Jimmy's Tastes Are Universal

Whenever there is nothing else to worry about, good people can always get themselves into a state of alarm by meditating on the kind of movies little Jimmy goes to see on Saturday afternoons.

Jimmy knows little about the finer points of the cinematic arts, but he indisputably knows what he wants. So do the moviemakers, who see that he gets in. The result is a wealth of blood-and-thunder stuff, G-men epics, cowboy escapades, mining town shooting scrapes and highly improbable bits of adventure and action in the South Seas.

All of which, to many of us whose childhood is long gone, is pretty disturbing. It looks like strong meat for delicate stomachs. We are easily persuaded that little Jimmy ought to be protected against his own desires.

But when the topic of Jimmy and his movie fare came up for discussion at a conference of elementary school teachers at Teachers College, Columbia University the other day, very little alarm was manifest. On the contrary, the teachers were urged to go out and attend a few of these Saturday afternoon thriller specials themselves once in a while and find out how and why those things hit Jimmy where he lives.

For little Jimmy is perfectly direct and simple about it all. He likes rapid-fire action, bold adventure and the certainty of right's ultimate triumph over wrong; and these likes are not at all bad or unnatural traits for him to have. On the contrary they are universal, rooted in the deepest stratum of human nature.

And it is up to us adults to understand that—and to understand, at the same time, that these youngsters of ours are not in the least fooled by the kind of life they see in the Saturday afternoon movie houses.

They know, after all, that real life seldom has a moving picture finish. The hero doesn't always come galloping out of the sunset just in time; the dauntless young man doesn't foil the evil designs of the villain; virtue does not always reap its rich reward in the final reel. The everyday life of schoolyard and playground teaches that, unmistakably.

Yet it is human nature to wish that things were different; and in their own way the youngsters who cheer and stamp their feet at the holiday thrillers are simply testifying to the fact that they wish life were a little bit nearer to the ideal. That is a wish which, however it may find expression, is worth understanding and fostering.

Which doesn't at all mean that we should never exercise the right of censorship over little Jimmy's entertainment program. It does mean that if we just take the trouble to see things the way he sees them, and share in his vibrant young emotional life, we can do an indefinitely better job of bringing him up to adulthood prepared to do his part toward making this a better world.

Trial Flight

BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

CAST OF CHARACTERS JACKIE DUNN—heroine; she wanted to fly. ROGER BRICKNER—hero; he wanted to fly the stratosphere. BERYL MELROSE—eccentric widow; she wanted Roger. EVELYN LA FARSE—Jackie's mother; she wanted a son-in-law.

Yesterday Jackie is leaving when Beryl calls her back, reveals that Roger may never walk again!

CHAPTER XXII "ROGER may never walk again!" Jackie repeated what Beryl had told her slowly, incredulously. "But that can't be!"

"I don't want to say it," Beryl returned, her dark eyes compassionate. "You remember I told you yesterday I was to have a conference with Doctor Watson? Well, he told me then. It seems there's something wrong with Roger's back."

"Oh, Beryl!" Jackie bowed her head in despair. Her own trouble was forgotten now, the fact that she had been running away. For Roger, who practically had been born with wings, who was only at home riding the sky, conquering the heavens, to be earthbound—never able to walk again. Jackie raised her head, stricken by another thought, "Does he know?"

"Does he have to know this, Beryl?" Beryl nodded, moistened her lips. If she had let Jackie glimpse the love she felt for Roger once or twice, now Jackie's love—her very soul—lay revealed for anyone to see. "Yes, Roger knows. He had guessed all along. He insisted I tell him—yesterday."

"Then that was why you were kneeling at his side, why you were crying!" Jackie spoke without thinking. "You saw us then!" "Yes... I... I thought you had told Roger that you loved him..."

"PARTLY," Jackie admitted. "But not all the reasons, Beryl! There must be nothing but truth now. Her eyes looked directly into Beryl's. "You see... Roger doesn't love me. He was only playing a part. He had promised to play that part until the bitter end. I... I thought if I told him he need not go on playing it at any longer... I thought if I went away... he would realize that he loves you." "No, don't interrupt!" she said, when Beryl tried to speak. "Why shouldn't Roger love you, Beryl? You are so wonderful, so much better than I am. You two really are suited to each other in every way. And I love you both, so much that I want you both to be happy. That's why I did what I did. That's why I wanted to go away."

"You foolish little girl!" Beryl reproved gently, but her dark eyes, looking directly back into Jackie's, too, were shining. "Haven't you learned yet that you can't do anything about love? You can't plan for it, change it—make it do the things you want it to. I do love Roger. I admit it. I'm not ashamed of it." She threw back her dark head proudly, her eyes alight with the acknowledgment of her love now. "But my dear—it is you whom Roger loves. He does not love me."

Jackie's heart leaped high, as though suddenly it had shed its dull aching weight, found new strength again. But only for a moment. She shook her head. "No, Beryl! You forget. Roger was perfectly willing that I break our trial engagement, perfectly willing for me to go, to say goodbye."

"And you forget," Beryl rejoined, "that Roger had just learned, only yesterday, that he may never walk again."

A SHADOW darkened Jackie's face with the pain of this brought home again. "You mean... he hoped if I left then I need never know?" "More than that. He made me promise not to tell you. He doesn't know now that I came after you, that I've told you, Jackie. You see, Roger wanted you to go—thinking he did not care—because only in that way could he give you your freedom from him."

Jackie cried out in protest at that. "As though I would want to be free of him! Even if he never walks... that could not make any difference."

"Good girl!" Beryl said. She got to her feet, stood looking down at Jackie, her lovely face alight with her gentle smile. "I knew it would not make any difference; I knew you'd say that. Now you understand why I've told you. Why I had to stop you, come after you. It was you Roger called for all during the time he was delirious. It was the fact that he thought I was you, standing by, helping him hold on, fight through, that made that fight victorious. So you see it was really you, Jackie, who saved his life."

JACKIE gave Beryl's arm a little squeeze. "It's like you to do that," she said. "But it isn't true. But it must be true that he loved her, or he would not have called her name. Now nothing could stop the tumult of Jackie's heart. For beside this, everything else faded into insignificance. Roger loved her—as she loved him.

"You must tell him that," she changed your mind," Beryl said. She hailed a taxi driver, gave Jackie's bag. "You must go to the hospital, Jackie, and tell Roger that you aren't going. Tell him you changed your mind about the engagement, too. You still are going to hold him until the bitter end." Beryl smiled at this last.

"I'll tell him," Jackie promised. The golden fires were dancing in her eyes. "Aren't you getting Aren't you coming back with Beryl?"

"No," Beryl shook her head. "This is company, though, as well I'm the one who is going away," Beryl said. "But you can't do that! I shall let you!"

"You can't stop me," Beryl still smiling. "Besides, you need me no longer. And I have something very important to tend to. I may be back, Jackie. But I'm taking another cab to the hotel. I'm catching the next plane to reach New York."

BRILLIANT wedding cake is a beautiful symbol. It is the first food the bride and groom share together, surrounded by well-wishing relatives and friends.

Wedding Cake (14 pounds)

One pound almonds, 3 pounds currants, 3 pounds raisins, 1 pound mixed sliced peel, 2 cups cognac brandy, 4 cups sifted cake flour, 2 teaspoons baking soda, 3 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1-2 nutmeg grated, 1 pound shortening, 11-2 cups firmly packed brown sugar, 16 eggs, 3 drops wintergreen, 1 cup New Orleans molasses, 1 cup sour cream.

Blanch and shred almonds; mix with fruits, peel and brandy, and let stand in closely covered jar 2 days.

Mix and sift flour, soda and spices. Cream shortening until soft and smooth. Gradually add sugar, creaming until fluffy. Beat in thoroughly 1 egg at a time, then wintergreen and molasses.

Add flour mixture alternately with sour cream, mixing well after each addition. Stir in branched fruits and nuts.

Turn into greased loaf pans, lined with waxed paper and again greased, filling them about 3/4 full. Cover tightly with wax-captured for an entirely different reason. They believe that prison bars for Chapman would mean freedom for them.

For a decorative two layer cake use frosted sticks of cardboard to support the upper layer. Tie little bells on the sticks, which look like marble columns, and on each corner of the lower layer stick small bows of "wedding" veil. The frosted rosettes and scroll work which are so definite a part of a wedding cake can be bought in a five and ten store and applied to your own glistening white frosting.

Before leading a spectacular escape from Eastham prison farm on July 8, 1937, Chapman confessed to officers that he robbed the First National Bank of Atlanta, Texas, on June 6, 1934—the crime for which Mathis was given a 30-year sentence and Sutherland 50 years.

Legal machinery was in motion in federal court at Beaumont to reopen the robbery case in an effort to free Mathis and Sutherland when Chapman escaped with 27 other convicts from Eastham.

Chapman Is Rated As the Cleverest Criminal at Large

By United Press

HUNTSVILLE — G-men rate Charles Chapman, escaped convict and once a respected Arkansas road contractor, as one of the cleverest robbers at large today and would like to catch him to set at rest the fears of bankers throughout the country.

But Ovid Mathis and I. L. Sutherland, serving long terms in prison for bank robbery, want him not Mathis has been working in the cotton fields at Central State prison at Sugarland since his conviction in September, 1934. Sutherland has been working in the prison print shop there since October of that year.

Chapman was a road contractor and suffered financial reverses during the depression in 1932. He tried to recoup his fortunes by robbing a bank at Camden, Ark.

After several more robberies, he was captured in Mississippi on October 20, 1934, and sent to Arkansas prison.

He escaped on August 25, 1936, from Tucker Prison Farm, Ark., and six days later was shot and captured after robbing the bank at Atlanta. He was given a 60-year sentence for the robbery.

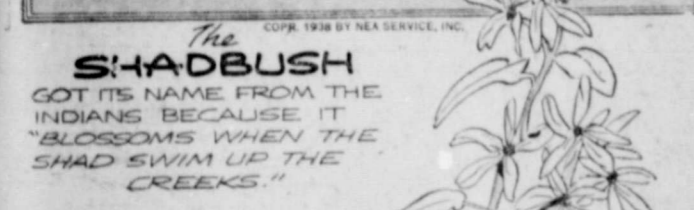

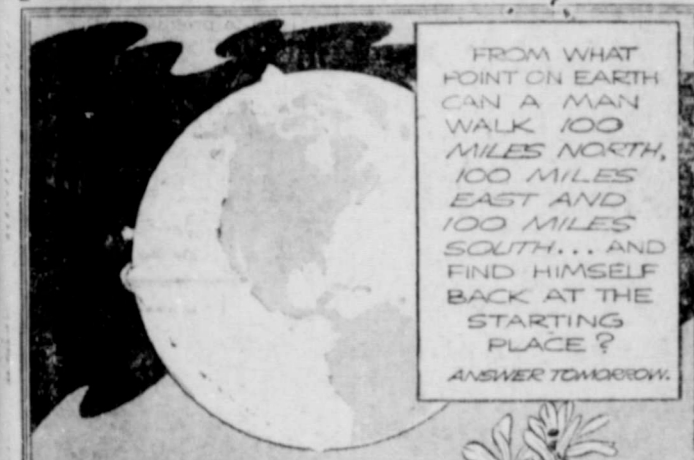

After being sent to Eastham, Chapman called officers and told them that Mathis and Sutherland were innocent.

"I robbed the Atlanta bank both times," Chapman said. "I heard they had convicted some other guys in the first case, and I went back to see if they would recognize me."

On the strength of this statement, the federal grand jury at Beaumont indicted Chapman in March, 1937, for the first Atlanta bank robbery. But before he could be brought to trial, he escaped.

And so Mathis and Sutherland work away their days in prison, having 27 to 47 years, respectively, to serve for a crime that Chapman, not they, confessed to committing.

of the administration, has told borrowers in Texas and Oklahoma that fewer loans will be made in the future for the purchase of food, and that next year's food supply must be largely grown on the borrower's farms.

Field crops will be taking up more of the farmer's time later in the season, and in the meantime the farmer should pay attention to his garden, poultry, cows and hogs, Evans said.

Many families have been so centered upon the obtaining of cows, hogs and chickens that they have failed to give sufficient attention to this livestock after it has been obtained," he explained.

Some of them let all their cows freshen at the same time, and the result is a surplus of milk at one season and a shortage at another. Others allow their sows to farrow too late to provide a winter meat supply, or they fail to set aside a calf to fatten for fresh meat or for canning.

Evans said that between 15 and 20 per cent of the FSA clients in Texas, and 30 to 40 per cent in Oklahoma, had been able to go through the past year without borrowing money for foods.

"Money formerly spent for food will be available for paying off indebtedness on livestock and equipment," he said. "When these borrowers own their teams and tools debt-free they have made a long step toward eventual ownership of their land."

PARAMOUNT HOTEL CALL 150

GREYHOUND

Sport Glances.By Grayson

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

NEA Service Sports Writer CHARLES (BUCK) WALSH has broken out his battle flags, cleared decks for action and jarked the order for all hands to stand by.

The veteran Navy crew coach is quite fed up with the Washington bugaboo. He's tired of seeing astern rowing men shrink up like so many violets and cast furtive glances over their shoulders every time someone mentions the Huskies from the northwest.

It's high time eastern sweepstakers started a long overdue renaissance, he figures—and there could be no better time than June 27 at Poughkeepsie.

Maxwell Stevenson, Chairman of the Board of Poughkeepsie Stewards, sounded that same keynote a few weeks back when he fatly accused eastern rowing powers (?) with having a Washington complex, and the sooner they dropped it the better.

Figuring out the last eastern crew to triumph at 'Keepsie is more than a matter of a moment. To paraphrase Stevenson, you've got to blow the dust off the record books before you discover what back in 1931 an eastern shell—Navy—glided across the line first.

Since then the Hudson River classic has been dominated by Washington and California.

THERE'S no reason why we should fear these western outfits so much," Walsh growls. "They can be beaten—they can catch a crab just like we can—and they can't stick more than eight men in a shell at a time. So it's time someone did something about it."

Walsh isn't making rash statements to his garden, poultry, cows and hogs, Evans said.

Many families have been so centered upon the obtaining of cows, hogs and chickens that they have failed to give sufficient attention to this livestock after it has been obtained," he explained.

Some of them let all their cows freshen at the same time, and the result is a surplus of milk at one season and a shortage at another. Others allow their sows to farrow too late to provide a winter meat supply, or they fail to set aside a calf to fatten for fresh meat or for canning.

Evans said that between 15 and 20 per cent of the FSA clients in Texas, and 30 to 40 per cent in Oklahoma, had been able to go through the past year without borrowing money for foods.

"Money formerly spent for food will be available for paying off indebtedness on livestock and equipment," he said. "When these borrowers own their teams and tools debt-free they have made a long step toward eventual ownership of their land."

Dollars and Dash

Perhaps it's the fur collar on his windbreaker that makes young Joel Thorne look so uncomfortable. Or it could be the expression that went with the warning to his drivers. Thorne, multi-millionaire heir to a railway fortune, owns fleets of race-cars, airplanes and speed boats, and will drive one of his iron steeds in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Speedway, May 30. Thorne has entered four cars and threatens to fire any of his drivers who fails to outdrive him in practice.

Freight Rates Upon Citrus Meal Have Been Lowered

By United Press
 WESLACO, Tex.—The Southwestern Freight Bureau, an organization of railroads, has approved freight rate reductions on citrus meal feed for cattle and poultry to points east of the Mississippi River, according to James H. Hartzog, traffic manager for the Rio Grande Citrus Exchange.
 The reductions are subject to concurrence of rate-making bodies in the eastern territory.
 Hartzog compared the old rate of $1.10 per the 100 pounds on citrus feed to Chicago with the new rate of 59 cents per the 100 as a typical example of the reduction. Rates to other eastern points would be reduced proportionately.
 The South Texas Citrus Association, representing other Texas shippers, at the same time decided to oppose the proposed rate increase involving freight shipped through the valley's ports at Port Isabel and Brownsville.
 The association voted to join with the Brownsville Chamber of Commerce in protest against establishment of a rate of 46 cents per hundred pounds for through rail-and-water shipments of canned goods from Valley points through Valley ports. Also opposed was a suspension of a scheduled reduction in truck rates from Valley cities to the ports.

Constipated? You Should Get at the Cause!

Lots of people think they can't be "regular" without frequent trips to the medicine chest. "I just dose up and get it over," they tell you. But doctors know they don't get it over at all until they get at the cause of the trouble!
 Chances are it's simple to find the cause if you eat only what most people do—meat, bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestine and helps a bowel movement.
 If that fits you, your ticket is a crunchy breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the great intestinal tonic, vitamin B.
 Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and just watch the old world grow brighter!
 Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
