelt usually has acted only when his hand was forced.

THE likelihood that Michigan will shortly be forced to choose between Croley and the party rests on the certainty that only will be sustained outcry about his two jobs as long as he continues to try to hold them. Not only from Republicans, but also from Democrats.

SEARCH high and low in Washington and you won't find any one who defends that book-selling trick except as a "shakedown" of business and a subterfuge to avoid the corrupt practices act. Many Democrats have the decency to be ashamed about it, but the only word against it has come from a couple of anti-Roosevelt Indiana Democrats who demand that the money be returned.

Ice Cream Supper at Oakley School Tonight
It has been the custom for a number of years for each community to send a delegate to the short course held at A. & M. College each summer since the course of study ties in with the splendid work done by council groups and home demonstration clubs.

In order to be represented at this school to be held this month, members from the Oakley school have planned an ice cream supper to be held at the school house tonight at 8 o'clock. Proceeds will be turned over to the delegate, to be selected this week.

A coffee course will be served as a compliment from the entertaining committee and the public interested in this worth while undertaking is cordially invited to be present. Mrs. J. Way Harmon is serving as secretary.

Theatre Policy In Ranger Is Changed
B. E. Garner, manager of the Arcadia and Columbia Theatres in Ranger, today announced a new policy for showing of pictures at the two houses.

Beginning tonight the Columbia will be opened each Friday evening at 8:30, with first show starting at 7 o'clock. Two shows will be given each Friday night. The same picture will be shown Saturday afternoon and night.

At the Arcadia the feature picture which has been shown on Sunday and Monday will be shown on Sunday only, a change in pictures being made on Monday. Instead of showing the Saturday picture only on Saturday it will be booked for two days, showing on Friday and Saturday. This will make one picture show on Sunday only, the second picture of the week being shown Monday and Tuesday, the third on Wednesday and Thursday and the fourth on Friday and Saturday.

More German Coal Bought by Canada
OTTAWA, Ont.—Germany is threatening Great Britain's supremacy of the Canadian hard coal market, trade figures here show.

Despite the preferential advantage enjoyed by British anthracite Canadian imports of the coal from Britain are declining and imports from Germany correspondingly increasing.

Between 1928 and 1933 imports of anthracite from Britain mounted from $26,000 to 1,600,000 tons, but the following year they declined by 150,000 tons, and last year fell off another 120,000 tons.

During the same period imports of German coal increased to 350,000 tons. Smaller quantities were also imported from Russia, Indochina and other countries.

Killingsworth Cox And Dr. Pepper In Wins Here Thursday

Killingsworth Cox had easy pickings Thursday night and defeated Montgomery Ward by a score of 23 to 2 in a hitting spree which included two home runs for Floyd Killingsworth and one for Dublin. In the other game of the evening Dr. Pepper defeated Strawn Merchandise by a score of 8 to 2.

Killingsworth Cox got off to a seven run lead in the first inning, scored five more in the third and three each in the fifth and sixth. Not satisfied with this they made five more in the seventh, while Montgomery Ward was scoring one run each in the first and sixth innings.

Dr. Pepper scored two each in the first and second innings, and then made four more in the sixth. Only two hits were made off A. Daskovich, Dr. Pepper pitcher one being a home run by Supina in the sixth with one on base.
