The Nazi Book Burners Are a Little Too Late

There have been few times in modern history when there were as many reasons for pessimism about the future of civilization as there are today. Nevertheless, it is also true that one's pessimism can very easily be overdone.

For although the de-civilizing forces which are abroad in the world today have a sweep and a power which must not be under-rated, the opposing forces are not without power, either. The picture is black, but it is not all black. The Jeremiahs who currently predict the downfall of civilization may be overlooking a few bets.

There is, for instance, the matter of the book-burners. Shortly after the German Nazis took over Austria, Nazi chieftains announced that they would purge the famous Austrian National Library of all "non-Aryan" volumes. Considering the way they interpreted that sinister catchword in Berlin, this is apt to mean that almost any book which is really worth preserving will get tossed into the bonfire.

Now it happens that the Austrian National Library is one of the great libraries of the world. It contains some 1,200,000 books, including thousands of ancient manuscripts and priceless historical documents. Merely to think of a squad of storm troopers going through that collection with carte blanche to destroy all that is beyond their understanding is enough to make a man shiver.

Such things have happened before. The ancient library at Alexandria, Egypt, was once a treasure-house of human knowledge. When the Mohammedans burned it—on the ground that since all man needed to know was written in the Koran no other books were necessary—the world became measurably poorer, and the slow and painful rise of the human race from barbarism received a measurable set-back.

Yet the book-burners in Cienna do not have the power that the book-burners in Alexandria had, much as they might like to have it. They are operating in a toadily different sort of world; a world which does not sit dumbly by while brute ignorance destroys the heritage of intelligence, but which bestirs itself to make the loss good.

For the world has moved, after all. Man's progress could be delayed some centuries by the destruction of the Alexandria library; it cannot be so delayed by the destruction of the one in Vienna. The widened horizon represented in those books at Vienna does not exist in those books alone. It has been diffused among thinking men all over the world.

All of which is a sign that human civilization rests on stouter pillars now than used to be the case. The militaristic Samsons may be doing their best to throw those pillars down, but the job is beyond them. In the end, it is not quite possible that they will destroy nothing but their own strength?

'Napoleon, Junior' Declared As One Of Better Plays

In the fields of industry, commerce, science and invention the leadership of America and Americans in recent years has been universally recognized. But no such recognition has been accorded to the giant strides made in this country in the realm of fine arts—in literature, music and painting. To take the drama as a concrete example: until a very great majority of all those writing about life, rather than about a pretty, idealized impossible story-book conception of life, were doing their writing in the other side of the Atlantic. We had to look to Europe for a real literature of the drama, but today, although it may not be generally realized, the process is being reversed, and the works of our contemporary American dramatists are entertaining and enlightening more audiences in countries throughout the civilized world than those, perhaps, of any other nation.

In the list of writers who have contributed to this forward march of the American drama, the name of John Hershey must rank high. He has amply demonstrated his ability to portray faithfully, understandingly, humorously, that backbone of our civilization—the average American family. His latest stage success, "Napoleon Junior," a comedy in three acts, which is to be the next presenta-

2. CHECK EQUIPMENT. Price means little, if you pay extra for equipment you've got to have. Ford prices include equipment.
3. COUNT CYLINDERS. More cylinders mean more and smoother power impulses. America's most expensive cars have engines with 8 or more cylinders. Only Ford has been able to offer the basic advantages of 8 cylinders at a low price—with low operating costs. ("Thrifty 60" owners report averages of 22 to 27 miles on a gallon of gas.)

These are only three of the reasons for visiting a Ford dealer before you buy. You'll recognize the rest when you get out on the road in a Ford V-8. You'll realize that it's 8-cylinder quality all the way through!

FORD V-8 PRICES BEGIN AT $599

FOR THE 40-HP. COUPE (ILLUSTRATED) DELIVERED IN DETROIT, TAXES EXTRA

The Tudor Sedan is $644; the Fordor Sedan, $689. With the 85-horsepower V-8 engine, the Coupe is $629; the Tudor, $669; the Fordor, $714.

EQUIPMENT. All prices include front and rear bumpers and bumper guards; spare wheel, tire and tube; tire lock; cigar lighter, one windshield wiper; one sun visor, twin horns, and beam light beam indicator on instrument panel, at no extra charge.

Softball Season To Open Monday With Good Game

The day to which softball fans have been looking forward for several weeks—the opening of the local softball season—will be here tomorrow and the first big game of the season will be played at the Municipal Softball Field beginning at 8 o'clock.

Hanlon and Killingsworth, two of the classiest teams in the local league, will clash in the first game of the season, with the Ranger High School Band, in full uniform, parading before the grandstand, as it did to win recognition at the hand contest at San Angelo last week and at the Oil Belt Safety Conference in Eastland Friday.

All the proceeds from the first games, for which series tickets have been sold, will go into the fund to provide prize money for the winning teams in the league. A schedule of prizes has been worked out whereby five of the six teams will come out winners at the end of the season, with it being possible for the leading team in schedule to win more than $100.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
 JACKIE DUNN—heroine; she wanted to test the stratosphere.
 ROGER BRECKNER—hero; he thought your plan would work out so easily, the way you said it would.
 BEVIL MELROSE—she's a little wild; she wanted Roger.
 SYDNEY LA FARGE—Jackie's mother; she wanted a son-in-law.

Yesterday Roger kissed Jackie, making the engagement more real than she had ever realized it might be. Then, suddenly, she burst into tears.

CHAPTER VI
AFTER Roger had loaned Jackie his pocket handkerchief and apologized profusely she explained she only cried when she was angry. "It's because I thought your plan would work out so easily, the way you said it would," Jackie said, a bit tremulously. "And instead, it's a howling flop. Why, if we're not careful Mother will have us middle-sisting to the tune of Lohengrin next month!"

Roger could think of worse things than that. But he, too, was learning his lessons from bitter experience. His face still stung. So he said, "I told you I had something important to tell you. If it works out, as I hope it will, I think we can tailspin your mother's well-intentioned schemes. But, my love, we will have to put on an act if we are going to put over the idea that we are engaged. That's why," he added, throwing her a grin, "I got slapped. I was only practicing—get me?"

"I get you. But you'll get slapped again, if you keep on practicing," Jackie said. "And remember, please, I'm not 'your love'! I suppose you're right about the act, though. But remember, too, it'll only be put on in public." "I'll remember," Roger promised, rubbing his jaw thoughtfully.

"What was it you had to tell me?" he asked. "It will have to be really good this time. . . aren't you going to drive on? If anyone goes by he'll think we're lovers! Parked on the side of the road like this with the lights turned on."

"He'd have another guess coming," Roger said. "This is more like an amateur boxing match. We'll move on, as soon as I've told you—and this really is good. I think I've met my Santa Claus, Jackie. When I was in Washington."

"SOMEONE who'll back you? Not really!" The golden fires in Jackie's eyes flared anew. "Right, you are. At least, it looks that way. If everything works out," Roger smirked his lips in smug satisfaction. "We may get the whole thing set up in another month. This Santa Claus works fast. There's a new super-charged ship ready for stratosphere tests. It will take an altitude of 50,000 feet, maybe more. And yours truly, my love—forgive me, I forgot again!—but your fiance-by-proxy may land the job."

"Oh, Roger!" Jackie could not say any more. She was so thrilled for him. "I'll know next week," he went on. "So keep your fingers crossed until then. Oh, boy, will that be something! Think of it, Jackie, flying in a new unseen world, a world where the stars always shine in the purple shadows, where the sun is only a silver disc; no clouds, no birds. No storms or air-bumps, either, which is what makes it an aviator's dream."

"It's too magnificent!" Jackie said. "Too big almost to comprehend. And to be one of the first to help make such dreams come true—oh, Roger, why wasn't I born a man!"

He looked at her, her shining eyes more beautiful than any stars or sun. "You do very well as you are," he said. "Like every man since Adam, he did not want his woman to change. He would do the man's work, if she would only have faith in him. "You can practically go with me," he promised. "If I get the breaks and get my chance, I'll arrange so you can listen in at the radio-lower. I'll send you messages all the way up, so you'll almost think you're in the ship with me."

"Oh, Roger!" It was all Jackie could say again. She slipped an arm through his, squeezed it hard. Her heart was so full she thought it would burst. She would try to be unselfish, be happy with him. Since she wasn't a man, it was almost the next-best thing to know one like Roger.

"It's what I've always wanted to do," Roger said. "It will be the beginning for a lot of things for me. No more crazy test-dives, photographic mapping, or teaching dubs how to fly."

"I LIKE that!" She pretended indignation. "Calling me a dub! And what will I do for an instructor, please? Just when I'm getting ready to solo and everything."

"I didn't mean you. You're okay. Good reflexes and rhythm—if you'd been a man you'd make a swell pilot, Jackie."

"Don't rub it in!" "Sorry. But it's the truth. You can't change the world too quickly. Maybe some day women will be the leaders in aviation—look at the way they run affairs in their homes now! I know darn well you'll boss the guy you marry. . . ."

"But I'm not going to marry anyone—unless Mother manages to make me, as she gives every evidence of doing the way things are stacking up. Roger, you said you had another idea. Something to do with what you've just told me. I don't see how your stratosphere flight can make things any easier."

"We'll tell your mother we can't make any definite plans until I've made my flight," Roger explained. Jackie considered. "That ought to hold her off a while," she agreed. "But after the flight?"

"One thing at a time!" he reminded. "Maybe my oxygen tube will spring a leak, or my body expand to the bursting point. . . ."

"Roger!" "Well, I was only trying to be a little bit, the way she had reacted to that."

"You ought to be ashamed to say such things!" She looked as though she would like to slap him again. Then suddenly her eyes turned stary, her lips tremulous, she was all tender femininity and yielding sweetness, as unthinkingly she caught his arm, pressing close to him again. "You didn't mean it! It's not that risky!" She was seized with that unexplainable panic once again, that sickening emptiness.

"I was kidding," he said lightly. But he put his two hands on her shoulders and pushed her gently from him.

"When! He'd rather do any number of test-dives, climb to any stratospheric heights, than have Jackie, looking like that, so unbearably close, yet so unattainably far from him."

She sank back, releasing another big sigh. Relief flooded through her, as though she had been made whole again. "Who is this wonderful Santa Claus?" she murmured. "You didn't tell me his name, Roger. Or anything about him."

"Didn't I?" Roger laughed. "It isn't a mister, Jackie, at all. This happens to be Mrs. Santa Claus Mrs. Bevil Melrose, to be exact."

"Mrs. Bevil Melrose?" Jackie repeated.

"But the name did not mean anything to her then."

Moses Austin Not Only Old Patriot to Go Unrecognized

By United Press

AUSTIN—An unsuccessful attempt to have the remains of Moses Austin brought to Texas for interment in the State cemetery, recalls that another of the prime actors in the establishment of Austin's colony never has received State recognition.

John Hawkins of New Orleans financed the colonization enterprise. Stephen F. Austin applied to Hawkins for aid when his father, Moses Austin, directed Stephen to carry on the project.

Hawkins is rarely mentioned in connection with the movement that resulted in the settlement of Texas by Anglo-Saxons. He gets barest reference in historical documents of the time.

At last reports, Potosi, Mo., seemed to have the best of the argument about the resting place of Moses Austin. An undertaker sent by the Texas Board of Control to get the remains returned empty-handed. The attempt was made on the anniversary of the battle of San Jacinto. In this combat Texas, not the enemy, was routed.

TEXAS BREAD WEEK is vital to everyone in the Lone Star State because it will help increase consumption of our farm products. From the Panhandle comes wheat . . . the finest in the world. From our modern mills come flour of superior quality. Our cotton industry provides cottonseed-oil used for shortening in baking. Dairy farmers of Texas provide milk and butter which are the good companions of bread. A larger market for these important farm products is made possible when we eat more bread . . . therefore TEXAS BREAD WEEK is important to the agricultural and industrial welfare of the State.
