For some time his wife and children, Forest, 11, and Margaret, 9, had been at Mokanshan, a missionary rendezvous near the Chekiang-Anhui province border. Chinese and Japanese have been fighting on all sides of Mokanshan and deserters from the Chinese army, turned bandits, have been reported looting there. ## BORAH FLAYS SCARCITY AS A FARM PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Sen. William Borah today flayed the theory of scarcity in the administration crop control legislation as threatening "national suicide."

The Idaho senator warned the administration that failure to face the "fact that millions do not have sufficient food" would lead to a "people filled with revolution."

"These people are a fact and you can't deny that reality even if it takes every cent in the treasury," he said. He denounced the theory as putting the farmer in a "straight jacket" as far as prices are concerned.

The removal of surpluses from the market would keep the price of farm products up, he argued.

In the house reading of the farm bill resumed, a movement to protect wheat growers from a drastic reduction of acreage was approved.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace declared he would take steps to bring farmers under the new housing program proposed by President Roosevelt.

Wallace was asked to draft an amendment to the present senate housing bill, which does not include farm housing, after he told the committee that farmers spend $46,000,000 annually for renovating purposes alone.

Game Head Urges Waterfowlers to Aid Duck Return

NEW YORK—An appeal to duck hunters of every state to unite in "vastly increasing" the comeback of wild ducks by extending into Canada the successful duck-breeding refuge movement was issued today by Dr. John A. Hartwell, National President of "Ducks Unlimited."

"Uncounted millions of federal, state and private funds have been spent in a dramatic and productive movement to create a great system of waterfowl sanctuaries throughout the country," Dr. Hartwell declared.

"Coupled with these practical efforts to increase wild duck production have been more regulatory restrictions on duck hunting than any other period in conservation history."

"Results of these initial efforts to bring back the waterfowl are plainly apparent this season in the largest crop of wild ducks in recent years. But further increase and any future liberalization of hunting restrictions must depend upon the extension of the refuge movement into Canada which today furnishes over 80 per cent of our wildfowl."

Pointing out that waterfowl restoration work thus far has been confined almost entirely to the cooperatively minor duck-producing areas of this country, Dr. Hartwell continues: "Progress already made in bringing back the birds in the United States is only a sample of what could be done in Canada."

"In sections of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, where duck-breeding conditions are the best on the continent, waterfowl can be increased at a fraction of the cost here in the United States. But federal funds cannot be spent in Canada. That is why 'Ducks Unlimited,' the first national organization of duck hunters, appeals to every wildfowler to unite in carrying forward this refuge movement from where Uncle Sam must leave off," Dr. Hartwell concludes.

"Ducks Unlimited" is a non-profit membership organization with volunteer committees—an organization actively enlisting duck hunters in most states. Premiers of the three provinces have announced their co-operation in the program which has been formulated by the More Game Birds Foundation. "Ducks Unlimited" headquarters have been established at 509 Fifth Avenue, New York City and field work is to be launched in Canada next Spring.

Girls to Fight Bachelor Club

AUGUSVILLE, Manitoba — Young women in this district laughed at a newly formed bachelor club today and planned a council of war to break down the indifference of unmarried young men.

Fourteen bachelors sat down to a sumptuous banquet recently—a banquet suitably chaperoned by a married woman—and bravely formed the new association.

Toasts were given at the banquet to the mothers, the ladies, the hostess-chaperon, and to "the king." Quinton Broadfoot was elected president, Charles Minshull, vice president, and William Chaytor, secretary-treasurer. Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett and Erick F. Willis, M. L. A., were named patrons.

The club's theme song is "A Bachelor Gay." Asked if this might be changed to "When the real thing comes along," one of the officials blushed and yelled "Never!"

Young women in the district expressed no alarm at formation of the club. "One giggled: 'We'll not be bested by this war.'"

Revival to Begin at Ranger Tonight

An old-time gospel revival will be started tonight at the Gospel Center church, corner of Cherry and Rusk streets, by Rev. J. B. McKeehan of Houston. The Gospel Center church has been donated by Rev. J. T. Lovell, pastor, for the revival services, which will be non-denominational in character.

Rev. McKeehan, who was formerly a carrier for The Times, and who has recently been ordained, has issued a cordial invitation to everyone, regardless of denomination or creed, to attend the services.

Since leaving Ranger nine years ago, Rev. McKeehan has lived in Houston, where he was converted and where he began preaching six months later. Since entering the ministry he has been privileged to see many hundreds of people saved, he stated today.

The subject of tonight's sermon will be "Be Not Afraid, Only Believe." The public is cordially invited.

Observers comment that Stalin is gambling on his future in Russia, which is a more complicated way of saying he's just going to shoot the works.

Acquit Mother Goose Mural

If the verdict of Commissioner Allen's children's jury is accepted as final, the Mother Goose mural, below, which Bernice Cross, WPA artist, painted on the walls of a District of Columbia sanatorium, will remain despite art critics' condemnation of the work as "grotesque." When the six Washington school children at top viewed the painting, they thought patients at the sanatorium must have a lot of fun looking at it, though one 10-year-old said it must be for "younger children."

People Should Have 'Last Word' on War

Divided on almost everything else, members of the present Congress seem to be agreed on one thing: that above everything else the American people want to stay out of any and all wars that may come over the horizon.

In this the congressmen undoubtedly reflect the wishes of their constituents. No one can doubt that the people of this country want peace. War may start overnight in almost any part of the world; if public sentiment means anything, this country will stay out if it be humanely possible.

But the peace-loving people of the United States might as well understand one thing. Under existing laws, they can be taken into war against their own will, and they can do nothing about it but take it and like it.

In the first place, any President can, if he wishes, maneuver the country into a spot where war becomes practically inevitable. Wilson did it, unintentionally, in the World War; any succeeding President could do the same.

In the second place, it is Congress that declares war. Susceptible to pressures of all kinds, Congress might conceivably declare war when a majority of the people did not want war. It is still an open question, for instance, whether a majority of Americans wanted to go to war with Germany in the spring of 1917.

There are now pending in the Senate two bills which aim to remedy this situation. Introduced by Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin and Senator Capper of Kansas, these bills call for a constitutional amendment which would put any declaration of war up to a nationwide referendum for ratification. Unless a majority of the people voted for war, war could not be declared.

The only exception would be in case of invasion by a foreign power of the United States or any other North American nation.

"Every man in the nation will jump to arms in case the United States is invaded or threatened with invasion," says Senator Capper. "But when it comes to war overseas the American people believe they have the right to pass on their participation in such wars, and I agree."

And says Senator LaFollette: "I believe that if the American people are competent to elect congressmen and senators to make such a tremendous decision, they are equally competent to arrive at the decision themselves."

It is pretty hard to find any flaws in that sort of logic. Early action on one or the other of these two bills would be advisable. The danger of a new world war seems to be getting greater all the time. Here is one safeguard to which the American people are entitled—the right to say for themselves whether they shall send armies to fight overseas. The machinery to give them that right might as well be put in motion at once.

A LITTLE VARIETY IN THE DAY'S WORK

SIDELIGHTS OF INDUSTRY

BIG BUSINESS, SPENDING MONEY, PUTS CASH INTO PEOPLE'S POCKETBOOKS

If you can visualize a railroad freight train 305 miles long, with its 37,500 cars stretching 1,612,500 feet, you will have a mental image of the volume of total purchases of economic necessities by the people of the American petroleum industry in one year.

That train would not be laden with the $876,000,000 worth of supplies and equipment purchased by the industry itself, but would convey merely the food purchased at oil-town stores by those who earn their living in this industry, and by their dependents.

Few realize, when they talk about "big business," and discuss gross income and dividends, that the amount of money remaining in the till is comparatively small when stacked against the enormous amounts passed on in the form of wages, or spent to meet operating expenses, or paid in taxes. Big business makes money, sometimes; but it spends money, always, and that money goes into many pocketbooks.

In the case of the petroleum industry, earnings are only a fraction of wages, and a small amount when compared with taxes. As in the case of other far-flung industrial enterprises, the money passes on, and is distributed in the channels of trade, the only economic method of distributing the wealth.

Communities known as "oil towns" because of their proximity to oil-producing, refining or other operations, often owe their existence to the fact that oil money goes into the hands of oil workers, and finally into local trade.

Oil industry employees and their dependents spend the money for food, clothing, shelter and other necessities, and so "little business," or local trade, shares the financial productivity of "big business," or industry.

Spending Oil Money in the Home Town

Oil-town storekeepers and tradespeople long have regarded oil company employees as good customers. Oil folks and their families maintain high standards of living. Their wages are among the highest paid by industry, their employment, comparatively is steady.

And not only the oil towns, but all communities benefit by their trade, for every community today has a local oil business in one form or another. It may be only a service station, or a bulk plant, or a pipe line pumping station, but oil money eventually finds its way into the town.

This money is not necessarily part of the $2,400,000 per day the industry spends for supplies and equipment. It is a part of the $1,500,000,000 a year the industry pays in wages.

How the Money is Spent

Some people keep busy spending money, and others keep busy finding out how they spend it. Some of these money researchers recently studied the spending my oil-company employees in the large cities and small towns of a mid-western state. Their reports present a satisfactory cross-section of the local trade derived from oil money and employees.

It was found that 30c of every wage dollar went for food. About 20c went for rent, 11c for clothing, furniture and similar items, and 6c for electricity, gas, telephones, etc. Doctors and dentists, drug stores, garages and miscellaneous professions a n d trades received 20c of the wage dollar. And 13c thriftily was tucked away in the bank, or invested in insurance.

Applying expenditures at these rates to the industry's 1,000,000 wage-earners and the 3,000,000 people they support, we find that home-town trade shares $450,000,000 spent for food; $300,000,000 for rent; $165,000,000 for clothing and furniture; $90,000,000 for public utility service, and $300,000,000 for professional services, drugs, motor vehicle upkeep, and miscellaneous expenses.

Here's that Freight Train Again! It is not difficult to estimate volume of purchases. In the case of food, oil workers buy more than 500,000,000 pounds of meat, 380,000,000 pounds of bread, 290,000,000 quarts of milk, 77,000,000 pounds of butter and cheese, 52,000,000 dozens of eggs, 15,000,000 pecks of fruit, 524,000,000 pounds of potatoes, 263,000,000 pounds of fresh vegetables, and 555,000,000 pounds of flour and meal.

Naturally, this annual supply of food has to be transported, so here comes that freight train again! So vast a shipment weighs close to 1,500,000 tons, so the railroad people put together a real train and put a good many thousand railroaders to work, just to feed the oil people. No estimate can be made of the extent of business which goes back to the farmers who produce all these eatables, nor is it possible to estimate how many motor trucks supplement the railroad service.

Equally impossible of estimate is the trade of wholesalers, jobbers, handlers, commission merchants, storage plants, men all along the line. Customers for all these fields, however, we can depend on the government's 1935 census of business to help out. Based upon census figures, it is estimated that the oil people supported 29,000 retail stores employing nearly 70,000 clerks, delivery boys and other workers!

Customers for All For

Another big item is the $300,000,000 paid in the form of rent to the nation's landlords. A large proportion of this money is spent immediately for maintenance, so the oil people contributed to the welfare of many thousands of plumbers, carpenters, painters, and indirectly traded with thousands of hardware, electrical goods, plumbing supply, and other shops, lumber yards, etc. Indirectly also they contributed to the business of many large industries, such as steel, glass, paint, automotive and lumber.

That $165,000,000 item for clothing, furniture and similar goods meant trade for 3,500 clothing and furniture stores, and probably a goodly number of department stores as well. Other expenditures similarly meant trade for other retail sales outlets.

Furthermore, a goodly portion of the oil money spent in trade and for rent and professional service went to pay sales taxes, real property taxes, income taxes and other levies, greatly increasing the revenue of more than $1,000,000,000 a year that government receives from the operations of the petroleum industry itself. It is impossible to estimate how many tax collectors and government employees the money supported, but it may be regarded as a growing number!

CHALLENGE TO CHIZZLEWITS

There once was a merchant named Chizzlewit who trimmed his tree every Christmas and his customers every day.

He was a canny creature, this Chizzlewit, and knew how to win a customer by guile. The shirts he sold were cheaply woven, packed with powder to make them seem firm. To conceal their inferiority he told customers that he always wore them himself. In the glassware department he "made up" for poor quality by giving a set of pretty paper doilies with every purchase. He knew many such clever tricks and used them without reserve.

Chizzlewit never advertised. He knew too well he could never fool people for long in print. Advertising must live up to its own claims. That is why you can have full confidence in goods consistently advertised. If the maker has a worthy produce, fairly priced, he wants as many people as possible to know about it. If the product is unworthy, the printed word will only expose it sooner.

Christmas, and all around the calendar, read advertising. Makers and merchants stake their reputation, in cold black type, that what you read is true.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

Volcanic Bombs frequently are found near active volcanoes. These objects are hurled from the volcano while in a viscous state, and the rotary motion shapes them into spheres. One sees on pine trees does not exist in the tree as such, but forms only on the surface, at the point of a wound, as a healing substance! There are only six tastes... Sweet, salt, sour, bitter, metallic and alkaline, but flavors abound in almost unlimited numbers.

Volcanic bombs vary in size from that of a baseball to huge masses six feet in diameter, and they may be spherical or pear-shaped. The surface may be smooth or covered with fissures.

STANDARD FORD V-8... 112" wheelbase; 85 or 60 hp. engine; Improved Easy-Action Safety Brakes; Broadcloth or Mohair upholstery, Mohair extra in '60'; One tail light, one sun visor; Twin horns; 3 body types; 3 colors.

FORD offers two new cars for 1938—the Standard Ford V-8 and the De Luxe Ford V-8. They are different in appearance—but built to the same high standard of mechanical excellence—on the same chassis.

Because people liked our 1937 car so well, they bought more than of any other make. They liked its looks, its smooth, economical performance, and the way it handled. We have improved on that car in the newly styled Standard Ford V-8.

But some folks wanted still more size and style, with the same Ford advantages. For them, we designed a new De Luxe line.

The De Luxe Ford V-8 Sedans are longer with more room, larger luggage space, and finer appointments. De Luxe cars are equipped with the 85-horsepower engine only.

The Standard is even lower priced than the De Luxe. It has graceful new lines and well-tailored interiors. It gives you again a choice of V-8 engine sizes—85 horsepower or 60 horsepower.

Before Ford made V-type 8-cylinder engines available to every one, they were used only in expensive cars. Since then, four million Ford owners have learned the genuine enjoyment of driving an eight-cylinder car with all-around economy.

The thrifty "60" engine, especially, makes possible in Standard models a very low first cost and equally low operating cost.

BOTH LINES LOW PRICED

With two distinct designs, two engine sizes and two price ranges, you'll find a 1938 Ford car to fit your needs exactly. Whichever one you choose you get the same proved Ford features.

PRICES FOR CARS DELIVERED IN DETROIT—TAXES EXTRA Standard Ford V-8 (60 hp.)—Coupe, $599; Tudor, $644; Fordor, $689. Standard Ford V-8 (85 hp.)—Coupe, $629; Tudor, $669; Fordor, $714. De Luxe Ford V-8 (85 hp. only)—Coupe, $689; Tudor, $729; Fordor, $774; Convertible Coupe, $774; Club Coupe, $749; Convertible Club Coupe, $804; Phaeton, $824; Convertible Sedan, $904.

Standard and De Luxe cars equipped with bumpers, bumper guards, spare wheel, tire, tube, tire lock and band, cigar lighter, twin horns, and headlight beam indicator on instrument panel, at no extra charge.

In addition, De Luxe cars are equipped with extra tail light, windshield wiper, sun visor; also de luxe steering wheel, glove compartment lock, clock, and chrome wheel bands, at no extra charge.

CHARACTERS
ROBERT BARRY—hero, who has been known to do just that with other men, and daring them ever to resent to. But—at that instant Honey Bee Girl appeared.

"Supper is ready," she announced, "and Bawb say to tell you not to wait for them, as they might not be back at all."

Before Hades' astonishment had fully cleared, Holliman was sitting down at the crude camp table, dishing up a pint or so of rich red chili. The old man discharged enough tobacco juice to drown a good-sized mammal, tabbed his plans for discipline, and went glaring into supper himself.

HE got up before Holliman did, and walked to the foot of the castle cliff.

BANG! BANG!

Holliman and Honey Bee peered out in alarm. But Hades was only signalling. His old neck was craned upward, studying the castle.

He fired again, twice rapidly. It was a time-honored call of the outdoors—for anyone within hearing to answer or come. Hades never thought but what Bob Barry would know it, and answer if he heard.

"They ain't up there," the old man muttered presently, and came back to the dining tent.

"Holliman," he began, his eyes flashing, "I come dang nigh killin' you a while ago. You ain't old enough to know better yet in some ways, and it may cost you. We ain't known to each other plumb good yet. Now I don't want no trouble, but you don't be so free and careless with yore tongue, young feller. This Barry is our boss. You can quit any time; we c'n git more help, if I have to ride in after it. But by god, Holliman, I'll kill you dead—n a petrified snake of you git too fresh! You savvy?"

He leaned forward just a little, hands ready to draw. He was a trifle comical, because of his wrinkles and his stoop. But there was no mistaking his earnestness. He meant precisely what he said.

Holliman tightened. He had started to grin at an old man, but he didn't. The keen old eyes spoke a silent warning more potent than the words. Holliman moved very slowly—hands away from his hips.

"All right, Jones. Forget it. You're old. I ain't goin' to fight no oldtimer."

It was a wise decision. But the situation was still shaky.

"You been eyin' Miss Lissa yoreself, Holliman. I seen you. I know th' signs. Waal, that ain't no insult, as such. Any young man'd be a fool not to set up to her. Ef she wants you it's her business; but you be dang shure she does. Now I wanta know—do you know where they're at now? Why ain't they here? It's well after dark."

HOLLIMAN had been surprised indeed to hear that old Hades knew of his "settin' up" to Mary Melissa. The old fool must have eyes everywhere! But this was no time to argue. Besides, his own curiosity about the missing pair was mounting.

"I swear I don't know, Hades. And quit bein' warlike. I told you I ain't fightin'."

Hades grunted.

"Woman," he called to Honey Bee, "come out here. What about the two bosses? Where they at?"

"They are not here," said Honey Bee, stupidly.

Hades bridled again. Contempt almost sufficed him. But Holliman spoke first.

"Well where are they?" The younger man was equally interested.

"They have gone, for maybe a long time," Honey Bee declared.

"Hell, didn't they say where?" Hades was losing patience.

"They just say tell you both make thee better camp, thee better corral for thee mules and horses," Honey Bee spoke slowly, stalling. Then she had an idea. "Meester Bawb, he say must go. Maybe all day, maybe longer. They take food, canteen, go that way."

She pointed—not toward the cliff dwelling, but in the opposite direction. The men grumbled about it at length, but after all the note Bob had left also told them to go ahead with their own work, and forget about him and Lissa. Suspicious thus were not aroused, at the time.

An hour later, though, Hades went for a last night check-up on the horses and mules—his regular job.

"Shucks!" he suddenly exclaimed. "Their horses is both here!"

Bob and Mary Melissa wouldn't have started to go far on foot. The old man turned to stare back at the camp, suspicious, confused. He didn't trust that Indian girl. Nor Holliman.

LET'S KNOW TEXAS

Q. Who led the Gallegos party to Texas and from what place did it start?

A. Gallegos had with him in the party that started from the Spanish outpost of Santa Barbara, Francisco Sanchez Chamuscado, who was appointed leader, and three friars, Frays Agustin Rodriguez, Juan de Santa Maria and Francisco Lopez, besides nine soldiers and nineteen Indian servants.

Q. What caused the Gallegos expedition to return to Mexico after meeting the Querecho Indians?

A. Ill will and open hostilities of the Querechos, whom they encountered, who so greatly outnumbered the Spaniards, determined them to go back. Frays Rodriguez and Lopez refused to return, preferring to remain and preach to the Indians.

Q. What did Gallegos learn about Cabeza de Vaca's wanderings across Texas?

A. In answer to inquiries as to whether other Christians had been in the country, Gallegos was told by Jumanos Indians that many years before four Christians had passed that way. The descriptions of these showed that the party must have been Cabeza de Vaca and his companions.

Q. Where was Estevanico killed and how did Fray de Niza learn of it?

A. Estevanico went ahead of de Niza with a few Indians, who led him to Hawika, the first of the Cibola pueblos of which such mythical reports had been made, where Indians fell upon him and killed him. A young Indian of Estevanico's party escaped and returned to meet de Niza and report the Moor's death.

Q. What caused the Gallegos expedition to return to Mexico after meeting the Querecho Indians?

A. Ill will and open hostilities of the Querechos, whom they encountered, who so greatly outnumbered the Spaniards, determined them to go back. Frays Rodriguez and Lopez refused to return, preferring to remain and preach to the Indians.

WASHINGTON—Senator Tom Connally of Texas, who doesn't like the anti-lynching bill, may have done that measure a very good turn during his filibuster against it.

The senator's filibuster was featured by the reading of a speech against an anti-lynching bill once delivered by Senator Hugo Black, now a Supreme Court justice, and by Connally's reiteration that Black was certain to hold the Wagner anti-lynching measure unconstitutional because he couldn't "eat those words."

Well, it's fairly certain that there will be an anti-lynching act sooner or later and that eventually the law will come up to the Supreme Court for a test of its validity. And at that time it is not very likely that Justice Black will participate in the decision.

Whether he should or not was a question in a rather delicate question in an event. But Connally has put Black quite definitely on the spot and the chance that he might participate in any decision invalidating an anti-lynching law is now much more remote. Black is anxious to make a name for himself and is hardly likely to brave the public outcry which such action would invoke.

Speculation as to how the court might divide is rather futile as the composition of the court at that indefinite future time is pure guess work. But there have been four to four decisions which meant nothing except that the ruling of the lower court was permitted to stand and it is easy to imagine an equally split vote on anti-lynching if Black refrains from participation.

VICE PRESIDENT JOHN NANCE GARNER, the wealthy banker from Uvalde, Tex., is host at his hotel as well as in the Senate.

Every so often the hotel's dinner menu includes a steak on the $1.25 dinner which does not appear on the $5-cent dinner. On such occasions Garner demands his rights and they tactfully give him the steak on the $5-cent plate.

NEW YORK—Mr. Lester Patrick, who in touching upon hockey should know whereof he speaks, shook his head sadly and remarked on the pity of it all.

"Look," he said, "they furnish us with the greatest of professional football players—plenty of big-league baseball talent—but they can't give us any big-time hockey prospects. No sir, they can't."

The major-domo of the New York Rangers, and the most learned man in the ice sport today, was speaking about our colleges.

"You can take some big sophomore, fresh out of the farm or out of the mines, and if he weighs upwards of 200 pounds and can move one leg after another in a logical enough fashion to run, you're apt to have yourself a pretty good football player within six weeks—maybe even an All-American."

"You can learn to play football. It might take some guys two, three years to catch on to the signals but at least they can learn the mechanical aspects of the thing almost to perfection."

"SAME thing to a great extent in baseball. If a boy has some ability a good manager can bring it out of him. I guess you can apply that principle to anything but hockey."

In order to play hockey you've got to be able to skate, he explains first of all. In order to skate you've got to have ice. A lot of ice. Not just two, three months of the year, but four and even five months.

Hockey, of course, may be considered Canada's national game. Practically all the great players in the National League were Canadian or Canada-bred. The New York Rangers are a 100 per cent Canadian outfit.

Kids in Canada don't play marbles and baseball in their younger days. They skate. And they don't lack the ice.

Collegiate hockey in the United States is centered in the east for the most part. Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Boston College, Brown and a few others have pretty good clubs. But Patrick can't get any more out of that than that.

There's a gleam of hope, however, in the great north country—Minnesota, Wisconsin and out in Washington. College hockey is thriving hold there and something might come out of it. And the reason, of course, you've already guessed. There's plenty of ice.

"IT'S the old skating problem, time and time again," Lester says. "Give me a kid who skidded out on the pond at the age of four, or so, and skated four months of every year for 10 seasons and I'll show you the makings of a real hockey player."

Only one man, Patrick points out, ever came off an American college rink and made good in pro ranks. That was George Owen, Harvard star of a few years back, who performed with the Boston Bruins and really knew what it was all about.

"Some day, maybe, we'll get another. College hockey has possibilities. Naturally, I'll concede that to be fair."

But Mr. Lester Patrick shook his head in that same sad manner. It was a doubtful concession.

News From 4-H Clubs of County

Uses of a Hotbed in the Home. "A hotbed is a shallow layer of earth enclosed in a low covered frame, heated by fermented manure," states Bertha Marie Whately, garden demonstrator of the Morton Valley Girls' 4-H Club. "Hotbeds have many uses and can furnish the family with fresh vegetables during the winter months. Slow maturing plants can be started in a hotbed while the weather is still cold. These vegetables can be transplanted to the garden when it becomes warmer, thus having early vegetables. The hotbed is especially helpful in

Raising vegetables for an early market:

Preparing a Hotbed. "A hotbed 6x8 feet is large enough for an average size family," states Mildred Skaggs, garden demonstrator of the Flatwoods Girls' 4-H Club. The hotbed should be located in a well drained place on the south side of a farm building that will act as a windbreak. The hotbed pit should be dug the desired size and 18 in. deep. In making the hotbed frame, pieces of 2x2 or 2x4, three feet long, can be used as braces, on to which is nailed the four walls of the frame. The wall is made 18 inches high in the back and 12 inches high in front. The sash for the frame should fit snugly to keep keep out all cold air. This can be made of glass or muslin cloth. By making the covering in one piece, it can be raised on warm days.

Blinders Quiet Barnyard Bully

Deciding he was losing too many birds in barnyard fights, Henry Davis, Concord, Calif., poultry rancher, invented the metal "blinder," shown above, to attach to the beaks of his more pugilistic roosters. ## Oil Developments Near Corpus Christi Continue to Grow

CORPUS CHRISTI—Development which during the first six months of this year opened 30 new oil fields within a 125-mile radius of Corpus Christi has continued during the past few months, raising the total number of producing fields in this area today to 130.

Most of the production, which, based on present allowables, established by the oil and gas division of the Texas Railroad Commission, totals 232,333 barrels per day, comes from wells located within 100 miles of the city.

Second greatest producing county in the area is Nueces county, home of Corpus Christi and its Port. The county is permitted under pre-ratio to run approximately 1,650,000 barrels of oil a month.

The discovery of "black gold" and the development of the oil industry have been tremendous forces in the growth of Corpus Christi, which for the past year has increased in population at a rate of nearly 500 persons per month. The city's population today, based upon school census figures, is approximately 55,000.

During the first nine months of this year 22,230,902 barrels of oil were shipped over the three docks of the Nueces County Navigation Commission at the local port. The oil is brought to the port from the 130 fields by 23 pipe lines.

Nine oil refineries are now operating at Corpus Christi or in the nearby area. The largest plant is owned by the Humble Oil and Refining Company and is located at Ingleside, a division of the Port of Corpus Christi. The Ingleside plant has a daily capacity of 21,000 barrels of crude. The eight other refineries in the area are the Amoco Refining Corporation, the Corpus Christi Refining Co., the Houston Oil Co., of Texas, the Southwestern Oil Refining Co., the Terminal Refinery, the Davis Refinery Co., the Pontiac Refining Corp., and the Clarkwood Refinery at Clarkwood, a few miles west of the city.

The Archbishop Weighs Divorce

Sternness, piety and intense thought, blending in the face of Britain's Archbishop of Canterbury, above, seem to portray better than words his uncorpromising attitude toward divorce, whether it affects king or commoner.
