A. F. OF L. GIVES PROGRAM FOR BUSINESS AID

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The American Federation of Labor proposed to the administration today a program intended to halt the business recession by strengthening mass purchasing power. The program paralleled suggestions made by President Roosevelt to restore the nation's economic equilibrium. Mr. Roosevelt will send to congress Monday a message outlining ways of stimulating the lagging construction industry and alleviating a shortage of homes. He has ordered government officials to continue efforts for an accord with private utilities and free a backlog of capital estimated at $2,600,000,000.

House Shows How Students Attend School Cheaply

How youths may obtain a higher education with a minimum expense without denial of necessities is demonstrated visibly at Agricultural and Mechanical college at College Station where approximately 450 students are living cooperatively in project houses.

Many of this county who last week attended the Agricultural and Mechanical-Texas University game took time to inspect the Eastland County Project House near the school. Students who did not go home for the holidays stated that average expense of each participant in the project house, one of 14 newly constructed units is $12 or $12.50 each month. Every project house accommodates 32 youths. Not only does the $12 sum from each participant pay for board and room but it also meets expense of house maintenance and payments on equipment of modern type. In four years the project house will become property of the Eastland county boys who can, among other things, pass the resulting saving on to other youths.

The project houses are located in a "colony" nearby the school buildings and Kyle field stadium. Students share work cooperatively as well as the expenses. Food and other supplies are purchased by Manager Jack Morris of Crane, formerly of Ranger, with the aid of Mrs. E. E. Warden of Ranger, house matron.

Prices for the food are near wholesale quotations. It was stated 14 loaves of bread are eaten daily by the youths. Meals are taken in a dining room with two long tables.

The house matron has use of modern kitchen equipment, including electrical refrigeration, automatic heater and other supplies.

Several of the youths had as guests Thanksgiving their parents and friends. Preparation of food for the many youths involves methods care-like yet offers the home quality desired, it was stated.

The house is two stories. Rooms have beds of the bunk type, one section on top of another, each accommodating two students. Usually there are four beds to the room.

A large bathroom is on the second floor offering ample lavatories and showers for the rush created by the 32 boys. In addition to the youths who live at the house there are two students living elsewhere who takes meals there.

Last year Eastland county boys lived in a project house at Bryan. Nearness to school the new project house proves far more economical and is more convenient, it was stated.

Justice of Peace E. E. Wood of Eastland Saturday withheld inquest verdict in the death of Evans, pending taking of further testimony. Zerl Perdue, 117 N. Walnut St., Eastland, driver of the car striking Evans, in a statement to Justice of Peace Wood Saturday afternoon, stated that the accident occurred near the John Hart farm as he was enroute from Cisco to Eastland.

Perdue stated that Evans was crossing the road when he first sighted the pedestrian and that he swerved his automobile to the left when Evans was in the car's path. He had sounded the horn when Evans was first sighted, Perdue told Justice Wood. Perdue's statement detailed how Evans came into his path after he had avoided several times from striking him.

Perdue brought Evans to the hospital at Eastland after the accident, which occurred at noon. Injuries suffered by Evans, including a broken leg, several ribs and internal hurts, brought Evans' death at 6:15 p. m. Perdue reported the accident to Sheriff Loss Woods immediately after it occurred.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—President Roosevelt, departing a week of rest in Florida, administration leaders instructed today on maintaining its bud-balancing program and a double crop revision drive. The President's attitude both problems was designed to bolster the program for encouragement of business, which is to be opened formally Monday by his message to congress on Monday, but the prospect of delay until January on tax modification continued to meet opposition both Senate and House.

On Tuesday, Mr. Roosevelt send another message, recommending that congress reduce federal aid to state highway systems by $120,000,000 a year to aid balancing the 1939 budget. In regard to making both meet in the federal financial up, Mr. Roosevelt wrote a letter to Senate Majority Leader Al W. Barkley, Dem., Ky., stating that any extra expenditure in farm bill must be met by increased revenue provisions.

A White House statement any bill, meaning specifically crop control measure, would be vetoed if it increased cost with coordinate action to increase income. Congressional demands for revision at the special session, despite almost impossible technical obstacles, demanded the attention of the leaders and two new attacks on the program were announced after the President wanted action whenever congress was ready.

They were: (1) Representative Emanuel Zeller, Dem., N. Y., named a bloc of Democratic and Republican House members meeting next week to plan action to revise the undistributed program, and (2) Sen. H. Styles Hays, Rep., N. H., announced he was preparing an amendment to a pending House-approved revenue bill, to revise the capital g tax at this session.

Bridges called upon congress "quit fiddling while Rome burns" and act at once on tax revision and emergency currency programs granted the President and endorsed the Wagner labor act. The departure of the President aroused speculation on the probable action of a restless and independent congress during absence.

More Peace 'Lunacy' Is Needed by World

Probably it was inevitable that the man who interrupted the Armistice Day ceremonies in London should be looked up as a lunatic.

The king and all the big-wigs were there, drawn up in orderly files about the World War Cenotaph.

Then, suddenly and dramatically, a bareheaded man in a raincoat rushed forward, jostled his way through the lines of soldiers and sailors...

"Stop all this hypocrisy! You're deliberately preparing for a new war!"

Well, of course, they gave the man the bum's rush. Away he went in the hands of the coppers.

So that ended that. Probably the man really was really was crazy; for hardly any of our eminently sane leaders seem to be lifting their voices these days in protest against the increasing danger of war.

If you are old enough to remember 1918, you will recall how devoutly and wholeheartedly the world yearned for an enduring peace when the World War ended.

One would think that people who had any sense at all would have resolved that whatever happened, they weren't going to go through that again.

So what happened? So nearly a score of years passed, and Armistice Day came around again, and people stood in silence to honor their dead and renew the vow that it should not happen again.

Is it any wonder that one man was driven to interrupt the ceremony with a desperate cry of protest?

It did no good, of course. He was "suffering from a delusion." But he must have made at least a few people wonder uneasily just who was being insane.

FROM the figure of sowing and reaping in our last lesson, with the assurance that whatsoever man sows, that shall he also reap...

How does the vine yield its fruit? Through its roots in the soil, through its contact with the fruit-giving power of nature...

So it is, says Jesus, in the Christian life. It is in proper contact with the forces of grace and truth that the spiritual vine yields its fruit...

A man cannot bear fruit in his life except as he is directly in touch with his source of spiritual life. We must abide in Christ if we would bear Christian fruit.

NEW YORK—There are seven golfing Turnesas, and if the six professionals are as bright as the amateur, it oughtn't even be a contest.

The only simon-pure Turnesa and the youngest member of the famous fairway family, developed not far from the sidewalks of New York, is Willie, Holy Cross senior.

WILLIE, the Turnesa collegian, was edged out in the Jess Sweetser victory memorial tournament at Wingfoot as Ray Billows unleashed a 283.

Young Turnesa's peak achievement of the season was breaking Bobby Jones' course record at Wingfoot with a 68.

WILLIE TURNESA can't see how John Montague can be so much better than the top-ranking golfers as stories claim.

"Our better pros have achieved practically maximum effectiveness, and I don't believe that Montague or anyone else can beat them consistently," he explains.

BLASTING National League hockey officials, Jack Adams manager of the world champion Detroit Red Wings, asks why clubs should keep bringing in first-class defensemen, who know how to check hard and legally, when any stumble-bum can go into a clinch with a forward and hold him out of the play.

JOHN MONTAGUE'S appearance in a charity golf match got the professionals talking about the relative merits of the foremost in their ranks.

To these worthies, who know the genuine from the gilded, the center of praise, or critic sm, still is Henry Cotton.

Every professional discussion of golf manages to swing around to the sparsely-thatched Cooper, leading money-winner again this year, daddy of them all year in and year out, and now the model of more good golfers than any other fairway figure.

WITH drop-kicking a supposedly lost art, Bill Lynch of Princeton created considerable excitement by scoring from the 25-yard line against Dartmouth with that antiquated route.

And those who saw Bronville high school beat Fordham Prep by two after-touchdown drop-kicks felt that they were watching history in the making, for the kicker was Charles Brickley, Jr., with his father, the immortal Harvard star, looking on proudly.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

WITH BILL MAYES

An open letter to the District 3 committee!

Gentlemen: I see by the papers that Abilene, for the third time in recent years, has won the district title through your efforts, and it appears to me that something should be done about it. At least, the Abilene High School should award each of you a letter for your efforts, especially since the district championship has been given to Abilene two years in succession without the football team having to win it, the other time being in 1933 when it was won for them by Cisco's protest of an ineligible player on the Ranger team.

This football business is getting too foolish for words, anyway, and it appears that it might be settled just as satisfactorily, more economically and more openly if the district champions could just be decided by the debating teams of the schools in the district instead of the arguments of the officials of the Abilene High School.

For instance, let us say, for convenience, that Ranger is playing Abilene.

The Ranger and Abilene football teams could suit up and place the football on the 40-yard line, and Abilene could kick off to Ranger. Then the Ranger debating team could argue the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, That Ranger High School's Bulldogs should be allowed to make at least one touchdown in this game."

If the first argument was good, in the opinion of three neutral judges, the ball would be advanced 10 yards and Ranger given a first down. If, in the opinion of the judges, the argument was not so hot, Ranger could punt to Abilene, and the Abilene debaters could then get a shot at the negative side of the question. Eventually, if the debaters got hoarse from arguing, time out would be called, the band would play, "The pep squad would yell "Debate That Point!", cough drops could be rushed out by the waterjack, and the game could go on.

This method of deciding football championships would, in my opinion, be much fairer than the present secret session method employed by the committee, for several reasons:

- 1—It would encourage amateur debate instead of debate by paid school officials.
- 2—The public in general and the football fans in particular, would know what was going on, because the debates could be held in public, not behind locked doors.

Department Store Sales Were Slow During October

AUSTIN.—For the first time this year, Texas department store sales during November made an unfavorable showing with the corresponding month last year, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research has reported.

The fact that there was one less shopping day during October than in the same month last year accounted for part of the decline, the bureau's report said. "The increase from September to October also was considerably below the average seasonal gain, indicating that the retail trade has at last begun to yield to the growing depression in industry and trade which in the nation at large has been gaining momentum since September.

"Reports from 108 department and specialty stores show a decline in dollar sales of 1.4 per cent from October last year. The gain over September was only .4 per cent, whereas the average seasonal gain from September to October is 12 per cent. Sales for the year to date in these stores are still 8 per cent above the like period last year.

"Cities in which October sales exceeded those of the similar month last year were Abilene, Amarillo, Austin, Houston, Lubbock, Port Arthur, San Antonio, and Wichita Falls.

"The ratio of credit sales to net sales was greater during October last year, while the ratio of collections to outstanding accounts was below that of a year ago."

Aged Corpus Christi Editor Is Honored At a Convention Texas May Supply Meerscham Pipes For Entire World

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas.—When members of the Texas Editorial Association honored Eli T. Merriman, dead of Texas newspapermen, at their 26th annual convention here last week, they were paying tribute to a man who ranks with Corpus Christi's beautiful bay and her thriving port as an important South Texas institution.

The veteran newspaperman, who was born at Banquete in 1852 and moved to Corpus Christi 13 years later, has seen this city grow from a tiny, sleepy fishing village to one of the most active, bustling cities in Texas. "Uncle Eli," who has been a newspaperman for 67 years, advocated building a deep-water port here for nearly 60 years before the Port of Corpus Christi became an actuality. That the pioneer's contention of the possibilities for a harbor here were sound is seen in the fact that today the Port of Corpus Christi is visited by an average of nearly three ships a day which carry on water commerce with both the east and west coasts of the United States, as well as most of the nations of the old and new world.

The Port of Corpus Christi handled 2,442,196 tons of cargo from January 1 to 30 this year.

Mr. Merriman, during recent years has seen modern skyscrapers supplant the many old buildings which he knew in his earlier days and which, like himself, formed an integral part in the historical picture of Corpus Christi. He has seen the development of an oil industry and other industries which have placed Corpus Christi and South Texas on the map as one of the richest mineral resource and industrial centers in the state. He has also seen Corpus Christi grow from a small community of a few hundred persons to a thriving city of 55,000 persons.

Merriman was one of the publishers of the old Corpus Christi Press, which 54 years ago was consolidated with the present-day Caller. He retired from active newspaper work 26 years ago but has never ceased contributing articles to the local newspapers. At 85 years of age he is still active, and his ever alert mind is a veritable storehouse of facts and findings concerning the history of Corpus Christi and South Texas.

U. of T. Directory of Students Is Issued

AUSTIN, Texas.—A directory of students of the University of Texas left the press this week with names, addresses and telephone numbers of more than 7,000 enrollees.

Statistically minded students gained these facts from the directory.

Smiths are the most numerous with 113 and Browns next with 66. There are 59 Joneses and 56 Johnsons. The popularity of President Woodrow Wilson in the period when present day students were revealed by eight with Woodrows as a given name.

Seizo Huga, farthest away registrant, will scarcely be able to go to his home at Azabu, Japan, for the mid-term holidays. It would take 17 days for the onerous journey. Three students are from the Philippine Islands, 41 from Mexico, seven from the Canal Zone, four from Puerto Rico, three from Cuba, two from Venezuela, two from Panama and two from Turkey. Canada sent one student and one is here from Germany.

Huga came from Japan to Texas to study cotton marketing and two students from Turkey were attracted to Texas by the university's course in petroleum engineering.

Juarez-Mexico City Highway Assured

JUAREZ, Mex. — Representatives of governors who attended a road conference in Chihuahua City returned to report that a paved highway from Juarez to Mexico City within two years is practically assured.

The Banco Nacional Hipotecario Urbano y de Obras Publicas loaned six million pesos to the federal and state governments to begin paving the Juarez-Chihuahua City highway.

Contractors have agreed to finish the Juarez-Chihuahua City and the Chihuahua City-Cuahuatimoc roads in one year.

Remainder of the Chihuahua City-Parral road will be finished in 1939.

Paving of the Juarez-El Porvenir road started Nov. 1. At the same time, grading and structures on the Chihuahua City-Parral highway also started.

The highway between Parral and Durango already is under construction.

The remainder of the way to Mexico City has only short stretches to be improved.

AUSTIN, Texas.—Many rare minerals are available in Texas, the mineral resources committee of the State Planning Board reported in findings filed here.

Uvalde deposits of Sepiolite have been discovered sufficient to supply the world with meerscham pipes for 100 years. The deposits are within sight of the home of Vice President John N. Garner.

Uvalde's rock asphalt, which has become widely known and is used in many places for paving.

Potash is found in large quantities in several West Texas counties. Sen. Morris Sheppard has sponsored national legislation calling for surveys of its extent and accessibility. It is in demand chiefly as a fertilizer.

Precious metals in Brewster county have been mined for many years. Some of the less known minerals obtainable in Texas are vermiculite, a mica like insulator mineral wool; serpentine, a roofing paper filler; graphite leucan spar; pumiceite; fieldspate; various granites, marbles and pot very clays.

Salt, sulphur, lead, copper gypsum and quicksilver are being produced already in large quantities in the state. The sulphur deposits are estimated to be 9 per cent of the United States total.

NYA Training Is Enlarged In Scope

AUSTIN.—The training program for NYA youths assigned to work projects is being extended and enlarged in scope. J. C. Kellam, Texas youth director, told district representatives of the National Youth Administration here last week.

"We shall continue getting dollar's worth of work for every dollar spent," he said. "But we will be in a better position to provide for instruction, and training both on and off the job, for the young men and women assigned to our projects. NYA youths who only part time and most of the really want to devote their spare time to preparing themselves for a job in private employment."

Work projects approved by the NYA have been selected in preparation for the type and extent of training and work experience the project afforded to the youths. In addition, NYA youths have been encouraged to attend Emergent Education classes and evening schools, while youths from regular educational institutions have been eligible to receive regular student aid jobs.

Recently arrangements were completed in a number of towns for operation of training class in homemaking for NYA girls through cooperation of the home-making division of the State Department of Education. Vocational training classes are also being planned in communities in which a sufficient number of youths are interested in receiving this type of training are available.

Mr. Kellam also announced more resident work and training projects similar to those operated last summer for youths interested in agriculture will be conducted. On the projects last summer 11 youths were assigned to part-time employment and during the spare time received agricultural instruction.

"The training made available to the youths should lead to one of two objectives, if not both: should either point toward a vocation or should serve as a leisure time guide," Mr. Kellam told NYA representatives.

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—Threatening to shoot anyone who proached him, a "stay up" armed with a shotgun, defied 24 hours all attempts to bring him from a 110-foot forestry servation tower near Mornington Western Australia.

Subscribers Urged To Check Payment To Carrier Boy

Subscribers of the Ranger Times are requested to see that the carrier boy has his card with him when he is collecting for subscriptions to the paper and that proper credit for money collected is given each week.

This request is being made in order that the subscriber may be protected, not from honesty on the part of the carrier, but to maintain an up-to-date record that will show just how much has been paid.

Unless the carrier has a card along and gives the subscriber credit it is easy for him to forget just which of numerous subscribers have their subscriptions and in instances he might collect twice.

In order to avoid any confusion or loss the subscriber cooperation is urged.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
ROBERT HARRY—hero, explorer.
MELISSA LANE—heroine, Harry's partner.
HONEY BEE GIRL—Indian, member of Harry's party.
HADES JONES—adventurer, member of Harry's party.

Yesterday's explanation of the ancient pueblo begins. And for Bob and Mary Melissa romance begins too. Bob had called her by her pet name!

CHAPTER IX
SMALL logs had been used in building the ceilings of Defense Castle. Most of them had crumbled and rotted, but Dr. Barry was able to get a fairly solid cross section of one. He studied it intently.

"As near as I can tell, studying the rings with this pocket glass, this thing dates back about 1200 years," he told the others. "We'll take it in for detailed analysis."

"It all seems sort of—sacred, doesn't it?" Melissa was impressed with the old clan house and fortress. "Just imagine the people that were once here, the busy days, the happiness, and everything!"

Archaeology may be a "dead" science from the schoolroom viewpoint; it may lack adventure in the field. Even Hades Jones and the muscular Holliman, uneducated in the scholastic sense, felt the spell of exploration and helped with the preliminary measurements and surveys. No actual digging was attempted the first day, but when the party descended toward nightfall, everyone was fatigued.

Scott Holliman, remembering his bargain with Honey Bee, made an opportunity to begin his love campaign. He stayed near Mary Melissa on the walk to camp, managed to separate the two of them from the others.

"Well, Lissa, how did you like the cliff house?" He began with high confidence. "Lissa, astonished, wondered if she heard him correctly. She had been civil to the man heretofore, just as she would have been to a janitor or gardener in New York. She had been impressed on her first day in Blanco Canyon, when Holliman rode the bucking horse, but he was hired as a workman."

ALL at once, though, a new thought struck her. Was Holliman, after all, a "mere" workman? Wasn't he hired rather to be one of a scientific party, on an equal footing with the others? Was it fair to expect Dr. Barry to maintain town standards of employers and servants? Hades Jones had been accepted as a social equal, surely. And the West is famous for its democracy, she knew.

Holliman mistook her pause for shyness, and thought she was pleased at the compliment. "Anytime you want anything, Lissa, you just ask me, huh?" Holliman was growing more confidential, assuming genuine intimacy.

Lissa was furious, instantly. She would have turned to slap him, and doubtless Mr. Holliman would have received a classic bawling out from a lady with an excellent if refined choice of words. But Bob Barry chose that moment to turn back and call to her.

"That hammer still has me worried," Bob repeated, waiting for Melissa and Holliman to catch up with him. "I can't imagine why the rawhide strip wasn't disintegrated, gone, with all the years. It couldn't be more than a hundred or so."

"Maybe Indians explored the cave, and dropped it."

Mary Melissa forced herself to be calm. She welcomed the interruption, really, until she could have time to think. After all, this party of five persons had to live together for some weeks. "No," Bob answered, "It's not Indian make. Not like the weapons of any tribes in the past few centuries, I'm sure. They had a definite pattern for stone hammers, tomahawks and the like. The grooves in this one, which I held the rawhide, were different. The shape was unique. And the rawhide was strangely fresh!"

He shook his head at the mystery. When supper was over that night, talk about the castle was resumed.

NOBODY had any suggestions. They had thrashed it out before, without results. When 9:30 came the entire party went to bed. At breakfast, Bob had already been up two hours, making entries in his notebooks, and outlining work for the day to come. "First thing, Uncle Hades," he addressed the others, "You'd better take the pack mules to the spring and bring back all the water you can. Take it easy. It's a 12-mile jaunt, you know."

"Holliman, I think you'd better cut some more poles and construct wider and more permanent bunks in our tent houses here. Make Miss Lane's and Honey Bee's first. We'll need comfortable beds. You might make a chair or two, and a larger table, if you have a knack for it. We may be here for weeks."

Bob lingered at the breakfast table, sketching and making notes. He wanted a complete record of every move made on this expedition. Every piece of pottery, every bit of rock or artifact collected, had to be properly classified and labeled. Honey Bee brought him more coffee, then lingered. Melissa had gone riding.

"BAWB!" she ventured, hesitantly. She had never addressed him so intimately before, but he appeared not to notice. He looked up at her.

"I hear you say," she went on, "how you give the leg to learn door to cliff house?"

"Yes, Sure, Honey Bee. I mean, it's a scientific point that would be very valuable, if we could settle it. Most of the cliff dwellings explored heretofore had some sort of narrow stairway, cut in rocks usually, or augmented with ladders. This one showed no sign of such, you know."

"Last night, in the dark, I take flashlight and go back to castle. I know many Indian signs. I want to look carefully, after what you say after supper."

"You went up again, Honey Bee? Alone? In the dark?" He was incredulous. "Yes, For you. I was not afraid. I know Indian people. Many of our signs are very very old. I look for sign of one long square in another long square. It means door. Maybe you know?"

"Yes! Yes, the entrance sign! And—?"
"I find it. On these castle rocks. I am sure. I think it shows the secret entrance to the castle."

Bob stood up, in his excitement. "L-look here, Honey Bee," he jabbed a finger at her, beaming. "Can you show it to me? Right away?"

He gripped her arm, in quick thanks, as he passed her. Honey Bee smiled, and in that moment she was truly beautiful. "I'll get Lissa," Bob called. "We'll go right up with you."

Slowly the Indian girl's expression changed. It was almost supernatural, for the scowl that grew in place of the smile, was deep with pain, tainted with spiritual venom.

AMERICA virtually is overrun with prize sophomore football talent this fall. They've sprouted out of our well-cultivated gridiron grasslands in every section of the country. No, we don't know what's caused them to bob up in such numbers. All we know is there are a couple dozen or more highly-gear'd youngsters who are fairly oozing with signs of gridiron greatness.

Take Wild Bill Hutchinson, for instance. You won't find a more dangerous ball-carrier anywhere than the Indians' 175-pound full-back star. If ever a man has sparked his team to success, Hutchinson is that man.

Not far behind the Hanover high-flyer is Nile Kinjek of Iowa, punter, punter, and ball carrier extraordinary. Although playing with a weak team he is hailed as the coming phenomenon of the Big Ten and the Hawkeyes' greatest quarterback since Aubrey Devine.

GOOD first-year backs are a drug on the market. Minnesota is loud in her praise of Harold Van Every. So is everyone else he has played against.

Fred Trosko has been Michigan's margin of victory halfback in the three Wolverine victories this year. And he does it with only 154 pounds at his disposal.

Jimmy Crowley of Fordham rubs his hands with glee every time Dom Principe goes into action. The Ram halfback is a ball player from the word go, and he'd just as soon block as carry the mail.

Speaking of blocking, Army offers Art Frontczak, a young husky who has no peer in the east at blasting the pins from underneath pesky linemen. He operates at halfback and is built for heavy duty.

Merlyn Condit of Carnegie Tech is another who is gifted with triple-threat ability.

Good fullbacks are a tradition at Minnesota, and Marty Christiansen is a 220-pound husky whose pile-driving excursions into the line are highly reminiscent of Joesting Nagurski, Manders, Kostka, and Bies.

Smaller but faster is Jack Ryan, Jr., Northwestern fullback, son of the old-time Dartmouth All-America end. Not only is he a good plunger, but he's a good passer as well.

VERY fine ends are Don Looney and Durwood Horner of Texas Christian and Bob Day of Northwestern. All are big, strong, and glue-fingered pass receivers. The Wildcats also have an outstanding tackle in 210-pound Nick Cutlich, who broke into the lineup in the early part of the year.

Bill Heater of Syracuse and Bill Kirchem of Tulane, both of whom stand well above six feet and weigh in at 215 or thereabouts, are tackles who should go far. Navy boasts Jack Bergner, only 190, but labeled as terrific.

Regardless where you hunt you won't find better sophomore guards than Lyle Rockenback of Michigan State and John Thomassin of Southern California.

Joe Stack of Yale and Glen Jackson of Texas are bang-up centers who are expected to go places.

Item: . . . the names. These boys are the headlines of tomorrow.

THE feast of Thanksgiving is over. Let's take a thought today of those members of the family who seem below par in general health. Many children and adults, although seemingly normal, actually suffer from anemia. Secondary anemia, as it is professionally called, usually comes as a result of some disease such as nephritis, heart condition, diabetes or hemorrhage. It comes also from a general run down condition or from undernourishment.

The anemic member of your family will have a low red blood count and needs plenty of food containing iron and high in vitamins. He needs also lots of calories because he likely is underweight. Liver is usually fed daily. It tests a mother's skill to think up many ways of serving liver so as not to bore the patient.

NECESSARY FOODS—Apples, apricots, peaches, prunes, raisins, pineapple, beef kidneys, beef, lamb or chicken livers, spinach, parsley, walnuts, watercress, lima beans or lentils. It is advisable to omit all rich pastries, fried foods, jellies and marmalades and highly seasoned foods. Give plenty of milk and eggs and all green foods rich in vitamins. Be sure all food is fresh and see that it is attractively served.

LIVER RECIPES
Liver Cakes (4 servings)
Two and one-half cups ground liver, 1-4 cup bread crumbs, 4 slices of bacon, 1 egg, 1-4 cup stock, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper.
Mix liver, crumbs, seasoning, slightly beaten egg and stock. Mold into patties and wrap with bacon. Broil until bacon is well done.

Menu
(for anemic person)
BREAKFAST, Stewed prunes with cream, oatmeal with cream and sugar, one poached egg on buttered whole wheat toast, cocoa.
10 A. M.—Chocolate malted milk.
LUNCHEON—1 P. M.: Cream of lima bean soup, liver cakes with crisp bacon, watercress with sliced orange and French dressing, whole wheat bread and butter, floating island, glass of milk.
4 P. M.—Baked apple and cream or glass of milk.
DINNER: Fruit cup (pineapple, apple and grapefruit), sauteed chicken liver and mushrooms, parsley potato, spinach with chopped hard boiled egg, lettuce and French dressing, whole wheat bread and butter, pineapple tapioca with whipped cream.
BEDTIME: Cup of cocoa.

Casserole of Beef Liver (4 servings)
One pound of beef liver, 1 tablespoon of lard, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 onion, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 carrot, 2 potatoes, 2 fresh tomatoes, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 2 cups of water.
Wash liver thoroughly in cold water. Slice and put in a pot and cover with cold water, bring to a boil and drain. Chop onion and saute in one-half of the butter and lard. Cut carrots in thin slices and dice potatoes. Skin tomatoes and cut up. Boil carrot and potatoes in salted water for five minutes. Drain. Take water and thicken it with flour, add seasonings and all vegetables. Roll liver in flour, saute in rest of shortening, lay in casserole dish, cover with sauce and cook in moderate oven (350 degrees F. three-fourths of an hour.

What Constitution Of United States Means to Me

Editor's Note: The following is one of a series of articles written by Ranger high school students as a part of their course in American history.

BY KATHRYN HINMAN

The Constitution of the United States means a great deal to me. It gives me freedom of religion, of speech, of the press, the right to assemble peaceably, and the right to petition. The Constitution says that no soldier shall be quartered in my home in time of peace or in time of war without my consent. It gives me protection against anyone searching or seizing my home or personal papers. The Constitution of the United States gives me the right to vote regardless of sex, race, color, or previous conditions of servitude. (One thing to my disadvantage is that it gives Congress the right to lay and collect taxes as it sees fit.) The Constitution did at one time prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors, which was a help to my safety, but this article has been amended. I am thankful for the things the Constitution provides for me.

Safer Highways Is Now the Aim of Road Commissions

HOUSTON.—The old adage that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure is being applied by the Texas Highway Department and the Federal Bureau of Public Roads to make highways safer for the traveling public, according to an article, "Toward Greater Safety," contributed by Charles E. Simons to the November issue of Texas Parade.

"The best method yet devised to prevent collisions between a motor vehicle and a locomotive at a railroad grade crossing is, forsooth, to eliminate the grade crossing," says Mr. Simons. "And that, briefly, is what these two units of government are doing insofar as funds are available.

Figures compiled by a national safety organization disclose that approximately 2,000 or 2,500 persons lost their lives in collisions at grade crossings last year. A like or perhaps larger number will lose their lives under similar circumstances in 1937, due to increased motor travel and faster train schedules. This does not take into consideration the thousands that were permanently crippled or injured and the additional thousands that suffered only temporary hurts. The property damage, both real and human, caused in these scores of needless "accidents" will offset many times the cost of providing grade separations at the most dangerous crossings.

"During each of the next two years the federal government has made an extra allocation of $2,724,825 to Texas to finance railroad grade separations and install warning and other preventive devices at railroad grade crossings having a bad accident record. The Texas Highway Department will furnish the plans, specifications, award the contracts and supervise their construction and installation.

"The ordinary practice followed in eliminating grade separations is to construct either an overpass or an underpass. In the main, this procedure will be followed in Texas, although there will be an important variation in that, for the first time in the history of the relationship between the two departments, Texas has been granted permission in a few instances to relocate railroads to eliminate the necessity for a crossing at grade.

"The 1938-39 railroad grade separation programs have recently been formulated by the Highway Commission and have been approved by the respective railroad companies. The 1938 program was approved by the Federal Bureau of Public Roads, Oct. 6, and the Highway Department now is in a position to submit plans and specifications for projects in this part of the program. The first projects on the 1938 program will be awarded as soon as the detailed plans have been approved by the federal government, which should be in the comparatively near future. The programs, as formulated, include a total of fifty-one grade separations, railroad relocation and highway relocation projects. Funds for the program have been allocated on the basis of total railroad mileage within the state.

"For many years the Texas Highway Department has followed the policy of eliminating grade crossings by relocating highways wherever possible."
