BRITAIN PUTS POWER BEHIND PEACE MOVE

Great Britain threw her full strength behind European peace today, while in the Far East Japan struck with redoubled fury in her conquest of China. The British bid, backed by powerful air rearmament to prevent a German war on Czechoslovakia, was far more determined than expected. Konrad Henlein, Czech Nazi leader, flew to London to discuss German minority demands. In Asia two powerful Japanese armies were wrecking defense lines in North China where the Chinese had hundreds of thousands of troops along the Lunghai railroad. At the same time Japanese naval and air forces along the South China coast, gave strong indications that a delayed offensive in that area, where Britain has huge interests, was about to open. The American Baptist mission and Italian Catholic mission at Chengchow, near Hankow, were bombed today by Japanese airplanes, causing heavy Chinese casualties and widespread damage. The chapel of the Presbyterian mission in Suchow was demolished in yesterday's air raids, in which 200 refugees were killed, according to reports today.

Man's Inventiveness as a Two-Edged Tool

One of the things that make our modern age so hard to understand and manage is the fact that most of its greatest achievements can produce evil as well as good. They are two-edged tools, and someone is apt to get cut whenever intelligence or good will is lacking in the handling of them. The United Press wires carried recently a little story that spoke volumes on this point. The story was from Bakersfield, California, and it read like this:

The city schools are having difficulties with 16 Chinese children who were sent here from the battle areas in China. They do not speak English, and when airplanes fly over the city they hide to escape bombs. It is sometimes difficult to locate them afterward.

There is hardly a city in America where the sound of airplanes flying overhead is not a familiar every-day thing. The ordinary American youngster does not look up when he hears the motors in the sky; if he gives the matter a second thought—late at night, perhaps, when he lies in bed and hears the mail plane going through—he feels a little glow of excitement at the romance and wonder of human flight.

Now the romance and wonder of human flight are perfectly genuine, and the airplane has abundantly justified itself by the work it has done in peaceful America. In China it is another story, and the Chinese children react very differently.

There is no casual acceptance of the airplane in their make-up, and no thrill at its romantic wonder. They know it is an instrument of terror; a fearsome thing which drops death from the skies, destroys villages, kills helpless children, breaks up families and turns the smiling surface of earth into a smoking hell. Small wonder that they run for cover when a plane goes by! It is not hard to see why "it is sometimes difficult to locate them afterward."

So we get here a prime example of the double-edged nature of the tools which modern inventiveness has placed in our hands.

The airplane in itself is a marvelous achievement. It can be used to open new frontiers and to strengthen the bonds which bind men together in harmonious industry. But it can also be used to inflict horrors unheard of upon helpless people; and when it is so used it becomes an agent in the destruction of civilization itself.

And much the same thing seems to be true of nearly all of our pet achievements. We have such a highly integrated and elaborately organized civilization that when our own stupidity or folly throws it into reverse it can do great damage to a great many people. War is more destructive than formerly, dictatorship is more efficient and violent, economic distress more far-reaching.

Which simply means that our responsibility is greater now than ever before. We can hurt ourselves more than we once could. It is up to us to learn how to live in the miraculous new world we have created.

India keeps up with the times. Thirty-five men have been arrested there for selling a native drink as genuine Scotch.

A man was held up with a beer bottle the other day, and don't think he isn't mad as hops.

THE CALL OF THE GREAT OUTDOORS

High School Auto Death Rate Is Up By 130 Per Cent

NEW YORK — Automobile drivers of high-school age are involved in the times as many fatal accidents, per miles driven, as the driver of 45 to 50 years, according to an analysis of road accidents published today by The American Magazine.

"Furthermore, the high-school record has been getting worse," the magazine states. "In the last seven years there has been a 25 per cent decrease in traffic deaths of children 5 to 9 years old, and only a slight increase in those 10 to 14. That is, the safety campaigns to teach children to watch out for themselves in the streets are having their effect."

"But in the ages 15 to 19, the high-school age, there has been in this same period an increase of 130 per cent in traffic deaths. The reason is obvious. Fifteen is about the age when children begin to drive."

Pointing out that this age of greatest danger is also the best age for teaching motor car operation, the article urges wide extension of such work as that now being done by Amos Neyhart, former professor of industrial management at Pennsylvania State College, who is heading up a national program for training high-school students to drive.

Nearly 200 high schools are now using this plan of instruction, the article states, and this summer 60 to 70 colleges will have courses for high-school teachers in the technique of teaching automobile operation.

"Ultimately," it predicts, "a motorcar for teaching driving, or a fleet of such cars, will be as much a recognized part of the

First Year Death Claims Total 83,000 During Past Year

NEW YORK — Approximately 83,000 active and healthy people in the United States, who took out life insurance policies during 1932, died within from one day to twelve months after buying a policy. Such first-year death claims, more than a third of them resulting from accidents to adults, totaled $25,000,000, according to a nationwide survey made up by the Weekly Underwriter, insurance trade publication.

Returns on the investment of one year's premium averaged about 2,500 per cent. Many double indemnity benefits were under 40. Pneumonia was one of the leading causes for first-year claims.

About 25,000 claims were paid to families of policyholders who lived less than three months after taking out life insurance. One large company alone reported more than 6,000 policies that became claims before a quarter of a year had elapsed.

"The army of early claimants who bought their policies 'just in time' were healthy and active when they applied for insurance," the Weekly Underwriter points out. "They were considered good insurance risks. Many of them could look forward to a normal expectancy of 30 or 40 years. Yet within a few months they had passed on, from some cause that could not be foreseen."

"If a policyholder lives only equipment of any progressive high-school as is today the kitchen equipment in the domestic science course or the tools in the manual training shop, and a driving course will be required before graduation from a public high school."

long enough to pay one year's premium, his beneficiary receives a return on his life insurance investment averaging 2,500 per cent, depending on the form of policy purchased, his age and other factors. Where death is due to accident, and the double indemnity clause was included in the contract, the payment of double the face value of the policy represents a much larger return on the premium investment.

"There were numerous cases where death occurred before the policy could be delivered, or within a few days after the application was signed, and the benefits were in full force only because of pre-payment of the premium. In such instances a few days' delay in applying for life insurance, or neglect to make a premium deposit with the application, would have deprived dependents of needed protection."

"These quickly maturing policies indicated a weekly average last year of 1,600 claims for over $1,115,000 insurance. Considered on the basis of daily payments, there were 230 first year policy settlements totaling close to $160,000 for every single day of the year."

Newspaper Editor Is "Scooped" Upon Story All His Own

By United Press
EL PASO—Even the editor of a newspaper may be "scooped" by the opposition when he has been "holding back" a news story which seems particularly important to him.

W. J. Hooten, city editor of a local paper, had been saving such a story for some time. Then the news "broke" just in time for the competing daily to carry it first.

Mrs. Hooten gave birth to a son just after her husband's paper circulated its final edition of the day.

for the west coast quite as soon as he had anticipated. He was obliged to "hang-around," as he expressed it, until the weather was more favorable.

"I don't want anything to happen on the way out—before I get to make my flight," he told Jackie, his blue eyes earnest. "I've got to make good on this now. If anything happened and I felt I had Beryl down, after having her pick me for the job, I'd never be able to look her in the eye again. She's a wonderful person, Jackie—you've no idea."

It seemed to Jackie that she had been hearing how wonderful Beryl was often enough lately to arrive at some conception.
"If aviation ever achieves its ultimate goal, it will be because of people like her," Roger said.
"People who are willing to give not only thousands of dollars, but their time and almost their very heart itself. People with foresight and vision."

"You forget even such wonderful people have to have pilots to fly their ships," Jackie broke in.
"You're the one who's taking the chance, Roger. Sometimes I think people like Mrs. Melrose—and I know you think she's perfection personified—simply like to share in the reflected glory of someone else. I suppose if you break all records on this trial flight, I'll think she did it—and want all the medals."

ROGER stopped chewing the end of his toothpick; he glanced across at Jackie; they were having hamburgers and coffee at the Airport Inn, waiting for Beryl Melrose to join them. This might be their last meeting for some time as, if the weather "broke," everything was in readiness for the take-off.
"Why don't you like Beryl?" Roger asked. "She thinks you're swell, Jackie. She told me so—just the other day." His eyes crinkled at their corners. "Not still jealous, are you? Now that we're really engaged," Jackie had absolutely sold him on her idea.

Since the night of the announcement party—and that kiss behind the banked flowers—Roger believed Jackie intended to marry him on his return.

"Certainly I'm not jealous!" Jackie flared. Just the same she did not like the other girl any better than she had from the first.
"Except that I think I'm the one who should be going with you to the coast. But of course I'm only your fiancée, not a beautiful widow with millions of dollars to buy my way anywhere. It seems to me, Roger, she should be satisfied to stay here and wait, the same as I must do."

"After all, it's her ship," Roger reminded. "It's only natural she should want to go along. If it weren't for my arguments against her, Beryl would make the trial flight with me. She's that interested—and plucky."

"I suppose you told her it was much too dangerous for her!" Jackie said, with some bitterness.
"It's too risky for any woman," Roger said. "But that wasn't my main argument. I want as light a load as possible to make the fastest possible speed. And—this may sound selfish—but somehow I want to feel I've done this all alone."

JACKIE could understand that; it was the way she would want it, too.

"See here," Roger changed the subject abruptly; he leaned toward her, his blue eyes earnest again.
"There's something I want to give you, Jackie, before I go—that is, if you'll wear it." He looked as though he did not know quite how to say what he wanted to say; as though he still felt uncertain as to how Jackie would react to it.

She said, "What do you want me to wear?" carelessly, not prepared for what would come next.
"Why not?"

He looked at her another moment searchingly, direct. Then he unfastened the small aviation pin, symbol of his achievements, that he always wore clasped to his lapel. "I want you to wear it," he said, offering it to Jackie. "Until I come back . . . and if anything should happen . . . Well, I haven't anything else much to leave you, my love."

For once Jackie did not ask him not to call her that. He had said it in such a different way, not on airline; always landing on time.

Signs point to the likelihood that in the pursuit of his ambitions Hitler is not going to be executed.

that light note of mockery. He had said it as though he had meant it. But that had not been what made Jackie draw back.
"No, no," she said. "I can't take it, Roger." This was going a bit too far with her joke. Somehow it might make the last laugh bitter-sweet.

"Why not?"
"You told me you'd never fly without it—that it brings you luck."

"It will bring me more, if you wear it for me this time."
"I'd rather not."
"Please do!" His tone was urgent, as though more than she knew depended upon it. "I can't give you a ring, or anything else, Jackie. Not until I get back. I want you to wear it. I'm asking you to."

"IN that case . . ." Jackie reached out for it, but still reluctantly.

"Here . . . let me pin it on you!" He was on his feet, bending over her, his fingers fumbling at the lapel of her coat—the lapel that was over her heart. His face, almost as flushed as her own, was close now, his eyes looking into hers a breathless moment. "To pledge our truth . . ." he said, in a voice curiously unlike his own.

"Oh, here you are!" Another voice—Beryl Melrose—broke in on them, shattering the moment as though it had been made of thin crystal, delicately wrought.
Then she must have been aware that she had shattered something.
A flash of pain swept her face, as though it had been something within herself. "I have been looking for you. I've got great news . . ." She sat down in the chair Roger had vacated, her manner poised as usual, her smile as gracious.

But Jackie had seen her face when it had been unguarded. She had seen that flash of pain. Somehow she could not feel as resentful toward this other girl now. Or as triumphant for herself.

"We can take off in the morning," Beryl said now. "The weather's cleared. The bureau reports just came in, clear-from the coast. No more waiting, Roger.
Isn't that grand?"
"Swell!" Roger said briefly. But it was enough. His blue eyes, looking into Beryl's, were alight with the fire of all his dreams. He had forgotten Jackie's existence once more. This moment belonged just to Beryl.

WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Long experience in political warfare might well have taught Mr.
Roosevelt never to lead with his chin. If so, he forgot the lesson when he invited Mr. Henry Ford to the White House.

As a political boner, that one ranks only with the enticement of the "little business men" to Washington in the hope that they would give the President and his policies a pat on the back. Mr. Ford is an American tradition and his support at this time would have been great boon.

But almost anyone who knew the automobile man could have told the President that Ford could be counted on to cast more raspberries than poses. What the President did was to hand Ford the White House as a sounding board for some criticisms of the New Deal.

The invitation was based on a supposition that Ford would feel inspired to deliver a public message full of co-operation, confidence and good cheer. Mr. G. Hall Roosevelt, brother of F. D. R., that Ford would be so impressed with he show that he would publicly support the current administration recovery effort. Bar G. Hall Roosevelt is in the dog-house now.

Versions as to what was said at the White House conference differ. One story is that Ford commented snappily on various New Deal theories, especially those of Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, firm believer in the necessity of spending for recovery.

According to most sources, however, all was amiable and the conversation rather general except for some explanation by Roosevelt and Eccles of what the government was trying to do. The one sure thing is that no one sold Henry on anything.

After the luncheon and conference Ford seemed in some doubt as to just who Eccles really was.
Ford has his peculiarities. The last memorable occasion on which he visited the White House was in the early weeks of the 1929-33 depression when President Hoover summoned an array of the big men of industry and finance.

Ford sat through the conference and never said a word. But after it was all over he slipped a piece of paper to a friend among the horde of correspondents outside. All the message on this paper—obviously prepared in advance—said, was that Ford would raise wages and reduce the price of automobiles.

Ford copped all the headlines and made Mr. Hoover very sour.
Less than five years ago the late Senator James Couzens had advised Roosevelt to invite Ford to the White House and make friends with him, pointing out that Ford didn't like Wall Street any better than did the President.

But Ford declined. The government had stopped buying his automobiles because he wouldn't play ball with NRA and Ford told friends he wouldn't let it look as if he had gone to Washington to dicker over a few dollars.

No more invitations went to Dearborn until G. Hall Roosevelt recently acted as fixer.

aces, regardless of their financial status—is the dream of Dr.
F. M. Kersheville, head of the University of New Mexico Spanish department.
Dr. Kersheville, who spoke before the state convention of the Pan American Round Tables recently, advocated the establishment of such a university in the Southwest, preferably at San Antonio or Santa Fe, in the near future.
In such an institution, the educator said, the English and Spanish languages, the geography, traditions and culture of the Americas could be stressed. He advocated also the establishment of chairs of Pan-Americanism in all major universities in all American nations.

Assailing the Mexican War of 1846 and the more recent Spanish-American War as "without justification," Kersheville said that the movement for inter-American peace should be pushed with the same aggressiveness that always marks the prosecution of a war.
In developing Pan-Americanism, he said, the American public should drop the practice of judging the Mexican people by poons brought to the United States to compete with native labor.

Oregon History Is Found to Be Error

By United Press

SALEM, Ore.—Oregon history between 1824 and 1850 is inaccurate and will have to be rewritten, according to Dr. Burt Brown Barker, vice president at the University of Oregon.
Dr. Barker said the real history of Oregon during that period is in the records of the Hudson Bay Company and is yet unpublished.
While visiting in London recently Dr. Barker said he was permitted to examine the records and found many erroneous things that have been written in the Oregon histories.

The Champlain Society of Toronto has exclusive rights to make the Hudson Bay records public, but their program calls for the publication of only one book a year.

Fearing the "book-a-year" program will delay revelation for a long time, Dr. Barker is making plans to induce the society to release them sooner.

By Har... Not Only Not Getting Pension Money

By United Press
N-Texas school teachers are becoming restive over their failure to receive their pension money. The Teachers' Retirement Fund is in a state of financial collapse and the state legislature is expected to pass a bill to reorganize the fund.

Firemen obtained a pension and retirement law in 1935 from the state legislators but are waiting for pensions. Dist. Judge J. D. Moore has continued injunctions in force until June which prevent collection of the supporting tax. By then he hopes to unravel the tangle and decide if all or part of the present act are valid.

Hoping for Sweep at Polls Too

Dramatizing their desire for a clean sweep in Pennsylvania's May 17 primary, a broom brigade of young Republicans from all over the state, ardent supporters of Arthur H. James, gubernatorial candidate, are pictured above as they used their weapons on the state capitol steps at Harrisburg.

Materials industries utilizing these southern crops are two outstanding wall board industries—one in Louisiana (Celotex) using bagasse, the waste fibre of sugar cane, and one in Mississippi (Masonite) making smooth-finish panel board of unusual properties by "exploding" wood and reforming it under great heat and pressure. Both these industries, only 16 and 12 years old respectively, have gained almost worldwide acceptance and, more important, have provided consistent markets for raw materials which previously were either useless or at best had negligible economic value.

KNUCKLES DOWN

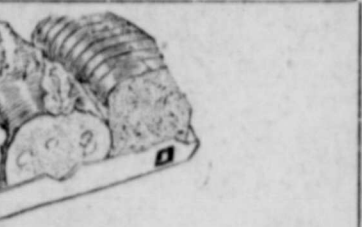

Emil (Dutch) Leonard, shown facing a batter, is the newest American League mound star. With a baffling knuckle ball, Leonard of Washington matched Bob Feller's three-hit performance for 10 innings, and went on to shut out the Cleveland Indians, 1-0, in 13. Leonard yielded six hits in all, and walked only a man. The right-hander previously shut out the Philadelphia Athletics. He was with Brooklyn in 1934 and '35.

El Paso Mayor to Head a Conference

By United Press
EL PASO, Tex., April 29—Marvin A. Harlan of EL PASO has been named chairman of the Southwest Conference of Mayors. The organization, which includes the chief executives of eight West Texas and New Mexico cities, is affiliated with the U. S. Conference of Mayors. Harlan will serve as head of the group until the next meeting, which probably will be held in September.

TEXAS BREAD WEEK is vital to everyone in the Lone Star State because it will help increase consumption of our farm products. From the Panhandle comes wheat... the finest in the world. From our modern mills come flour of superior quality. Our cotton industry provides cottonseed-oil used for shortening in baking. Dairy farmers of Texas provide milk and butter which are the good companions of bread. A larger market for these important farm products is made possible when we eat more bread... therefore TEXAS BREAD WEEK is important to the agricultural and industrial welfare of the State.

Examples of comparatively new yet well established synthetic seemed to be the absence of a constitutional authority for firemen's pensions. Argument left the judge pondering if the pensions can be paid without a change in the state constitution. The teachers thought of that. They secured a constitutional amendment authorizing their pensions and then concentrated on an enabling act.

Pat O'Farrell, service station attendant, sold it for 50 cents to E. A. Adelman, New York numismatist, who immediately put it on sale at $5! This offering price is equivalent to the federal tax on 500 gallons. Gasoline taxes, now levied both by federal and state governments, have cost motorists more than seven billion dollars since 1919.

TVA of SOUTH AMERICA

MODELED somewhat on the gigantic scale of the New Deal's TVA program is South America's largest and newest dam, impounding the waters of the Tercero in Cordoba province, Argentina.

Storage reservoirs have not been widely used in Argentina until now. But the huge Tercero dam, filling a vast bowl deep in the Sierra de los Condores, marks a new era in irrigation, conservation, navigation, power and industry.

Main portion of the dam is the cement barrier, higher than a 20-story building and topped by a quarter-mile three-lane highway. Below this is a second dam, now under construction, which will likewise water the fertile Argentine plains, turn the wheels of industry.

So the Tercero dam is big news these days in South America, is avidly welcomed in a country where rainfall is none too plentiful, where only a fraction of the arid land can be irrigated because water cannot be obtained. In scattered areas where irrigation has been used, grape culture has netted millions. Mendoza province annually produces 75 per cent of Argentina's wine, valued at $40,000,000. Mendoza uses mountain streams and canals to irrigate.

Typical Argentine farm scene is that shown here on a 1911 stamp of the republic. The scene appears also on 1914 and 1926 Argentine issues.

War Veteran Now Big Rose Grower

ARLINGTON, Texas.—V. S. Hillock, who came home from the World War to find peace and beauty in roses, has become one of the nation's growers.

The 53-year-old rose fancier looks like a dirt farmer and talks like a college professor. Because he said, people expect a man, who creates new varieties of flowers to be temperamental. "I give 'em a show. I wave my arms and go into my act. Some of them don't know it's all in fun."

Hillock's serious thoughts are concerned with his world-wide rose business. His most famous breed is the Nellie E., a pink rose. He also has patented Black Knight, Ireland Hampton, Dream Parade, Dolly Madison and Gloriana roses and has three new roses to be distributed this year.

One is the Cimarron, with a deep pink center and salmon colored outside. A yellow Hillock-bred rose is the Gold Imperial and a third variety has not yet been named.

Hillock roses are grown on 40,000 bushes in Arlington, and other thousands are cultivated at Scottville, Texas, and Puento, Calif.

The ex-soldier got into the business because he preferred raising roses to selling real estate and he wanted to prove that roses could be grown in the Southwest. Northern and foreign varieties were not hardy enough, he said.

Hillock worked for 10 years to produce roses that were pretty and still thrived in the Texas climate. He "learned how to kick the vigor up" and the result was

Letter Telling of Mexican Prison Is Given University

AUSTIN, Tex.—Congressman Maury Maverick of San Antonio has presented to the University of Texas library the original of a valuable letter written by his grandfather, Samuel A. Maverick, Texas pioneer and patriot, while he was imprisoned at Perote Prison in Mexico.

The letter, dated January 21, 1843, was addressed by Maverick—a Yale University graduate, participant in the Battle of San Jacinto, signer of the Texas Declaration of Independence, and first Texas Congressman from Bexar district—to Jose Maria Bocanegra, Mexican secretary of state and foreign affairs. After detailing that he was one of 55 Texian prisoners imprisoned at Perote and giving particulars of their arrest, Maverick wrote in part:

"Here at Perote, after being locked up twelve hours, on cold stone floors, without sufficient clothing, in chains and misery, we were turned out to a breakfast consisting of a very small cup of hot water of a darkish color and a fragment of bread which weighs three Mexican ounces. We are then hurried out, with hand bars, manure and cart, loaded with horse manure and the multiplied filth of this place.

"We are then marched off to the adjacent mountain to pack in loads of stone, a distance of one league, or to a considerable distance for loads of sand—a labor which the human machine cannot stand on three ounces of bread and the false coffee of Perote.

"It is not the work, but the kind of work, and the work without adequate food, that I would complain of."

Exports to Mexico Show An Increase

By United Press
EL PASO, Texas.—El Paso customs clerks reported that an increased number of export declarations into Mexico have been handled since the lower Mexican tariffs went into effect.

They explained, however, that most of the business represented accumulated merchandise, which was held pending the reduction in duties.

They said the recent advance in trade could not be estimated accurately because the lower export tariff had not been put into effect for a time sufficient for gauging its results.

Brokers said they looked for a pickup in exports. They pointed out that exports have been down about 36 per cent since the duties were hiked.

JUDGE'S FATHER FINED

By United Press
PAINESVILLE, O.—C. P. Baker, whose son—Charles P. Baker, Jr.—is a municipal court judge, was given a ticket for parking overtime. He paid the $2 fine and waived a hearing, eliminating the necessity of appearing in court before his son.

That Texas roses became famous throughout the nation for hardiness and beauty.

Imprisoned for months on a "morals" charge, Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, above, international tennis star and member of the German nobility, learns now that he also must face charges of "unwise political activities" in a Nazi court on May 14. The baron probably will not be allowed to compete in Davis Cup matches this year.
