Sale By Drink and Pari-Mutuels Out In Opinion of Woodul

Woodul said he was not sufficiently informed about the result of Senate investigations of tax plans to venture an opinion on what will be accomplished at the tax session to start Sept. 27.

He said he would hold that amendments of the liquor regulations to permit sales by the drink and return of pari mutuels would be inadmissible at a tax session, even with incidental taxation.

Westbrook Corrects Former Statement On Cotton Classing

Westbrook will report to the Senate agriculture committee on the conclusion of his survey.

"I want to correct a misstatement made on my last visit here," he said. "The resolution which authorized this probe did not go into the matter of refunding the money if there is found to be a loss as a result of the wrong classing of cotton."

FARM CONTROL PROGRAMS BEING MAPPED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace today prepared with the help of state farm leaders, details of the soil conservation program slashing the acreage of major farm products.

Features of the program are: 1—Reduction of major commodities from 15,000,000 to 25,000,000 acres below the 1937 figure.

2—Revision of the benefit payment program through establishing a single, instead of the present dual system.

3—Tightening federal control over production after this year's bumper crop, and encouraging more soil conservation and building practices.

Under the new program an estimated 275,000,000 to 285,000,000 acres of soil depleting crops would be harvested during 1938 under the new acreage goal as against 300,000,000 in 1937.

AAA officials said that wheat was not included in the specific acreage goal, which was fixed for cotton, corn, peanuts, potatoes, rice and tobacco, because the farmers did not ask for it.

Carbon Farmer to Plant Registered Brand of Sorghum

Howard Gilbert of Carbon is planning to plant registered grain sorghum seed next year and bag the heads to keep the seed pure for planting.

Gilbert planted registered seed this year but the supply of seed was obtained too late to justify bagging the heads for purity.

County Agent Elmo V. Cook is encouraging a few farmers who have clean land to secure several ounces of registered milo, begari, kafir, sunae and fetaria seed with a view of producing a supply of pure seed for sale to Eastland county farmers.

Miss Hill and Captain Dyer were married at Flint Hill, Va.

Killingsworth, Cox Eliminates Elks In Shaughnessy Series

Killingsworth Cox defeated the Elks 5 to 1 in a nine-inning softball game at Municipal Field Wednesday night to remain in the Shaughnessy Playoff, while the defeat eliminated the Elks from further participation.

The Elks scored their lone run in the first half of the first inning and Killingsworth Cox tied the score in their half of the first.

In the last of the fourth two walks two costly errors by Lingle at shortstop and Arterburn at second started the Killingsworth Cox rally, which accounted for the four runs added by the winners. Downtain, who started in the box for the Elks was relieved by Gray in the fourth and Killingsworth Cox was held scoreless in the last five frames.

Killingsworth Cox, a winner of the game, meets Lone Star in another crucial game, the date for which has not been set. Since both Killingsworth Cox and Lone Star have lost one game a defeat for either team will automatically eliminate it from the playoff.

DELEGATION DUE TONIGHT AT EASTLAND

Fort Worth, Cisco Plan Program at Softball Park This Evening.

Exhibits were in place Thursday at the former Pickering Lumber Yard Company in Eastland as the eleventh annual Eastland County Fair opened under auspicious conditions for a three-day run.

Fair officials, General Chairman Ed T. Cox, Sr., and others, were elated at prospects for a high attendance throughout the exhibition of the county's best in agriculture and livestock.

Eastland had assumed a holiday air with the decoration of business houses with festival garb by the fire department. "Welcome Visitors" greeted many from over the county as they arrived for inspection of exhibits and entertainment features to be held at the Fire Department softball field.

Although the fair is of county-wide aspect, today had been designated "Fort Worth and Cisco Day" in recognition of large delegations and programs from these cities for tonight.

H. J. Tanner, secretary of the chamber of commerce, advised a motorcade from Fort Worth will bring many businessmen and several entertainers to the event.

A hand concert by Robert L. Maddox and his Cisco band will be the headline attraction of Cisco. The concert is scheduled at 7:30 tonight at the Fire Department softball field.

T. E. Richardson, chairman of the livestock division of the fair, stated 23 registered Jerseys had already been entered in the event and others were expected throughout the fair.

The thoroughbred stock was from over all parts of the county, he stated. Livestock exhibits, too, are at the lumber yard. Perhaps there has never been so centralized arrangement as this year's for the fair.

Richardson reminded that judging of livestock will begin promptly at 9 a. m. Friday. John Underwood of Denton, county commissioner and past president of the Denton County Jersey Cattle club, will be the judge.

Brown County Agent C. W. Lehberg is to judge agricultural exhibits also Friday morning. T. G. Caudle, Okra vocational agricultural teacher, was to judge the 4-H club exhibits Thursday afternoon.

All 12 clubs in the county were represented by the boys' 4-H club exhibit. While no accurate check could be made immediately, indications pointed out that women's department exhibits this year were heavier than last year.

Friday will offer a variety of entertainment. "A square dance, old fiddlers' contest, band concert by the Eastland high school organization, rodeo and a football game are scheduled for the day.

No Recess in Public School of Experience

Because all the examples and object lessons were punked right into his own lap in his own home—if he had one—the American citizen learned more about economic theories, laws of supply and demand, taxes and business cycles during the depression than he ever knew before.

As this knowledge was acquired, it was applied to practical problems. And it helped tide the nation through dangerous periods when the balance of our entire system was endangered by suffering and discontent.

But with the return of what purports to be normalcy, people are lazying back to the attitude that they don't have to worry about the intricacies of economics or government any more, and that from now until the prosperity curve goes over the top again, anything that happens must be all for the best.

The only error in that philosophy is that it conflicts with the facts—facts that show debts, taxes, food, clothing, and shelter costs, and government expenses amounting into a miraculous total.

In its last, long, weary session, Congress managed to make appropriations totaling nearly nine and one-half billion dollars. The amount for the public debt interest alone showed an increase of $25,000,000, and the public debt proper reached approximately $37,000,000,000.

These gigantic financial involvements are too easily waved aside by politicians with references to the great price the nation has to pay for the salvation of the happiness and prosperity of 130,000,000 people.

But the truth is that every citizen is paying directly or indirectly for this salvation, and if a man can't get it all paid off in a life time, his children will have to finish the job.

The exasperating ease with which public money is spent may be traced not only in national government, but through state, county and city administrations as well. The habit is not necessarily confined to one party or one period. It just seems to turn up when the man who has to take it on the chin—and on the pocketbook—lets his guard drop.

The whole moral is that the public should maintain its defense by making its elected representatives public servants in fact as well as in Fourth of July oratorical fantasies.

When Congress appropriates more than $400,000,000 for military purposes and more than $500,000,000 for navy purposes, the voter should know why. Probe into the reasons behind state tax increases; ferret out the cause for the higher county levy or the boost in street car rates, or whether it may be that is costing more. If you aren't satisfied with the answers, smoke out the truth. And if your public servant won't co-operate, elect one who will.

Here are bigger problems than ever, tumbling right out of every weekly pay envelope. And the way to face them is still being taught in that big, free school of practical experience.

"OUT OUR WAY" By Williams

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER

Written Exclusively for This Paper and NEA Service, Inc.

THE year 1940 will find the Republican and Democratic parties contending for political control as usual, although one or both parties may suffer from desertions. There is little possibility of a third party which would weld masses of farmers and masses of industrial workers into a political unit. Such a combination, I believe, is impossible at this time.

We have three powerful farmers' organizations in this country, and while they don't often clash with each other, I don't think organizers would find them politically malleable.

The oldest of the three is the National Grange, headed by Louis J. Taber, a progressive Republican from Ohio, who represents the large body of conservative farm thought on politics.

Mr. Edward O'Neal, an Alabama Democrat, is the head of the Farm Bureau, which has been consistently pro-Roosevelt and pro-New Deal in its political sympathies.

NEW YORK—Eager to strengthen the National League in what should be his third best city, President Ford Frick and John Heydler are urging the Brooklyn owners to name Frank O'Doul manager. . . . Since leaving the senior circuit, O'Doul has enjoyed considerable success in San Francisco, where he developed Joe DiMaggio and Joe Mauer. . . . President Emeritus Heydler saw Lefty in action on the Pacific coast and liked him. . . . Trying to make an outfielder of Buddy Hassett and then removing him from a game with the Cubs after the first baseman had fumbled a bunt that led to the loss of the contest made Burleigh Grimes the target for more criticism in Pittsburgh. . . . According to Roy Johnson, the Cubs' first base coach, Grimes yelled something from the bench to Hassett about "getting two hands on the ball." . . . Whereupon, the Chicago coach said, Hassett made a vitriolic retort with the added invitation to his manager to "come out and do the job yourself if you think you can do it better." . . . It was this that brought Grimes storming out on the field to take Hassett out of the game. . . . En route to the dugout, Buddy paused long enough to tell Grimes that "you have never liked me, and I'll be here when you're gone."

RUDY YORK, current home-run hero of the majors, has only one weakness as a catcher, according to Joe McCarthy of the Yankees. . . . York is so huge that he has difficulty catching low pitches. . . . There is hope for York, however, for if other over-sized backstops had such a fault they corrected it, Larry McLean, Chief Meyers, Pancho Snyder, and Ernie Lombardi among them. . . . Bill Dickey isn't exactly a Singer's midget in height. . . . It isn't a case of York's power at the plate having to cover a multitude of sins, for outside of being somewhat less capable than was Mickey Cochrane at plucking the pellet out of the dirt, Detroit's Indian is a good enough receiver with a strong and accurate arm. . . . Chicago baseball writers lacked faith in the Cubs even before the men of Wrigley Field dispensed what was a comfortable lead. . . . Besides putting a crimp in the Dodgers' batting punch, Heinie Manush's leg injury delayed his entrance into the 2500-hit circle. . . . The veteran of both majors requires eight more to reach the mark.

FANCHON and Marco are looking Joe DiMaggio outside of baseball. . . . The Yankee luminary is to tour with his two brothers—Vince of the Bees and bespectacled young Dominic of the San Francisco Seals—this fall and winter. . . . Among other things, Joe will sing. . . . He warbles very well in the picture recently completed and for which he was paid $2500. . . . Meanwhile, Yankee officials are more concerned about the condition of their principal card than the severe hitting slump he suffered on the club's western trip. . . . Frankly, the boy at times appeared to be not in the best of shape. . . . Christy Walsh, pappy of ghost writers, has severed connections with all except his football coaches. . . . And Walsh dropped one of them, Elmer Layden of Notre Dame, "because he was too hard to handle and wouldn't go along." . . . Bob Zuppke of Illinois replaces Layden. . . . Walsh is to devote most of his time to radio and picture shorts. . . . The widely traveled Mr. and Mrs. Gene Sarazen start a pleasure trip around the world, Sept. 8, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Al Lawson. . . . Being a star golf professional certainly is a tough life.

OUT OF THE NIGHT

CHAPTER I

THE soap slid over the edge of the tub and across the bathroom floor, three feet beyond the reach of the tub's lovely occupant. "Damn!" said Cilly. (Priscilla, to you, Miss Priscilla Pierce, of the late Bensonhurst Pierces.) She slithered down to the edge of the tub and reached again. With two strong fingers, she grasped the soap, only to have it slide another yard toward the door.

"Damn!" she said again. Then to herself: "If I have to get out of this tub, I'm out for good." Somewhere in the night a church clock struck. Cilly listened, counting the strokes. "Twelve o'clock," she murmured. "I'm going to bed."

She remembered that she had a full morning's work ahead of her the next day, if she was to finish that Harvey brief by noon. And she was never her best on Monday morning. Tomorrow would be no exception.

She jumped out of the tub, rescued the slippery soap and returned it to its cubicle above the tub. Then with a huge Turkish towel she rubbed her tall slim body until it glowed.

"If Amy Kerr had one iota of sense," she was thinking all the while, "she wouldn't have suggested another rubber of bridge at 11 o'clock. Nor would she be up on the roof now airing her blue dress. Airing her dress, my grandmother. She's never been so busy before. What made her want to go up on the roof at 12 o'clock?"

Cilly grabbed her pajamas from the hook on the bathroom door and jumped into them unceremoniously. Amy might at least have realized that it was nerve-wracking to have the door unlocked when one was taking a bath. But tonight Amy was certainly inconsiderate.

"I won't be a minute, Cilly. . . I'm just going up on the roof to air this blue dress so that I can wear it tomorrow. It smells like a gasoline station now. . . Leave the door open, that's a dear."

WELL, it certainly was a long minute. More like 20.

Cilly went into the bedroom they shared together and sat down at the filled dressing table. This was the moment of the daily hair-washing—100 strokes. It wasn't accident that Cilly's dull auburn hair shone so richly.

Illustration by Ed Gunder

It wasn't pleasant up on the roof at midnight. . . . Tonight it was cloudy, and there was no moon. It would be terrifying all alone up there!

Seven, eight, nine, twenty. . . a girl to marry him. She could well afford to be patient.

Seven, eight, nine, sixty. . . . Or could she?

FOR the first time since she had known Jim, she felt a little twinge of uncertainty. These past few months it had been just Jim and she—just the two of them together. Dmcing at the French Casino, swimming at Jones Beach, looking the loop at Coney Island, cooking hot dogs over a campfire at Hilsdale Park. Holding hands at the Paramount. Stealing a kiss downstairs in the vestibule. . . . Just two people in all New York. Cilly Pierce and Jim Kerrigan.

Wait for him! Hadn't she waited 27 years for someone exactly like Jim Kerrigan? If she waited another thousand years, would she ever find anyone else so utterly dear, so thoughtful, so tender?

Seven, eight, nine, forty. . . . He'd never said exactly just what held him back, but Cilly understood. It was his new job. He had only been in New York a little over six months; he had to make good before he could ask at any rate. You'd have thought they'd known each other all their lives. The way Amy's eyes lighted up when she introduced them. . . . the whole "you-been-all-my-life" look that Jim gave Amy. . . .

Seven, eight, nine, eighty. . . . It was just too bad she couldn't have gone for Amy's date in the same spirit. Harry Hutchins. A loud-mouthed, conceited fool. The sort who can always tell the other fellow how to play bridge. A wise guy.

Cilly marveled that a girl like Amy could have stood his company for one evening. Amy was highly attractive—a girl with charm and poise and good breeding. Surely she could see through the bluff that was Harry Hutchins. But apparently she didn't. To all appearances, she was completely gone on him. Why, if two days passed without her hearing from him, she'd call him at his hotel. It made Cilly mad.

Once she remarked about it to Amy, not that she had any right to comment. But Amy was such a good-hearted soul; she'd never realize when someone was giving her a raw deal.

"Let him chase you," Cilly had said. "There's more test to a man when you keep him guessing."

But Amy had just shrugged. "Don't worry about me, Cilly," she replied. "You don't understand this affair between Harry and me."

NO, Cilly didn't understand it. But she understood Harry Hutchins. Only to well. He was the answer to every maiden's prayer—at least he thought so. And poor Amy was just another girl who had fallen prey to his deadly charm.

Cilly knew that Harry had other interests. In greener fields. It was no secret that Harry Hutchins was making a heavy play for Gloria Harmon, whose father had left her a string of chain stores. The Brooklyn rotogravure section printed photographs of them together—at the races, at the smartest supper clubs in Manhattan, at the Harmon estate on Long Island. Even tonight, he had boasted of spending the previous week-end "down at Harmony Hall."

But all this went over poor Amy's head. Either she had not a bit of jealousy in her makeup, or she had a forlorn hope that in time she could win her precious Harry back.

Seven, eight, nine, one hundred. . . .

Cilly put the brush down. Perhaps that was it. Perhaps Amy had been so especially sweet to Jim this evening just to make Harry jealous. Cilly couldn't blame her for that.

However, that didn't explain this going up on the roof. And spending half an hour up there.

It wasn't pleasant up on the roof at midnight, not unless the moon rode high in a cloudless sky. Tonight it was cloudy, and there was no moon. It would be terrifying all alone up there!

Yesterday, alone in her apartment after midnight, Cilly becomes increasingly alarmed when Amy fails to return from the rooftop. She realizes it would be terrifying up there in the darkness!

CHAPTER II

CILLY'D been up there once herself—to get a coat she had hanging out all day to air.

You ran up the five flights of stairs—that was all right, for there were lights on every landing. But from there on it was No-Man's-Land. You went up the other half-flight to the roof, and pushed the heavy iron door out. As you stepped out onto the roof, that door swung shut behind you with a bang—a loud, terrifying bang against the lonely silence on the roof.

Cilly was a courageous soul, but she had shuddered that first black moment after the door slammed behind her. There was nothing ahead but dark emptiness. The clothesline was just a few steps beyond the doorway, but in the darkness it seemed a mile away.

You picked your steps carefully, expecting any moment to trip over the raised platform under the lines; you held your hand out in front so that you wouldn't walk blindly into radio aerials. At every step you stumbled over a clothespin or a piece of rope.

There were the tall stacks, too: two from the furnace, and one from the incinerator which belched fire and brimstone into the black air above. At every step, you wondered just who or what lurked behind the next step. Not anything human, of course. You knew that.

If you met anyone on the roof, it would be poor old Mr. Johnson, the superintendent, dragged from his bed to check up on someone's aerial. And Mr. Johnson was a harmless soul.

No, Amy wasn't the sort to linger in the terrifying blackness of the roof at midnight—not if she were alone.

Then Amy wasn't alone. It was all peppycock about wanting to air her blue dress. Amy was going up on the roof to meet someone.

Who?

Harry Hutchins had left 10 minutes earlier than Jim. Amy could have walked down to the vestibule if she wanted to be alone with him. And given Jim a few minutes to say goodnight to her, Cilly.

But Amy had waved Harry out with a nonchalant air, and she had waited around with Jim and Cilly. She didn't even excuse herself and pretend that she was going to bed. She just waited around until Jim that dress or coat down from the line with small regard for flying clothespins; and you fairly flew back to the big heavy door, lest Mr. Johnson come up and lock it for the night, and leave you out in that intense blackness until morning.

THIRTY seconds it took, at the most, to rush over to that clothesline and back. You didn't linger. Cilly hadn't lingered, and Cilly was as brave as the average. Even a little more brave than Amy. Amy would not come home alone evenings when Cilly had to work late. She didn't like to be alone in the apartment. She said so.

So Cilly was annoyed at Amy. Annoyed and not a little hurt. They had gotten along so happily together. Up until tonight, Amy had never shown any trace of selfishness or pettiness. Cilly had really loved her. Was Amy at last showing her true colors?

CILLY walked wearily over to the bed and removed the spread. There was no sense sitting up all night to worry about it. If Jim really cared for her, he'd be back. And if he didn't, well, it was certainly much better to find him out before she married him. Much better. She wasn't a foolish schoolgirl. She could face a disappointment sensibly. Quite sensibly. Was ever a woman in love sensible, she wondered.

She brushed aside a tear savagely, and jumped into her twin bed.

Twelve-twenty, the tiny clock on the vanity said.

Let Amy stay up there all night if she wanted to. Let Amy take Jim Kerrigan if she wanted to.

. . . Cilly was going to sleep. But of course she didn't. As soon as her head touched the pillow, she knew that she wouldn't get to sleep for hours. When you're unhappy, sleep doesn't come immediately to slip you quietly into oblivion. You have to smother out your thoughts first. You have to banish ugly suspicions, and bitterness, and jealousy.

Cilly tried to do that. She honestly did try to realize that Amy was a dear, that she was honest and fair and altogether too kind-hearted to hurt anyone. Besides, Cilly told herself sternly: "You're a pretty poor sort to build up such a case against Jim the very first time another girl looks at him. What a jealous, nagging wife you'll be!"

Then, quite unexpectedly, she realized what had happened. She realized how utterly silly she had been. It was all so very simple. The big black door had slammed shut while Amy was hanging up her dress. Sunday was Mr. Johnson's day off, but he always returned about midnight and made the regular rounds of the house. He had locked Amy out!

All this time that she had been painting a devil in her imagination, Amy had been up on that terrifying roof alone—locked out!

CILLY jumped out of bed, slipped on her shoes without her stockings, and took her coat out of the closet. She'd go right up and unlatch the door. Poor Amy. . . .

Cilly stopped, clutching the coat in her hands. Her heart turned to ice in her breast. For the still night air was suddenly shattered by a wild, terrifying cry—the deathly, agonized cry of a human being.

Shrill and high-pitched, it pierced the midnight quiet for an eternal second, then died down to a rasping, choking murmur. A moment of silence followed—a silence so intense that it could be felt in every nerve.

Then there was a dull thud outside Cilly's bedroom window—a heavy, swift thud, as if something had fallen a long way. . . .

In an instant, Cilly was at the window, and as she looked out, she forgot the six-foot drop to the ground, she forgot that she was clad only in pajamas and shoes. She jumped quickly; she knelt beside that crushed, broken figure that had come hurtling from the roof.

"Amy!" she cried. "Amy!"

But Amy Kerr was beyond all hearing.

Vaguely, Cilly was conscious of windows being raised along the street, of heads craning out, inquiring the trouble. She looked down at this twisted, broken body that had only a few minutes ago been a lovely, lively girl. Amy still clutched the blue dress in one hand. The other hand, clenched in the terror of death, slowly relaxed; a slip of newspaper fluttered to the ground. Cilly picked it up, unthinking, and tucked it into her pajama pocket.

Traveling Movie Studio To Give 75 Tests in Texas

By John Corwin Smith. Inviting are the famous gridded portals of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City, Calif., a part of Los Angeles and its Hollywood. Forbidding, too, are these gates. Uniformed guards, as sternly disciplined as any crack army detachment, keep these portals closed to all who do not belong. It has to be that way. Pictures must be made and not everybody who wants to make pictures can be admitted. The place would be a mob scene.

Yet these doors will swing open to at least four Southwesterners, mainly Texans, who positively will be sent to Culver City at the conclusion of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Interstate Circuit's search for screen actors next October.

From the studios will come C. Edward Carrier, long-established white and blue. The white glasses were attractive and fitting with designs of battle ships in red and blue.

The dinner plate of fried chicken had a delicious cocktail and dessert course. Individual cakes for the last course were topped with wee American flags and inscribed with the names of the dinner guests.

The after-dinner hour was spent at Ryan's night spot in Breckenridge and highly enjoyed by the guest of honor and Misses Aline Beuwer, Kathryn Smith, and hostess Miss Margaret Smith and Messrs. Sammy Matthews of Cisco, Tommy Hunnans, of Eastland.

Executive Board Meeting Postponed: Due to the Ranger-Strawn football game to be played in Ranger Friday afternoon the president of Young School Parent-Teacher association calls attention to the postponement of the executive board meeting announced earlier in the week for Friday afternoon. The meeting will be held on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 21, at 2:30 o'clock, prior to the opening meeting of the P. T. A.

Home: Mr. and Mrs. D. Joseph and children, Billy Jean, Azette and Fred, returned to Ranger last night. The Josephs' return from New York was by way of the southern route, which proved completely delightful. A night's visit was spent with the John Hassens' at Sulphur, Okla. Mrs. Hassens and infant daughter, Nancy, came on to Ranger with them for a visit of several days.

After an absence of four years Mrs. Joseph and children are happy to be back home. The return to Ranger was for the purpose of early schooling for the children, who have mastered their native tongue, together with French, quite fluently.

Next week will find them in the Ranger schools and Mrs. Joseph resuming her activities in the many branches of P. T. A. work and other club features.

COMINGS and GOINGS: Mrs. Jack Sloan and Mrs. Ted Sloan, of Abilene spent Wednesday in Ranger as guests of their sister-in-law, Mrs. Mickey Sloan and husband.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Powell and sons, Tommy and Dickie are home, Gulf Camp, after a two-weeks motor trip to Fort Worth, Dallas and places in West Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Kirkpatrick left yesterday for a vacation visit to Colorado.

Biting Dogs Are a Bane to Milkmen

AMARILLO, Texas.—Dogs with quarrelsome dispositions are the bane of the milkman's life, according to J. C. Weaver, local milk dispenser. They range in size from a puddle that bit Weaver on the ankle to a full grown collie who charged the milkman without warning and had to be beaten off with a bottle. "About the biggest scare I ever had," said Weaver, "was the time a man mistook me for a milk thief and came out in his gowt-tails with a shotgun all cocked and ready for business. "Another time, I stepped on a cat's tail and the cat started climbing up my pants leg. We both got excited."
