Growling Dictators Are Afraid to Bite

The look of things in Europe is more warlike and threatening, these days, than at any time since the World War. Yet a betting man might very well feel inclined to gamble that there won't really be another world war, after all. The situation probably looks darker than it really is.

The most encouraging factor is that underneath their bluster and big talk, the statesmen of Europe are scared to death.

For one thing, the memory of 1914 is too close. The jar that sent the world sliding into war in that year was actually much less severe than some of the shocks Europe has had lately; but while today's statesmen may play with the word, "War," he knows from actual experience what the word really means—something which his predecessors of 23 years ago did not know. It makes a world of difference.

The Europe of 1914 had not seen a large-scale war for more than 40 years. There had been time for a romantic and unreal idea about war to be built up. The horrible calamity that war brings had grown hazy and indistinct in men's minds. Europe slid into war easily because no one really knew just what war was going to mean.

It's different now. The dictators may fume and bluster and strut, their massed troops may be cheered to the echo by hysterical throngs—but down underneath all of them know precisely what is involved. Not while the World War generation are still alive will any European nation go to war as blithely and irresponsibly as the nations went in 1914.

There is another thing—the spectator of revolt, which has a way of materializing out of the smoke and darkness of a long war. No dictator wants that specter raised; no dictator can forget that war is likely to raise it. Kings and emperors lost their crowns because of the World War; would dictators be apt to fare any better in another world war? They would not—and they know it.

And if that thought holds back the dictatorships, it also hounds back the democracies. For democracy, like monarchy, showed a tendency to collapse during and after the last war. It might survive another such strain and it might not. No democracy is likely to take the risk if it can possibly avoid it.

On the surface, these fears do not seem to have much effect. The Japanese are involved in war in China, and the Germans, Russians, and Italians are playing with fire in Spain. The Mediterranean "anti-piracy" naval program offers innumerable chances for war-making accidents and collisions. Warlike talk was never more common.

Three cooks were among the last group of Russians executed. It seems they kept too many shooting irons in the fire.

Coming Back to Face Klan Issue

It doesn't look above as though Associate Justice Hugo Black of the U. S. Supreme Court is having that good time he was determined to seek when the Ku Klux Klan storm broke about him in London. Accompanied by Mrs. Black he is grim and apparently unmoved by the British capital, whence, it is reported, he fled to board ship secretly for return to America.

Goodbye Broadway, Hello France

Sailing for France in 1917-18 wasn't anything like this. Transports generally stole away from the dock under cover of night, lights doused and everyone below decks. So it's no wonder 1933 American Legionnaires, bound for a visit to the battlefields in France, line the rails and thoroughly enjoy the excitement as the Queen Mary gets under way at New York.

Brownwood Cattle Sold to A. & M.

BROWNWOOD, Texas—Twenty-five registered Jerseys from Brown county have been placed in the main dairy herd at Texas A. & M. College. The cattle were sold to the college by Joe Shelton from his dairy herd near Brownwood. The registered Jerseys, ranging from two to nine years old, were selected from the herd by Charles Sheppardson and L. A. Darnell of the A. & M. College dairy department. The dairy experts said they bought the Brown county cattle after inspecting herds in all sections of the State. Sale of the 25 head did not deplete Shelton's herd. He still has 58 milking cows in the herd. Shelton also recently sold three registered Jersey bulls to the Texas Prison System. The animals will be used as herd bulls on the prison farm at Huntsville.

IT'S IN THE News!

There are two classes of news in these columns every day:

- (1) Interesting stories about events all over the world; and (2) The advertisements. Yes, the advertisements are news, and in many ways the most important of all, because they affect you more directly and personally than any other.

A new and better method of refrigeration is devised — and you learn about it through advertisements. Improvements are added to automobiles which make them safer than ever — again advertisements carry the story. Styles change in clothing — and advertisements rush the news to your doorstep. A manufacturer finds a way to lower the price on his products — he advertises to tell you about the savings.

You'll find that it pays to follow this news every day. Reading the advertisements is the sure way to keep abreast of the world... to learn of new comforts and conveniences... to get full money's worth for every dollar you spend.

OUT OF THE NIGHT

CAST OF CHARACTERS
PRISCILLA PIERCE—heroine, young woman detective.
AMY KERR—Harry's roommate and murderer's victim.
HARRY HUTCHINS—Amy's
strange visitor.
SERGEANT DOLAN—officer assigned to solve the murder of Amy Kerr.

Yesterday Harvey Ames, Amy's employer, is shockingly distressed at the news of Amy's death. His actions arouse Cilly's suspicions.

CHAPTER XI
MR. CROWELL was unusually solicitous when Cilly explained the tragic affair to him.

"Don't worry about the office, Miss Pierce," he ordered, gently.
"I'm sorry about the Harvey case, because I particularly wanted you to handle it. But this is a terrible situation. Don't try to come in for the balance of the week. And if you feel in need of any legal backing, remember that we'll stand behind you. Don't let the police frighten you."

Leaving his office, Cilly felt prouder than she had in the past 12 hours. With the backing of a law firm as capable and as respected as Crowell and Burns, she lost some of that first dread she had of the circumstantial evidence which was closing in around Jim "Telephone, Miss Pierce," the operator called, as Cilly passed the switchboard.

"Who is it, Betty?"

"Mr. Hutchins."

"All right. Put him on."

In her own office, she took up the phone. Harry's voice, loud and strident, came over the wire.
"I've been trying to get you out of some, Priscilla," he said. "I'm not about broken up by the news, and I help in any way—with the lateral, perhaps?"

"Thank you, Harry," Cilly responded quietly. "There's really nothing more to be done. Federal arrests will be tomorrow at 2 o'clock at the Greenwood Funeral home in L. I. I'll be there."

"I'll be there, of course. In the meantime, there are some things I'd like to talk over with you.
Will you have dinner with me tonight at 7 o'clock?"

"I'd be glad to go," she replied.
"I'll be there at 7 o'clock sharp." She put the receiver down and looked at her watch.

"I'll be home only a few minutes," she thought. "When Harry Hutchins comes, I'll be out of the house, and he'll be satisfied." She had been so sure. But she wasn't. She was wrong. A gas colorful ring of flowers.

"I just stopped to see about a wreath," he said by way of explanation, "and I thought I might just as well bring these along to you. They'll cheer the place up a bit."

Cilly thanked him. She appreciated his thoughtfulness, nevertheless she resented his flowers. No matter how fine Harry Hutchins tried to be, she thought, she would not like him.

"Had a nice visit from the police this afternoon," Harry offered.
He settled himself in a comfortable chair and took out a cigaret.

Watching him, Cilly was forced to admire him, in spite of herself.
He was undeniably handsome, his features were even and perfect, as if they had been molded to some special order. His face lacked the rugged charm, the wrinkled friendliness of Jim's, but it was attractive, nevertheless.

With exaggerated nonchalance he lit the cigaret and blew out the match.

"You know that fellow Dolan's all wet," he said. A smile of faintly amused boredom hovered on his lips. "I told him so, too."

"Did you really?"

"He did not catch the irony in Cilly's words. 'I certainly did,' he admitted, self-approvingly. 'Turning an affair like this into a deep, baffling mystery so they can get a few weeks' newspaper publicity while they're trying to solve it. . . it's ridiculous.'"

"Doesn't it seem rather mysterious to you why anyone should want to murder Amy?"

Harry waved his cigaret deprecatingly.

"Amy wasn't murdered. It was an obvious suicide. Amy was the perfect type—melancholy, dependent."

"That's absurd!" Cilly flared.
"Amy Kerr was as happy and intelligent a girl as I ever knew!"

Harry shrugged. "That's the impression she gave you, no doubt.
But a man can always get to know a girl better than even her closest friend. Amy wasn't happy. I know. Some love affair, perhaps.
She often told me about some man."

"Amy wasn't fool enough to kill herself over any man!" Cilly corrected him with decision.

"I'm sorry, Priscilla. Heaven knows I don't mean to speak lightly of Amy Kerr. She was too fine a girl. . . too splendid."

His voice trailed off, and he smiled with worldly tolerance before he spoke again. "Of course, you know, there was nothing serious between us. . . absolutely nothing."
(To Be Continued)

"I understood your relationship perfectly," Cilly said. "Of course Amy was not serious. She had other interests. . . a great many other interests."

Harry leaned forward in his chair.

"That's exactly what I've been trying to say, Priscilla. There was someone else. Someone who hurt her a great deal."

CILLY did not want to believe him. She did not want to pay attention to any remarks from Harry Hutchins. Nevertheless, there had been something in Amy's past. Something serious and threatening. She couldn't deny that. Perhaps Amy had confided in Harry Hutchins to a certain extent. . .

"I think it would be a good idea," he was saying, "if you went over her personal things—her letters, or keepsakes, for example.
Get rid of anything—well, anything out of the past. You know how the police pounce upon such things, and what the newspapers do with them. Amy was too fine to be made ridiculous after she's gone."

Suddenly Cilly understood Harry's solicitous interest. It wasn't Amy's past that he was concerned about—he probably knew no more about that than Cilly did—it was his own future that troubled him.

"The police have already done that," she stated maliciously, deliberately overpainting the picture.
Sergeant Dolan's brief examination of Amy's personal effects had not been very thorough. She wanted to annoy Harry Hutchins.
Apparently she succeeded.

He sat up attentively. "Have they found anything?" he asked with unfeigned concern.

Cilly only shrugged.

Let him worry, she thought. He probably wrote some warm letters to Amy before he met Gloria Harmon, and now he's afraid they'll find their way into the newspapers, for the glamorous Gloria to read and misinterpret. That would be just too bad; his promising future might be threatened.

Nevertheless, Cilly determined to go through Amy's belongings more thoroughly that evening. If there was, as Harry Hutchins intimated, something in the past, the fact would not be cheap fodder for the tabloids—not if she could help it.

The first thing she did, however, after Harry Hutchins left, was to throw his garnish bouquet down between the two. . . absolutely nothing.

Sport Glances.By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK—Little is Little once more. And when Little is Little, it means much to the coaches who roam the east's football fields.
It means, in a word, that the big, bass voice of Columbia University's gridiron director is going to boom out across the Baker Field practice area with the old-time roar as the young Lions fight their way into shape for the toughest schedule a Columbia team has faced in modern football.

For the past two seasons, Lou Little has fought against a handicap that would have driven most men from the field. A malady which had its origin in a displaced nerve in the joint of the hip caused intense pain day after day, night after night. He was unable to sleep.
During practice he was forced to halt to take medicine.

At the end of the 1935 season, an operation failed to relieve him, and 1936 found Little still suffering.

AGAIN, at the close of last season, Little submitted to another operation, with several of New York's more famous surgeons in active or consulting roles.

This time, the job was a success. The trouble was located and corrected. Little went to Nassau for two months to recuperate, play golf, and catching up on the sleep he had missed.

But the jinx continued to camp on Little's trail at the start of practice for this season, the coach rushing to his old home town of Leominster, Mass., on receiving word that his father was at the point of death.

But once Lou Little gets a chance to buckle down, he will be right again, and that could mean things of real significance to his eastern coaching colleagues—if he only had the material to match the vigor he will put into the launching of the new campaign.

At the end and tackle positions, the outlook is not bad, according to Columbia standards. In other words, there are two good ends and as many good tackles. The ends are Jimmie Siegel and Hadvitas, big, rangy, fast, nice pass receivers, and the Hadvitas boy can kick.
The tackles are Wright and Co-Captain Bateman—Wright, a rangy, capable tackle; Bateman a chunky, fast-on-his-feet lineman of the type for which Little line play calls.

BUT guards of any experience or proved ability virtually are non-existent, while the two centers, Corey and Hersey, the latter a 160-pounder, both are veterans, but lacking in conspicuous ability.

In the backfield, the list of veteran prospects of proved ability dwindles to three—Co-Captain Oscar Bonom, Sid Luckman, and Robert Taylor. Luckman may be one of the East's biggest stars.
What is coming up in the new sophomore class largely is problematical. The record of last season's freshman club holds no great promises.

To meet this material, the Columbia schedule-makers thoughtfully have provided Little with a number of headaches, such as Stanford, Dartmouth, Army, Navy, Syracuse, Pennsylvania.

But on Morningside Heights they don't seem to worry about schedules and material overmuch. The attitude is, "Lou can do it again."

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The early New Deal was a diverse lot of liberals, conservatives and radicals.

When Ray Moley finally went out of the government service, conservatives whooped loudly that this meant the President had turned to the "right." Today, big business men and millions of others consider the Roosevelt policies more radical than ever before.

By far the most significant early New Deal resignation was that of Budget Director Lew Douglas, an Arizona congressman whose personality and grasp of fiscal affairs had made him a Roosevelt favor-the smile return and the spirits

Club Steak a la Billy
(4 servings)
One tenderloin steak 2 to 2 1/2 inches thick, 1-4 pound butter, salt and pepper to taste.
Salt and pepper the steak thoroughly on both sides. Place on a hot grill and put a lump of butter on it. Broil for about 6 minutes (this depends upon the thickness of the steak) and then turn it and again put a lump of butter on the top. Just before it is done, turn it again, and add a lump of butter, cook for another two or three minutes and serve with the following sauce to be served separately.

Club Steak Sauce
Take three or four onions, sliced very fine. Saute them with a quarter pound of butter, for three or four minutes. Add four chopped mushrooms which have been boiled until soft, and cook for three minutes. Serve at the side of steak.
That's the suggestion of a noted
New York restaurateur who cusomers largely to men. Try these other recipes and you will see why.

Lamb Stew Parisienne
(Serves 8)
Two shoulders spring lamb, 3 dozen Parisienne potatoes (small balls), 3 dozen carrots, 3 dozen small white onions, 1 yellow onion, 4 ounces butter, 1 cup sherry wine, 3 cups raw tomatoes, 3 cups water, 3 cups brown sauce,

Car Registrations For August Lower

AUSTIN, Texas—New automobile registrations in Texas during August were slightly below those of the preceding month but moderately above those of August last year, according to the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas.
"Reports from fifteen representative Texas counties show total sales of 6,087 cars during August, a decline of 3.4 per cent from July, but an increase of 7.1 per cent over August last year, it was stated.

"Aggregate sales for the year-to-date in those fifteen counties were 50,235 cars, a decrease of 2.6 per cent from the corresponding period last year.
"It appears significant that while sales in the lowest and highest price groups decreased moderately from August last year, sales in the two immediate price groups increased sharply."

Introduced to You Through Courtesy of Local Drug Company

Through the courtesy and complete expense of the Oil City Pharmacy, and without obligation to you, Mr. E. E. Crawford has brought to Ranger Miss Auline Green, representative with Cara Nome, who this week will be in Ranger for the sole purpose of acquainting the women who care with the correct and authentic ways of caring for the skin.

No doubt you are familiar with the general routine of caring for your complexion but it is most important for you to understand the present changes which take place at the beginning of each season.

Shopping for valuable hints personally is just the same as shopping for that new frock. It behooves most of us to do a bit of investigating and in turn there are comparisons worth while.

Quoting a saying from Cara Nome, "even your hands tell tales out of school," and much is said about your grooming and even about your character. How many of us cleanse our hands thoroughly with cream before using soap and water? With winter coming, much care will be needed for skin which takes on a new change. According to specialists skin is out, fashion for fall and winter clearly indicates a lovely skin for the more feminine clothes.

Miss Green will be happy to consult with you on any problem and in courtesy to one of our local druggists you may feel free and welcome to call early for appointment. The general expense during the week is not included.

Soviet Resort Is Known As a Spa For Oil Bathing

BAKU, U. S. S. R.—Geran, a small station in Azerbaïdjan, is becoming a popular health resort. It is believed to be the only place in the world where a peculiar kind of oil, naphthalen, is applied as a cure.

This dark-brown, oily, viscous liquid contains neither benzene, kerosene, paraffin, nor water. It has a peculiar aromatic scent which grows stronger when heated.

Naphthalen baths are used in the treatment of nervous, gynecologic and skin diseases. The effect of naphthalen is said to be stronger and more rapid than that of medicinal muds and the patients stand it much more easily.

The government has allotted 30,000,000 roubles for the development of the "Naphthalen" health resort under the Third Five Year Plan.

The gay smile and the jaunty greeting that seemed quite undimmed by a long and disappointing Congressional session or the Black incident, the President, with Mrs. Roosevelt, sprinkled his west coast tour with platform appearances like this one. Apparently bent on setting the maximum relaxation out of the trip, both laughed and waved cheery greetings from the rear platform of the presidential special train.

NEW MARCH OF TIME AT ARCADIA

"War in China" in the current March of Time now showing at the Arcadia is far more than a sequence of shots depicting the sudden devastation of the current Sino-Japanese hostilities. It is the history of American commerce in the Orient, how it was established and how it flourished under the impetus of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's mastery ten-year campaign to modernize China. And, ironically, it is also the story of how this same campaign has so aggravated the Japanese that America's Far Eastern trade today is imperiled if not permanently impeded.

Better than any history book, this picture points out how ten years ago China's most trusted couple, scholarly Chiang and his alert American-educated wife, started intense modernization of China. Calling in American engineers and industrialists, they built bridges, railroads, factories, schools, stores. Japan promised not to prevent this progress of 400,000,000 human beings. But, reports the March of Time, as early as 1931 Japan broke her promise, invaded Manchuria and, as an extra gesture, destroyed a large part of Shanghai without strenuous resistance from the Chinese.

This autumn, having taken possession of Peiping and another great section of North China, Japan again attacked Shanghai. This time, however, China did resist, and cameraman Harrison Forman has been constantly at work on the battle-fronts since the first outbreak of hostilities, securing a wealth of exclusive and graphic material.

When contrasted with the concrete progress of Chiang's national planning, there is ample reason to suspect that here on the screen is evidence that the end has come, not only to America's hopes in China's long struggle to achieve her national integrity.

known from time immemorial. A few hundred years ago, patients from India, Arabia, Iran and other distant countries used to take the cure. During the installation here of all sorts of things there were found Hindu coins, household utensils and crockery, which, according to archeologists, date back 800 years.

Michigan Law Is Setting Up Wide Reform For Felons

BY HARRIS COATES
United Press Staff Correspondent LANSING, Mich. — Michigan is offering its convicts a "new deal" under a corrections commission established by the 1937 legislature.

Enactment of a new penal, pardon and parole system for the state was part of the administrative legislative program proposed by Gov. Frank Murphy which was adopted and signed.

"This will be one of the most advanced and outstanding systems in the nation," Murphy predicted when he approved the act.

The law was effective immediately and preliminary work of changing over from the old prison commission and one-man parole commissioner system has been started.

A corrections commission operating under the consolidated state welfare department has taken over the duties of the commissioner of pardons and paroles.

This five-member group, appointed by the governor, chooses a director of corrections to have charge of three sub-bureaus—pardons and parole, probation and prisoners—and names wardens formerly appointed by the state executive.

A three-member parole board, directly responsible to the new director, took the job which had given Michigan governors many worries. Previously, executives had followed the recommendations of their parole commissioners in granting clemency, but now this work is handled by the board.

The new system emphasizes rehabilitation rather than punishment. The board has sole initiative to grant paroles and no application can be accepted from prisoners, their attorneys or relatives. Applications will be made automatically when an inmate has served his minimum term or has become eligible under a classification and examination system provided in the act.

Public hearings on applications for pardons, reprieves and commutations of sentence were made mandatory and the board will make recommendations to the governor, who will make the final decision regarding clemency.

A division of criminal statistics was created to keep records of prisons, prisoners, paroles, pardons and other law violation information tabulated by enforcement officers on all offenders.

Hilmer Gollein, Detroit, pardon and parole commissioner under the Murphy administration, was named director of corrections by the new commission.

Joel R. Morse, warden of the state prison of southern Michigan near Jackson, was appointed assistant director in charge of penal institutions, and M. Hubert O'Brien, Detroit attorney and philanthropist, accepted an appointment as assistant director in charge of paroles.

Murphy, in inaugurating his "new deal" in prison administration before passage of the corrections act, appointed Moore and Garret Heys, who holds a Ph.D. and was a former school superintendent, as wardens of two state prisons.

"There are not two other wardens in the country like these men," he said, "because they both hold advanced university degrees. Their appointment was part of my plan to follow advanced ideas of penology and stress rehabilitation instead of punishment. The day of the hard-boiled schools of wardens is passing and I want Michigan to be in the lead in making the change."
