Maybe Football Isn't Everything After All

Out of the complaint made recently by Coach Bob Zuppke at Illinois University, that college boys are getting softer every year, there rises the faint suspicion that perhaps those college boys are just getting a different slant on things collegiate.

Coach Zuppke regrets that his husky students are not as husky as they once were, and they are not nearly so willing to go out and get the daylight pasted out of them just for the glory of the thing.

Perhaps he's right, but perhaps there is another explanation or two. It is just barely possible that a lot of boys starting to college don't care for the grind which puts them into a football suit six days a week for three months, which drives them onto the practice field for tedious practice day in and day out, just for a brief moment of battered glory before a packed stadium on Saturday.

Maybe some of them have figured out that football, except to the exceedingly small number of brighter stars, has no future except in fireside tales and after dinner reminiscences when college days are over.

It is barely possible, too, that the young athlete has noticed that, once he has his sheepskin and gets a job, he can't jump into a football suit after the day's work and get a bit of exercise.

Some of the boys may have decided that college athletics might just as easily have a future as college classroom courses. Tennis is hardly a sis game and a young man doesn't have to be a second Donald Budge to enjoy it. Furthermore, he can get exercise and pleasure out of the skill he has acquired in school for a couple decades later.

Golf teams appear to be more popular in college than they formerly were. Golf is a business man's game. It's a distinct advantage to be able to shoot a decent score. As a "contact" pastime golf is almost notorious.

You meet very few business men in football suits on pleasant sunny afternoons. There's no 19th hole on the gridiron, either.

Mr. Zuppke may be right. The modern college boys may be losing part of their enthusiasm for football, some of them, at least. There probably always will be enough to do and die for the Illini, producing Red Grange every generation or two to build up the gate.

And the others, it may be, have changed their notions about college football and the value thereof.

Norway's baby prince received as a gift a huge beer mug. The Olean, N. Y., tot, on a whiskey diet since birth, would like something in a jigger size.

The University of Virginia's device to measure infinitesimal elements could be used to total race track winnings.

In this day of radio transcriptions, it is perfectly proper for the speaker to start out with "I want to go on record."

The drubbing they got from their neighbors in the World War is sticking with the Russians. They are taking the Poles on one at a time now.

LONG BRANCH, N. J.—They say Squire Thomas George Paul Farr is almost the spittin' image of Freddie Welsh, clever Welsh lightweight and world champion of another day.

Farr is as talkative as Baer, but not quite as amusing or daffy. Like Tunney, he believes that a manager is most unnecessary. They say that he is going to get a divorce from Ted Broadribb, the old British feather who brought him up from the ranks, as soon as everything's said and done with the Joe Louis fight at Yankee Stadium, Aug. 26.

Farr's disapproval of managers is based on his great respect for money. A manager, he believes, is too expensive a luxury. The squire loves his American dollar. He has spent more time figuring out the monetary system of our realm than he has Louis' left hook.

SQUIRE THOMAS remembers only too well those penny-scrambling, ditch-digging days in Wales. He doesn't want to go back to them. "Conditions," he says, with a surprising show of sympathy, "are terrible there. I wish I could do something for my people."

He wants to make enough money to be able to retire and go back to his native country and live in quiet and comfort.

Squire Thomas set his tea cup down, dabbed gently with a dolly at his scoured lips, said excuse me, please, pushed his chair back, got up, and went over to the radio.

He twirled the dial until a clattering jazz band shivered the timbers of the beach house he has taken over here during his four-week training for his one-round fight with Lewis.

"That," said he, "is my piano over there. The keys are broken right now, however. I have a heavy touch and I was playing the Welsh national anthem with considerable gusto last night and I must have hit the keys too hard because they are stuck down."

MAYBE you were thinking that A sharp and B flat were Joe Louis, huh?

"Oh, say, now," said Squire Thomas, "I never let a light worry me. I never think about it during my leisure hours. When I play the piano I think of playing the piano, when I sing I think of singing, and when I play draughts I think of draughts. . . ."

"When you what?"
"When I play draughts."
"What's that?"
"That," broke in Publicity Man Jones, proud to be of assistance, "is similar to our game of checkers. In fact, you might go so far as to say that it is checkers."

Squire Thomas nodded his head. It is a big head—blond and battle-scarred. His nose has been badly gashed. His left ear has widely been the terminal for many fast-moving fists.

An academy trustee is stationed in Siam, from which point he ships collections of birds and fish to the offices here. Altogether, according to the academy, its collection numbers more than 6,500,000 natural history specimens.

The radio ventriloquist's dummy feature is now drawing $2800 a week, setting a new mark for other silent partners to shoot at.

Still other groups are gathering a collection of fish from the West Indies, the eastern part of the United States and the Pacific coast. Another man is gathering finny specimens in the Mona Islands off Puerto Rico.

Four expeditions are studying and collecting mammals in Panama, near the bones of a small animal, either a deer or a bison.

M. A. Carriker, Jr., of the Academy, and Godron Howes are carrying on a three-year study of the migration and distribution of birds in Bolivia. They have found birds ranging from the giant condor with 10-foot wing spread to humming birds the size of a little finger.

Hot Weather is Here— Beware of Biliousness!

Have you ever noticed that in very hot weather your organs of digestion and elimination seem to become torpid or lazy? Your food sours, forms gas, causes belching, heartburn, and a feeling of restlessness and irritability. Perhaps you may have sick headache, nausea and dizziness or blind spells on suddenly rising. Your tongue may be coated, your complexion bilious and your bowel actions sluggish or insufficient.

These are some of the more common symptoms or warnings of biliousness or so-called "torpid liver," so prevalent in hot climates. Don't neglect them. CHAPTER I

SMART attractiveness is no longer uncommon in the great uncharted, unpredictable world of young women. Nevertheless, it is a bit unusual when three very good-looking young women, unlike in temperament, choose to share the same apartment. On the card over the mail box in the lobby downstairs was printed neatly, "Dearborn, Howard, and Dunn"—quite as if the combination were a law firm. And that card was very significant, for the three girls were certainly in the nature of a corporation.

"This—this says," Kay exclaims breathlessly to the girls, "that he—Uncle Ben—has left me a yacht." "A yacht," they exploded.

Perhaps it worked because Kay was a striking brunet, Melita a dashing redhead, and Priscilla a fast-talking blond. Whatever the reason, the trio had roomed together and taken their vacations together for the past four years. In that time their arguments had been mild and infrequent, their good times many, and their boredom practically nil. Nothing was more natural than that the apartment, occupied by "Dearborn, Howard, and Dunn" be the goal of a great number of young men. "We get," Priscilla put it one day, "proposals in about equal proportions!"

Thus far, none of the three had been interested. Jokesmiths, fictioneers, and movie directors to the contrary, the modern young business woman devotes comparatively little of her serious thinking to men. Kay, Melita, and Priscilla were not different from the rest. They had found the jobs they wanted. They were interested in them, and in the whole exciting, intricate business of living. Each supposed that some time she would fall in love, and that then nothing much else might matter. But they weren't forcing fate to make the play. Nowadays life was too much fun, too breathlessly changing, to make clever plans for escaping into a quiet corner. That, they felt, would come in good time. "Today a woman can keep youthful, in an emergency, anywhere this side of 30—so what's the rush?" That was Melita talking, one lazy Sunday morning when the subject of marriage had popped up over toast and coffee.

Their chief concern at the moment was a seasonal problem—where and how to spend their two weeks' vacations which they outfit Kay Dearborn appeared alert and zesty. Tall and slender, she held her firm young chin high as she walked.

When she reached the apartment she found Melita and Priscilla already there. "We've been waiting for you," Melita said. "There's mutiny. We're going to have dinner down town."

"Why didn't you tell me? I didn't need the walk."

"Priscilla tried to telephone you, but you'd left the office. The management decided to defrost the electric refrigerator today, and Priscilla's lovely dessert is ruined."

Kay made a helpless gesture. "How do you always manage to make it on the day they defrost the box?"

"It's a gift," Priscilla said, getting up. "Come on, let's go." She stopped suddenly, went back to the table. "Oh, Kay here's a legal-looking letter for you. Melita and I have been expiring with curiosity."

Kay took the long envelope, looked at the unfamiliar name in the upper left-hand corner. "It's from Aurora," she said. "I've an uncle there I've never seen." She unfolded the letter and read hurriedly.

"What is it?" asked Priscilla impatiently, dropping down beside Kay.

Kay didn't answer at once. She was rereading the letter. Finally she looked at Melita and Priscilla with a comically perplexed expression. "This—this says the Uncle Ben died a month ago. He left me a yacht."

"A yacht!" exploded Melita and Priscilla together.

"That's what this says. And here, I remember that several years ago Uncle Ben made a cruise from here, but I didn't know that."

"Well!" Priscilla cut in cheerfully. "I guess I'm psychic. Didn't I say it would be a boat trip?"

Kay shot her a scornful look. "With what would we run a yacht?"

Priscilla looked juzzled. "I'm not sure. I think they run with gasoline, like an automobile, don't they?"

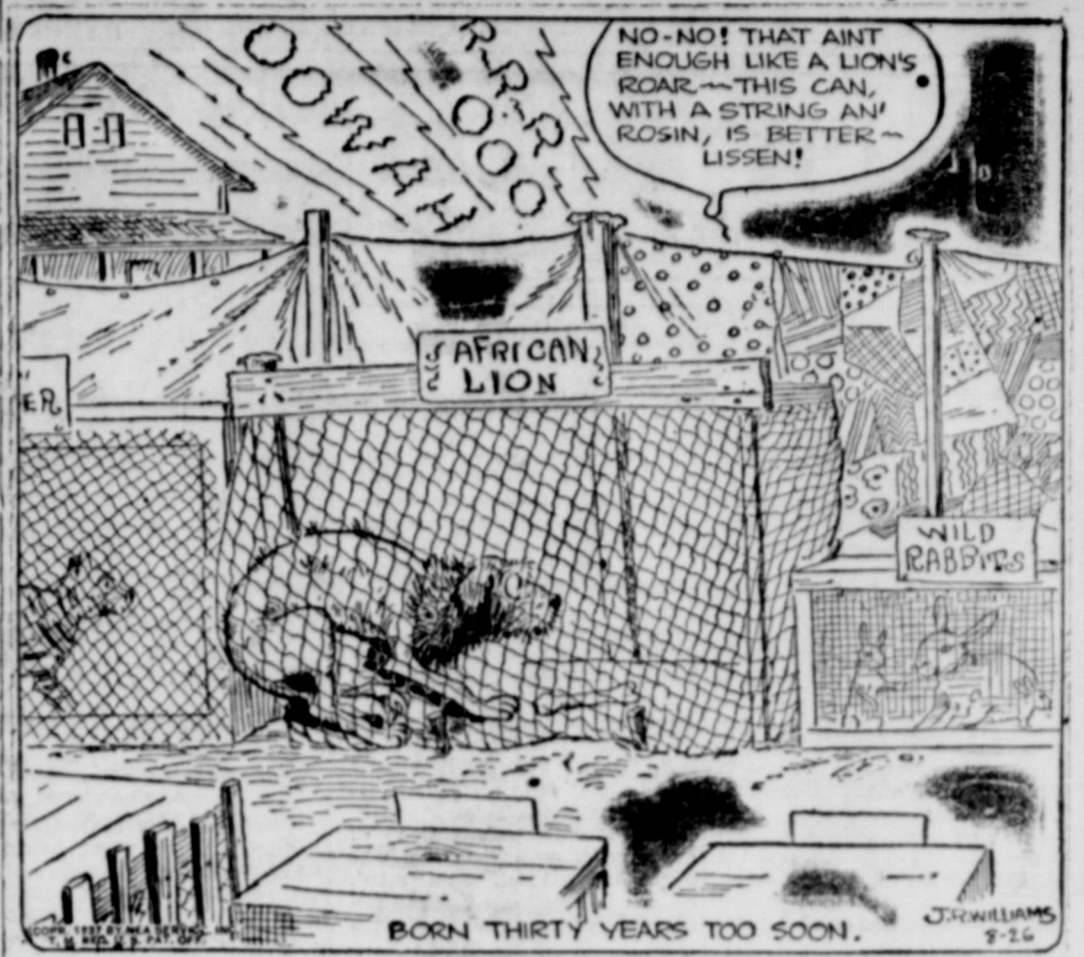

"What," Melita wanted to know, "do you suppose it would cost us to use the boat?"

"I haven't the slightest idea. But I remember reading that Mr. Morgan said anybody who had to ask that question shouldn't own one." Briefly Kay looked at the letter again. "Dear old Uncle Ben! It was nice of him to think of me—but what I really needed was two yachts."

"Anyhow," cried Priscilla, jumping up, "let's have a look at the thing. Maybe we could find a nice sailor who'd run it for us—just for the trip!"

Blue Laws of 90's Found In New Jersey

By United Press
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Forgotten ordinances which WPA workers have unearthed would prohibit persons from leaning against boardwalk guard rails to watch crowds and sun-bathers.

Another law, passed in 1905, bans "loitering, sitting, lounging or idly standing" on streets, boardwalk or in pavilions and parks.

An old 1856 ordinance orders the killing of all Spitz dogs or even dogs with Spitz blood in their ancestry, found roaming the streets.

Dancing on Sundays in the pier and hotel ballrooms, night clubs, and cafes, back in the gay '90's, also was forbidden. And woe betide those that advertised on any but their own business property.

Commercial Shrimp Nets Are Outlawed

By United Press
ARANSAS PASS, TEXAS—State fish and oyster commission officials have outlawed commercial shrimp nets from the waters of Red Fish bay until Sept. 1.

First commercial catches in more than a month were made recently, and the crustaceans were so small that the commission ruled the nets out of the water to permit them to obtain a larger size.

Something different in the mode of entertainment is on the calendar for Friday evening when the personnel of Child study club No. 2, presents "Corn Fed Babies" in a garden scene at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Houghton, Cherry Street.

That Some Thing Different!
Some ideas are good—some are terrible and some are different . . . and this one was clever when Charlie Ruggles, the star report in "Exclusive" feature picture to be shown at the Arcadia theatre Sunday, proves there are cool spots to be found in the summer when he parks himself inside a Frigidaire.

Frigidaire has long been noted for their outstanding value and qualities but this was the first time one had been used in this manner. Don't miss seeing the picture chosen by the local manager, H. E. Garner for Sunday, August 29th.

Penney's Free Show For Kids Draws Out A Large Attendance
Kids, hundreds and hundreds of kids, attended the free picture show at the Arcadia theatre this morning as the guests of D. M. Cooper, local manager of the J. C. Penney store.
The show started at 10 o'clock, but before the opening of the door, one false start was made by the kids, who gathered the doors of the theatre and had to be sent back to the Penney store.
After their eagerness and enthusiasm had been partly controlled, they searched more or less in double line behind the three shiny new trucks of the T-Up company, up Main street to the theatre.
The picture shown for their amusement and entertainment was "Penrod and Sam," a feature picture based upon Booth Tarkington's famous novel of the same name.
After the children were admitted to the theatre it was announced that the attendance at the show was approximately 1,000, the largest of Penney's back-to-school shows in several years.

lights. All of which is likely true. Personally, we like the afternoon games, but think that the lights would make a big difference. As one man said today, — H. H. Vaughn, if you insist on being technical about it — "A football field without lights now is about as out of date as a Model T and you almost have to have the lights to get the fans out to spend their money on the games."

the game on Thursday night, Sept. 16, instead of Friday night, a number of surrounding towns would likely have a large number of fans out for the Straw game to see what Ranger has this year, if anything. Many would come out who could not leave their work for an afternoon game, and it was estimated that the gate would be around $500 more for the night game than an afternoon game, which would pay for about half the cost of installing the new lights.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

ECONOMY is often a matter of the second time. Particularly today with a roast of beef. It must make several appearances before its high price is justified. And finally it must end in the soup. The following recipes will show you how to subdue beef which has jumped over the family food budget.

Beef Roll Jardiniere
(4 to 6 servings)
Meat mixture: Four cups cooked beef, 1 cup tomatoes, 1-4 cup green pepper, 1-2 onion, 1 stalk celery, 1-2 cup stock.
Grind meat, chop pepper very fine and mince the onion and cut celery fine. Cook all three in water until tender and drain. Heat tomatoes, add stock and to this add cooked pepper, celery and onion and meat.
Crust: Two cups of flour, 4 tablespoons lard, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 egg and milk enough to make a dough.
Sift dry ingredients. Using 2 silver knives cut the lard into the flour mixture, add milk to make a soft dough and beaten egg. Roll dough into an oblong shaped strip and spread with meat mixture and roll up. Cut in portions before baking. Bake 15 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees F.). Serve with following sauce.

Tickets For Benefit Game Are Still Good
Those who have purchased tickets for the country club benefit game, scheduled for Wednesday night, were today advised to keep them, as they will be good when the game is played.
Today it was undecided when the game would be scheduled, but tentative plans called for it to be played either Friday night of the coming week or on the morning of Labor Day.

The early bird gets the worm . . . if he knows where to look!

Watch a robin on the lawn some sunshiny morning. A few hops, then a pause. A few more hops, and he listens again. Then, triumphant, he pulls out a fat, wriggling worm.

A silly bird, you would say, if he merely pecked here and there, hoping to strike it lucky.

Reading the advertisements is for you what cocking his head is for the robin. Advertisers tell you just where are the juiciest buys.

Cock your eye on the advertisements in this newspaper. They may save pecking on barren ground.
