New Buildings, New Windows on Life

We use a lot of big words to describe the reforms we are trying to make in our society. It is too easy to forget the human values which these big words conceal.

Take "slum clearance," for instance. Those words call to mind a vision of architects, draughtsmen, engineers and constructors; they conjure up a picture of workmen tearing down old houses and putting new ones in their places; but they don't, ordinarily, tell us anything about the change that takes place in the lives of human beings.

A good idea of what slum clearance really means was provided in New York the other day, when a committee of the city council called witnesses in a conference about public housing projects. It heard the usual experts—architects, engineers, financiers and so on—and then it called Mrs. Anna Schier, to tell about the human side of the picture.

Mrs. Schier had lived all her life in lower East Side tenements. For a number of years she and her husband and two daughters occupied a flat in a dilapidated old building which was about as uncomfortable a place as people ever tried to call home. It was dark, the filth of years was ingrained in the very walls, it stank to heaven and it was overrun with vermin.

"The mice and the insects," said Mrs. Schier, "they could only have been killed with dynamite."

But at last a slum clearance program was got under way, and the new apartments of the Williamsburgh Housing Project, in Brooklyn, were built. The Schier family moved out of its old hovel into one of these clean, airy new dwellings. And Mrs. Schier cried as she told the committee about the change.

"It has been so wonderful, so remarkable, that it seems like a dream," she said. "It is truly paradise. I am just as poor as when I lived on the East Side, but when I walk through these grounds I feel like a millionaire. Even my clothes feel different, though they are the very same clothes."

There is the angle on slum clearance that we usually forget about.

It takes money to replace slums with decent homes; more money unfortunately, than we are able to afford on any scale broad enough to wipe out our slum problem. It is a thorny sort of job from any viewpoint, and it is very doubtful whether any re-housing project will ever pay its way in dollar and cents.

But who can read what this New York woman said without getting a new understanding of the real, inner value of the work.

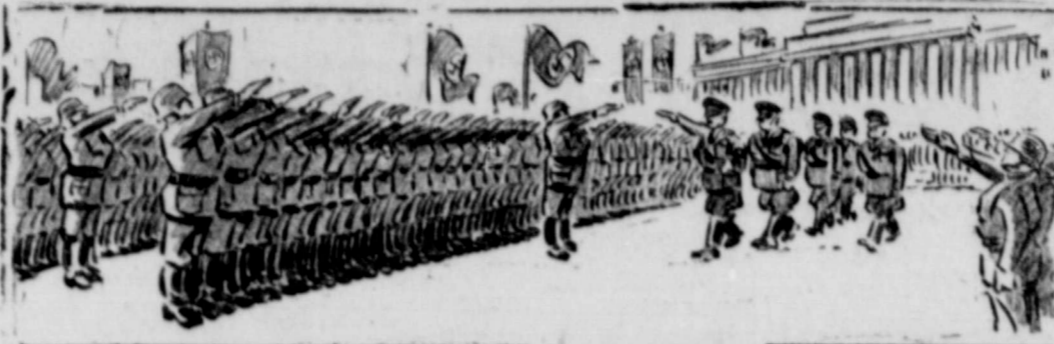

To the slum dweller themselves, a thing of kind makes all the difference in the world—the difference between a bad life and a good life, between misery and happiness.

RELATION OF BIG JIM, OLD RIP IS SEEN

Possible relation between "Big Jim," the Big Spring horned frog who recently withstood the rigors of an 8,250-mile airplane trip throughout the nation in connection with National Air Mail Week, and "Old Rip," the Eastland court house sleeper, was seen Saturday by H. J. Tanner, secretary of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce. In a letter to Nat Schick, Big Spring postmaster, Tanner stated that "His (Big Jim) proclivity for traveling shows some connection as "Old Rip" once took a trip, on which he had a friendly visit with "Silent Cal" in the White House at Washington."
The letter follows:
Mr. Nat Schick, Postmaster, Big Spring, Texas.
Dear Mr. Schick:
Paraphrasing that greatly lamented American, the late Will Rogers, "All I know is what I see in the papers."
From press reports I understand Big Spring has discovered a "Big Jim." Having always been interested in the subject of genealogy, I am curious to know who might be the progenitors of "Big Jim." I suspect some relationship to our grand old citizen, the late "Old Rip."
To withstand the swirling currents of an aerial trip throughout these United States demanded the blood of a Viking; to withstand the confinement of a Court House Corner Stone for thirty-one years demanded blood so valiant that the blood of "Old Rip" must be that of the first blood.

Personal Devotion to Christ
Text: Mark 14:3-11, 27-31

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance
THE New Testament is a book of moving stories of human life in which deep interest and profound human and social values are compressed into amazingly little space.
Here is the story of the woman who anointed Jesus with precious ointment as He was being entertained at the house of Simon, the leper, in Bethany. What deep, and in a measure difficult, questions it raises, and yet how closely related they are to all of life in every age!
The alabaster cruse of ointment of pure nard, which the woman brought, was very costly, and of course there was great indignation among those who murmured about the waste of such precious stuff.
"It might have been sold," they said, "for above 300 shillings, and given to the poor."
Instead of complaining to Jesus, they evidently addressed and abused the poor woman. But Jesus heard their murmuring and interfered. Surely the Master who had such concern for the poor would rebuke her and would tell her that she could have made better use of the ointment. But, no! Jesus commended her for what she had done. He looked beyond the material aspects of the thing to the spirit of what the woman had done and to her purpose.
IT is doubtful whether these disciples, who murmured were really as much concerned about the poor as they now

"Air is essential to the containers of vegetables and fruits, hence the necessity of building the pantry where air can circulate. Better use two small boards for the shelves, leaving a space as much as an inch between them, than to use one large one as most folks

New Church Building

Pride of the negro population of Eastland is the First Baptist church (colored), pictured above, which was recently opened in a new building, attracting persons from over Texas. White citizens, who came to the building, have extended congratulations upon the opening of the building, the plan for which was evolved during the oil boom.

Transportation Is Problem of School L. A. Woods Sta

AUSTIN.—The matter of transportation is now the biggest item facing Texas school officials, Dr. L. A. Woods, state superintendent of public education, after returning from a tour of the state.

During the past year more than 200,000 school children transported to schools of the rank, thus equalizing their educational opportunities. Dr. Woods, pointing out that it was never to take the child to school than bring the school to the child, he said his department was making the most economical use of the state's resources.

Seventy-five million dollars being spent each year for 1,566,000 children, he said twice that amount is being spent each year on motion pictures. The yearly cost of education in Texas is six times the amount being spent for public school education.

A LOOK AND A RIDE AND YOU'LL AGREE...

HERE'S THE CAR OF THE YEAR!

Big, roomy, strikingly styled... today's brilliant De Luxe Ford V-8 brings still more of the "fine-car things" to buyers in the low-price field!

DE LUXE TUDOR SEDAN... 112-inch wheelbase, 123-inch springbase, 85 h.p. Diagonal folding of front seat back gives easy access to rear... Luggage compartment reached from outside... Mohair or broadcloth upholstery.

YOU can tell at a glance that there's a different Ford V-8 this year. In beauty, no other car at any price is like it. But it's not until you ride in it that you know how different it is!
No low-priced car has ever been built to all-round standards as high as this one's.
The quiet, flexible "feel" of its engine is a typical V-8 advantage. A feel that only 8 cylinders can give. Its interior is spacious. Partly because the body itself is big. Partly because its short V-8 engine and long springbase add to the passengers' share of total length. In its rear seat the promise of a "front-seat ride" comes true. You sit well forward of the rear axle... Center-Poised where riding comfort is naturally at its best.
At the rear of every model is luggage space that's big... and opens from outside the car.
And with all its size, the car is fun to drive. Steering, shifting gears, braking... are next to effortless. Ford brakes act easily, stop smoothly... and have the safety advantage of steel from pedal to wheel.
Before you spend as much for any car... and certainly before you pay more... learn for yourself how sharply this De Luxe Ford car steps up the quality standards of low-cost motoring.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

G. Alfred Brown, Pastor
This week commemorates the two-hundredth anniversary of one of the great events in the spread of Christianity. It was on May 24, 1738, that the Lord set the heart of John Wesley on fire, and kindled in him a great glowing zeal for the saving of souls. That flame has gone from soul to soul around the world, and is still spreading. So great has been the influence, that many branches of Christianity are uniting in the commemoration of that event.

There will be a special Aldersgate Service held in this church on Tuesday evening, beginning at 7:45, with the old hymns of the church, a brief message by the pastor, the testimony of John Wesley, a Communion Service, and a period of consecration. Everyone is invited.

In keeping with this spirit of Aldersgate, the pastor will preach this morning on the theme of "Walking With God," not dealing with John Wesley's experience, but with our experience.

At 7:45 the subject of consideration will be, "The Lost." This sermon will be based upon one of the familiar parables of Jesus.

The Church School will begin at 9:45, the Evening Young People's Fellowship Hour at 6:30, and the Junior and Intermediate Leagues at 7:00. "Come, let us worship together."

FARMER'S MARKET IMPROVED SINCE THE RETURN OF BEER

Prices per bushel received by farmers, at crop marketing season, for grains used in brewing since 1932.

The brewing industry, one of the farmer's best customers for premium grains, has provided a market that has absorbed twelve million pounds of grains in the last five years. The five-year bill to the brewers for domestic farm products alone was well in excess of $100,000,000.

It takes 52 pounds of grains to make an average barrel of beer, of which about 38 pounds consists of premium barley, on the basis of the amount of materials used to produce 58 million barrels of beer a year. How important the brewing industry is to the farmer is well illustrated by the figures given in the 1937 edition of Statistical Abstract of the United States, published by the U. S. Department of Commerce. Barley production for 1936 was 147,453,000 bushels, according to the preliminary figures given in that edition. Of this amount the brewers used about 11,000,000 bushels for their malt, or about 41 per cent of the estimated total barley production for the year. The brewers, paying from $9 to 46 cents per bushel higher for malting barley than is required for feed

Japanese Hold Age Old Rites

By United Press

VANCOUVER — Onlookers at the waterfront watched curiously an age-old Japanese ceremony, when 250 members of the Vancouver section of the Nishiren-Shu religion prayed for the souls of every Vancouver man who had lost his life at sea, or in a lake or river, during the previous year.

The members of the sect, which conducts this picturesque ceremony annually, declare they hold to the original Buddhist belief.

"We do not pray for the Japanese alone," an interpreter said. "We pray for every Oriental and every white man who has been drowned. We watch the newspapers throughout the year and collect the names. Then we pray for their souls."

Dressed in his most important robes and thumping an oaken drum with a fan-shaped, hollow object, the Rev. Y. Arakawa chanted the ceremony.

still extremely weak; it would take weeks before he would be strong again; the shock alone was not one from which he could recover rapidly.

He was able to talk a little now, though not allowed to overtax his strength. He could be propped up on pillows for a short while each day. Jackie and Beryl usually took turns now visiting him, chatting cheerfully and impersonally—as orders still remained that he was not to be excited—reading aloud, or just sitting in the room while he dozed.

The morning of this particular day, Jackie had spent with him. She planned to write a few letters in the afternoon, while Beryl was at the hospital.

"I'll stay until you come," Beryl said, in parting. "Don't feel that you have to hurry, Jackie. Take time to do a few things for yourself today. You should, now that Roger is improving so much."

"I will," Jackie said. "Isn't it grand that he's coming along so well? He seemed so much more like himself this morning. I wonder how long it will be, Beryl, before Roger can leave the hospital?" She would like some definite news to write her mother. Oh! the world was a grand place, now that Roger was going to be all right. Jackie felt more like herself, too; her heart was light again, with relief and joy and gratitude.

Beryl said, "I am going to have a conference with Dr. Watson today. Then we ought to know pretty definitely how much longer it is going to take for Roger to get out. Through what counts is the fact that he will get well. You know, Jackie, her lovely dark eyes grew sober, "if he hadn't—if anything serious had happened to Roger—I—I should have blamed myself for it. I should never have forgiven myself—never!"

This was the first time Beryl had let anyone glimpse through her carefully guarded reserve. Jackie was surprised—and moved. "You must not feel that way," she said. "It wouldn't have been your fault, Beryl." Of course she knew why Beryl felt that way; it was because she loved Roger.

"I can't help it," Beryl said, and for another brief moment, her eyes again betrayed her secret. Then she smiled, adding in her usual quiet manner, "But how foolish to talk this way even! Now that we know Roger will be all right—and are so thankful." She

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Hollywood has beckoned to white-haired, tough-jawed William H. Moran, who was 54 years a government sleuth and spent the last 18 of them as chief of the U. S. Secret Service.

And Moran has answered the call. When he quit two years ago he commented tartly on the meagerness of government salaries and retirement pay—and perhaps few had a better right, considering the millions of dollars of counterfeit money Moran had kept out of circulation.

Just what the big movie concern which has hired Moran in "an advisory capacity" wants him to do is not known here. But presumably he will have to be less tight-lipped than he always has been in Washington. Newspapermen never learned anything from Moran. He always tried to keep himself out of the newspapers and, although he could use the money, has refused to write memoirs.

He has let it be understood that he wanted to be known merely as: William H. Moran, Presbyterian deacon and bass choir singer.

ANYONE could get much amusement from looking back at the old records of the A. F. of L. and finding all the sweet things William Green and John L. Lewis used to say about each other. Green was a member of the United Mine Workers and it was Lewis' support which won him the A. F. of L. presidency, so it was natural that much flowery language should be exchanged in public before the time Lewis formed the C. I. O.

The children of the President have always called his mother "grand mere," after the French. But Buzie and Sissie Dail, speaking to or of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, use the plain American "grandpa" and "grandma."

Sport Glances. . . . .By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

WASHINGTON—Who is this Dutch Leonard, newest pitching star of the American League? The old Dutch's first name was Hubert. He helped pitch the Boston Red Sox to world championships with his left arm. This Dutch's front handle is Emil, and he shuts out the Washington Nationals' opponents with his right arm.

Emil Leonard's knuckle ball, his stock in trade, is perhaps the hardest to handle in a catcher's book of trick deliveries.

While Leonard was matching Bob Felle's three-hit performance for 10 innings here the other afternoon, and going on to slam the door in the faces of the Cleveland Indians, 1-0, in 13, Rick Ferrell hopped around in back of the plate like a hen on a hot griddle.

Ferrell says that he expects a fistful of mang'd fingers every time he calls for the dippy-doodle ball. Leonard throws it often, and batters usually pop it up. Hitters and catchers don't know which way it is going to break. Leonard has developed two speeds on the thing—slow and not slow.

ACTUALLY, Leonard's pet pitch isn't a knuckler at all. Leonard digs his first two fingers into the ball as hard as he can. Leonard hints that he believes the secret of his release by Brooklyn, after he had spent 1934 and '35 in Flatbush, was that the catchers were just plumb afraid of his peculiar pitch.

Emil says that he always has believed Al Lopez squawked because he couldn't hold the knuckespecially bad with men on bases. Leonard doesn't look like an athlete. He reminds you of a fat butcher boy. He weighs 200 pounds, some 20 of which is blubber. He has a bald head and a gold tooth.

Hard luck has followed Leonard like a faithful hound. Injuries, gall bladder operations, are just plain tough breaks have all conspired to lay him low.

Leonard is a recruit of some eight years standing. He broke in professionally with Mobile of the Southern League in 1930.

LEONARD bagged 14 games for Brooklyn in '34, and remained on the banks of the Gowanus in '35. He spent the past two campaigns in Atlanta, where last season he won 15 and lost 8, striking out 68, and passing only 3 in 188 innings before injuring his arm.

In four starts this spring, Leonard has yielded 26 hits in 36 innings. He walked seven batters, none in the last 19 rounds, so it is plain that his control is as near perfect as possible, despite all his stuff.

He has yielded only one earned run, in the last 19 innings. He has pitched 17 scoreless rounds with his streak as yet unbroken. He shut out the Athletics before starting against Cleveland in the most dramatic game of the young season.

Clark Griffith took Leonard at the $7500 draft price on the belief that any guy who could win 15 games for Atlanta before hurting his arm was worth inspection.

And Leonard quickly convinced the Old Fox that something more than a stiff neck can be picked up

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

SCIENTISTS at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have been probing into the age of some of the earth's meteoric visitors, with interesting results. Exploding atoms of radium, giving off helium, lead and energy, furnish the information about the ancient stones. The same method is being used in determining the age of our earth.
