The Happy Child of Nature

A world in which life keeps getting progressively less simple still looks fondly back at the simple life as one of the supreme blessings attainable by sinful man; and every now and then someone pops up with a reminder that the untutored savage is probably a great deal happier and physically sounder than we are.

The latest bit of evidence along this line comes from a New York scientist who has just got back from a trip along the headwaters of the Amazon.

Along those faroff waterways, this gentleman found jungle tribes who share none of the white man's ways and few of his ills. They go quietly about their business, nothing worries them and nobody hurries them—and they never have cancer, high blood pressure or heart trouble. Many of them live to the age of 100 years and remain hale and hearty to the last.

Which, of course, is just another way of proving that we pay for everything we get in this world. We have a great many things that these remote savages lack, and we couldn't very well get along without them; but we pay for them by living hurried, nervous, fearfully complex lives, and the diseases that lay us low are nothing less than byproducts of our civilization.

But that sort of thing has been said a great many times, and if it makes us yearn for the simple life it doesn't get us any nearer to it; and, indeed, there is no point whatever in dreaming about going back to the good old days, for the simple reason that they are eternally beyond our reach.

For better or for worse, we have got ourselves into a complex and artificial sort of society which cannot very well be simplified. The horse-and-buggy age (to come down a few generations from the day of the simple savage) may have had a leisure and a placid contentment that we do not have, but if we abolished our trains, automobiles and airplanes we should all speedily die. The innumerable complications of the age of machinery may be shortening our lives, but we can't get along without them. We can't turn the clock back, even if we really wanted to. The only possible direction we can travel is forward. And we shall make the kind of progress we need to make only if we stop moaning about the blissful past and start figuring out ways to adjust this modern society of ours to the deep, inner needs of the human spirit. It can be done, if we put our minds to it; but it must be done by looking to the future rather than by trying to get back to the past.

A refrigerator has been invented that will loosen the ice cubes after they're made, but the chances are it won't sell unless it also mixes the drinks, passes them around, and explains what they're made of.

NEW HIGH QUALITY New low price

IF YOU want to save 25% on tires, stop in and see the new Firestone Convoy Tire—the value sensation of 1938. You will find it has everything you want—safety, mileage, blowout protection, new design, new smart appearance—all at a remarkably new low price. And when you see it you will agree that Firestone has again set a new all time high in tire value with these outstanding features.

New High Quality—First choice rubber and cotton selected that conforms to Firestone's high standards and rigid specifications.

Long Mileage—Safe, silent tread design made of tough, slow wearing rubber that assures long mileage. Sturdy bars and rugged notches give protection against skidding.

Blowout Protection—Nine extra pounds of rubber are added to every 130 pounds of cord by the Firestone Patented Gum-Dipping process. Every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber which counteracts internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

Puncture Protection—Firestone's patented construction of two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread protects against punctures.

NEW LOW PRICES—because Firestone saves money by controlling and securing rubber and cotton at the source and by more efficient manufacturing and distribution. These savings make possible the extra values at these new low prices.

Let us put a set of these large sized, rugged, long wearing Firestone Convoy Tires on your car today, then your car will be ready for trouble-free summer driving.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUGGINS, NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Pat Harrison, a right, however, to recall the days...

Of Mississippi sought the majority leadership in the Senate and John J. O'Connor of New York went after the same post in the House...

They were ambitious to reach the highest points in their political careers. And in each case Franklin D. Roosevelt turned thumbs down. Harrison and O'Connor were too conservative for the New Deal...

But they got there just the same. While the men whom the administration preferred to lead its forces have pleaded desperately but impotently for Congress to stand by the President, Harrison and O'Connor have appeared conspicuously as leaders of the anti-Roosevelt coalition...

Both are popular and known generally as "good fellows." So their recent triumphs have been enjoyed by many friendly colleagues who smarted with them when the administration in its palmy days blasted their aspirations...

After the historic defeat of the Roosevelt reorganization bill, O'Connor had some of the correspondents, photographers and others up to the sanctum behind the Rules Committee room and opened the door of an electric refrigerator which contained champagne, whisky and beer...

Perhaps he wasn't thinking of the day of late 1936 when he and his cronies sat in that sanctum and had to mourn collapse of his campaign for the leadership. He had...

Long a Democratic leader and a caustic critic of Republican administrations, Harrison had swallowed many New Deal measures in which he did not believe, while shaking the patronage pliers with heavy hand...

But when Roosevelt openly expressed his preference for the relatively liberal Al Barkley of Kentucky in the face of Harrison's candidacy last year to succeed the late Floor Leader Joe Robinson—and when Barkley won by a single vote which Harrison's emissaries wrangled from Harrison at the last minute, the Pat raged...

SPORT GLANCES - By Grayson

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD, NEA Service Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, O.—Before Mat Mann and Mike Peppe are done the famed feud between the Hatfields and the Coys will have looked like a couple of schoolboys arguing over some marbles...

The Michigan-Ohio State rivalry has been a fierce one for years but no one ever suspected that the boys would get so heated up over their swimming teams...

And now that Ralph Flanagan, the greatest swimmer in the country, has decided to enroll at Ohio State next fall, there has been additional fuel added to the flames...

Under Mann's guidance Michigan has become established as the leading college team in the country. The Wolverines hadn't been defeated in a duel meet in seven years until Mike Peppe's upset Buckeyes twice backwashed the Wolverines in dual engagement this past season...

Mann suffered further humiliation when the Bucks captured the Big Ten crown, but gained a measure of revenge when the Wolves won the National Collegiate meet from the Scarlet by the slender margin of one point...

CAME the National A. A. U. championships and everybody started pulling fat ones in an attempt to walk off with the biggest swimming plum of all...

First Mann tried to use Jack Kasley, number one breast-stroker of a year ago, with his collegiate medley relay team. Kasley already had completed his three-year span of varsity competition with the Wolves but is still in school...

Peppe howled and won his point. Kasley was forbidden to swim with Michigan's medley relay. Meanwhile, Peppe, with plenty of talent available, entered two relay teams instead of the customary one, practically assuring the Bucks of some points in the event...

They had to restrain Mann from jumping into the pool. And then it was discovered that Flanagan would desert the University of Texas to come to Ohio State. It's no obscure fact the Michigan and Ohio State swimmers have been coming from the states of the Union, but Mann seems to have taken it to heart in big way now that he has lost all chances of getting the best swimmer in the country...

FLANAGAN is just that. He's probably the greatest piece of swimming machinery since Weismuller. Big, powerful, his movement through the water is as smooth as the proverbial satin...

He overshadows the nation's middle distance stars completely. Coaches at the A. A. U. meet claimed you couldn't beat him if he had an anchor tied around his middle...

Sports writers in the press section drew numbers out of a hat in friendly little betting pool. Flanagan swam in lane number five in the 500-yard event...

Without a word, and before the race even started, they passed the pot over to the gent who held number five.

Easter Cruise

CASE OF CHARACTERS JOYCE MILLNER, Associate who took an Easter Cruise...

Yesterday Joyce and Dick learn how both have been deceived by Mrs. Porter and Dick asks Joyce to come ashore with him in Kingston.

CHAPTER XVI

THE Empress was riding slowly into Kingston harbor, cutting the clear blue water so quietly that the white foam of the broken waves was scarcely visible.

The doctor stood at the rail with Joyce and Dick, watching the shore line. "You're going to have a beautiful day ashore," he remarked presently.

Later, when he had left them Another, Joyce remembered the matter of their joint profit at the Casino.

It was two hundred and fifty-four dollars, to be exact. They sat down in front of the purser's office and counted it out. Joyce added her half of it, one hundred and twenty-seven dollars, to the twenty still remaining of her bingo winnings.

"I'm richer now by two dollars than when I came aboard," she told him brightly. "And I have a much better-looking pocketbook."

She smiled happily as she tucked the money away.

Dick leaned back against the wall and watched her with unconcealed admiration, approving the quick responsive smile that lighted her face, the soft brown eyes, bright with sincerity and good humor, the sunny upturned nose, sprinkled now with a few sudacious freckles captured under a tropical sun.

"The smartest thing I ever did in my life," he said with sudden tenderness, "was to bump into you that first night out."

Joyce dropped her eyes. "I'm rather glad you did myself," she admitted honestly.

They were among the first passengers who picked their cautious way down the gangplank, eager for a quick appraisal of this new land, their eyes alive with expectancy. The wharf was crowded with native vendors.

Dick hurried Joyce through the alluring displays. "These things will all be here when we get back," he assured her. "You wouldn't start now to load me down with chairs and hats and baskets, I hope."

They emerged from the merchandising chaos, ran the gantlet of chauffeurs and guides and self-appointed counselors, and came at last to the main shopping district.

OAK GROVE

At Oak Groves are finding bits of things to eat in the garden notwithstanding the recent cold weather.

Some of our editors was killed out right but lettuce, mustard, spinach and onions seem to be growing faster than before the storm. Well I have always heard you can't keep a good man (the farmer) down. Now farmers may be good men but it not because he is a farmer. Farming won't make a good man but a good man might make a farmer.

There are a great number of farmers in this community that have come to realize that farming land for all it will make is just plain robbery. And by paying back a little of what we take from the land, in the form of commercial fertilizer the land will give more and still be in better condition at the end of the year than at the beginning.

A goodly number of our farmers also have sent samples of the soil of their respective farms to determine just what formula is best suited for their particular needs. We may expect some real results from some of these old run down farms this fall.

This writer and his family had the joy of listening in at the radio program of the Carbon Baptist church last Sunday morning and heard a real live gospel message and some of the best singing it has been our privilege to listen to in all these years. "Probation after death" is the subject of the lesson sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 24.

The golden text is: "Verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." (John 5:25).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "To whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Our Lord and Master presented himself to his disciples after his resurrection from the grave, as the self-same Jesus whom they had loved before the tragedy on Calvary" (page 317).

Here was the same friendly, conservative atmosphere of Bermuda, except that Kingston bustling with the commercialized importance of a metropolis. Here the slow padding of horse-drawn wagons and carriages was drowned in the hum of up-to-date trucking; lazy darkies, riding to town astride their mules, made way for motorcycle delivery carts.

They walked along, gazing at window displays of Bond Street wares. Kingston left no doubt in the visitor's mind that it was an integral part of the British Empire.

"What do we want first?" Dick inquired. "Scotch tweeds or London boots?"

Joyce's eye caught the beauty of crockery in a shop window. "Let's look at dishes," she urged. "I'd love to get some Wedgewood for Aunt Martha. Isn't it beautiful?"

He grinned. "Plates are plates to me. It's the food upon them that counts. But come on; you might pick out something for my mother, too. She's wacky over dishes."

So she shopped for chinaware in an ecstasy of sheer delight, altogether unmindful that in Haiti she had criticized women who preferred the foolish allure of shops to the greater opportunity of exploring the scenic splendors of a bounteous Nature.

The moments flew by, a brief interlude in paradise, until Dick, trailing along dutifully in her wake, a blue-eyed docile bull in the china shop, murmured an apologetic plea that she make up her mind in time for luncheon.

She bought a dinner set for Aunt Martha—the traditional Wedgewood blue, to match the wallpaper of her dining room. And for Dick's mother she chose, with his enthusiastic approval, an extravagantly dainty Royal Doulton tea set, all gold and green and roses.

He sighed in weary relief as the decisions were made and arrangements completed to have the two sets packaged and delivered to the Empress.

"Thank Heaven people don't have to buy new dishes every day in the week. Do you know how long you've been here?"

"How long?"

"An hour and a half."

"Not really? I'm sorry, Dick. But it's been such fun. I can't wait to see Aunt Martha's eyes when she opens the package. Come now, I'll go wherever you want. It can't be time for luncheon yet."

"It's five to twelve. Suppose I

"Can't I go along?"

"And dawdle another hour and a half? I should say not."

They lunched at the Myrtle Bank Hotel, in a glamorous garden setting of royal palms and Bougainvillea, and across the table he handed her the purchase he had made. "Just a little souvenir of the good times we've had together," Joyce explained.

She opened the box eagerly. There, nesting in its pillow of snowy cotton, was a beautiful hand-wrought silver locket, large as a hen's egg, and hung on a sturdy silver rope-chain. She caught her breath sharply.

"It's lovely, Dick! And so exquisitely made." She held it up to her dress, enjoying the bright contrast of it against the solid blue.

"There's a place inside for a photograph," he offered lightly. She flushed, not knowing what to answer. Yet she could not be embarrassed at the gift. The locket was no garish jewel a wealthy man might offer his light-o'-love, but it was as fine an ornament as one could buy for a friendly keepsake.

"Joyce," he said presently, and his voice was husky with a warm tenderness which sent the blood coursing through her veins. "Do you know that I'm head over heels in love with you?"

She answered, more from nervousness than from any desire to hurt him: "Is that what you told Isobel, too?"

He dropped his eyes, and a deep flush stained her cheeks. She felt a quick shame for her unkindness. She put out her hand contritely. "I'm sorry I said that, Dick," she apologized sincerely. Then, dropping her eyes: "I guess I just didn't know what else to say."

"I thought you might say that you cared a bit for me."

"Oh, I do, Dick. I enjoy every minute of being with you."

"But you don't love me."

"I don't know." But she did know, nevertheless. She knew that if this were another moment, a warm moonlight night on deck, with his arms about her, his eyes imploring, she could not help acknowledge the truth of it. Here at a luncheon table, in the broad light of high noon, with the eyes of waiters and other guests upon them, the words stuck in her throat.

So, the moment passed, and he said no more of it.

J. J. Kelly, city water commissioner, today called attention to the state law concerning tampering with water, electric or gas meters or using any means or device which prevents current, water or gas from registering properly through the meters.

The law is quoted, Kelly stated, because of considerable trouble that has been had recently with city water consumers in regard to their meters.

The state law, which provides fines of not less than $25 and not more than $100, is as follows: Art. 1056 (993) Diverting From Meters

Whoever, intentionally, by any means or device, prevents electric current, water or gas from passing through any meter belonging to a person, corporation or company engaged in the manufacture or sale of electricity, water, or gas, for lighting, power, or other purposes, furnished such person to register the current of electricity, water or gas, passing through meters, or intentionally prevents a meter from duly registering the quantity of electricity, water or gas, supplied or in any way, interferes with its proper action or just registration, or without the consent of such person, corporation or company, intentionally diverts any electric current from any wire, or water or gas from any pipe, or of such person, corporation or company, or otherwise intentionally uses, or causes to be used, without the consent of such person, corporation or company any electricity or gas manufactured, or water produced or distributed, by such person, corporation or company, or any person who retains possession of or refuses to deliver, any meter lamp, or other appliances which may be, or may have been loaned to them by any person, corporation or company for the purpose of furnishing electricity, water or gas through the same, with the intent to defraud such person, corporation or company, shall for every such offense be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. The presence at any time, on or about any such meter, wire or pipe of any device or pipes or wires resulting in the diversion of electric current, water or gas, as above defined or resulting in the prevention of the proper action or just registration of the meter or meters, as above set forth, shall constitute prima facie evidence or knowledge on the part of the person having custody and control of the room or place where such device or pipe or wire is of the existence thereof and the effect thereof and shall further constitute prima facie evidence of intention on the part of such person to defraud and shall bring such person prima facie within the scope, meaning and penalties of this article. Rearing of Game No Great Secret Foundation States

NEW YORK.—Game breeding, long a closely-guarded trade of European game keepers, has lost much of its mystery, according to the More Game Birds Foundation.

Today almost any farmer or sportsman can successfully rear pheasants, quail and other game birds by using modern methods, the foundation states in announcing new editions of its free game breeding manuals.

"While real restoration of game birds in this country depends upon practical game management—restoration of proper environment and limitation of the take to the annual natural surplus—artificial restocking is a speedy way to repopulate barren areas.

"Results of such restocking with pheasants are plainly indicated in present state game laws regulating pheasant hunting, as compared with 20 years ago. Only eight states then permitted pheasant hunting, while 26 states recently had open seasons on this

If Clerks Don't Smile Purchase Is Free

108 Year Old Paper On Invitations to Newspaper Meeting

AUSTIN.—No. 33 of Volume 1 of the Texas Gazette, published at Austin in 1830, has been used as a cover design on an invitation of the University of Texas to newspapermen and women to visit the university on May 2, and inspect its newspaper collection in the library.

The collection includes earlier numbers of the same paper, but the issue of July 31 was chosen because prior ones were too indistinct to permit a clear cut being made from them.
