ARCADIA ANNIVERSARY WILL BE CELEBRATED WITH DOUBLE FEATURE

The 10th anniversary of the Arcadia Theatre, which was opened for business in August, 1928, will be celebrated tonight with a double feature of "The Texans," a comedy of the great southwest, and "Professor Beware," an action picture of the double bill. Between the presentation of two pictures will be a short master of ceremonies for the short program which will be presented, and will introduce some of the original employees of the Arcadia, including J. T. Hughes of Breckenridge, first manager, and James Atkins, still an employee. Honor guests will include John Thurman, mayor of Ranger at the time the theatre was opened, and J. A. Head of Ranger, father of State Senator J. Manley Head of Stephenville, who has a role in "The Texans." The anniversary program, which will be presented for the regular price of admission, in spite of the fact that two great pictures are to be shown, will begin at 9:20 with the showing of "Professor Beware."

Texas Leading In Milk Products In South Central U.S.

Texas' growing importance in the dairy industry is strikingly illustrated in the new Milk Facts booklet issued by the Milk Industry Foundation. Milk Facts shows that Texas with $46,541,000 cash farm income from milk in 1937 heads the list of South Central states. Charts show that the United States is one of the ranking nations in the consumption of dairy products. With per capita consumption of fluid milk at 153 quarts a year, America tops all other countries except Switzerland with 232 quarts.

Carroll Starts Sentence for Murder

One step more after the dramatic picture above was snapped, and prison bars closed around ex-Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll for "the rest of his natural life." Convicted at South Paris, Mo., of the murder of Dr. James G. Littlefield, he is shown entering jail after receiving a life sentence. Carroll will be in the same cell block with Paul Dwyer, his chief accuser, who had previously confessed to the crime.

countants' figures prepared for the New York legislature. This shows that 44.03 per cent of the dollar goes to dairy farmers for milk; 26.16 per cent to labor; 8.75 per cent for supplies—bottles, cases, trucking, etc.; taxes—2.24 per cent; depreciation—2.40 per cent; profits—2.98 per cent; salaries—less than 1-2 of one per cent.

"Within less than fifty years," says the booklet, "the production and utilization of milk have so increased in this country that today we are the greatest of dairy nations."

"Milk is our most widely used food, the farmer's largest source of cash income and the basis of an industry which for service and volume has few equals."

"Basic data about the nation's milk supply, the producers and the cows which create the supply, the distributors whose safeguards and efficiency have made wide usage possible and the consumers of this 'most nearly perfect food' are of wide interest."

"Around 25 million cows are milked daily on three quarters of the nation's six million farms—more than 45 million quarts of milk are delivered to homes and stores. Milk, cheese, butter, ice cream and other dairy products create an estimated annual output of 3 1/2 billion dollars."

"The statistical background for this vast industry of wide ramification should lead to a clearer understanding of milk economics."

On May 31 a quarter-acre live oak mott in Colorado county harbored 859 active bird nests.

Worst enemies of tree nesting birds in May are wind, grackles, and snakes in the order named.

The booklet contains pictorial charts and figures showing the importance of the milk industry to the country's economic picture. Diagrammatic charts illustrate how the United States utilizes its milk supply of some 48,777,000,000 quarts of milk a year.

Fluid or fresh milk, which provides the farmer's highest cash return, accounts for 29.2 per cent of the country's yearly production.

Creamery butter takes 31.6 per cent, farm butter—10.5 per cent, while 12.1 per cent of the milk is used on farms where produced. In making cheese 6.9 per cent of the total milk is used; ice cream—2.3 per cent and canned milk—4.3 per cent, according to charts.

Another chart shows a breakdown of the distributor's milk dollar based on recent certified ac-

Japan's Armies Race a River of Gold

One way to get an idea whether Japan will finally whip China is to follow the troop movements as reported in the daily papers. Another way is to keep an eye on the gold movements, which are ever so much less spectacular. Armies move to the accomplishment of crashing guns, and go to the field of action with a certain amount of fanfare and drumbeating, even in this day of mechanized fighting. Gold moves quickly, like a thief in the night, and only a few people bother to trace its course as recorded on the financial pages. But in the end it can be the more important of the two.

Not long ago John T. Flynn noted the heavy drain of gold Japan has been suffering recently, and pointed out that in 15 months the country had been obliged to send $346,000,000 of gold to the United States. A little later a New York Times writer remarked that the figure had risen to $352,000,000.

These figures can mean but one thing: that Japan is going broke at a rapid pace. The best estimates have it that her gold reserve now is no higher than $261,000,000. Her foreign markets are steadily dwindling; meanwhile the tremendously expensive war in China forces her to keep on buying goods abroad—cotton, oil, iron, munitions, and so on. She can no longer pay for these goods with her own exports. The gold supply with which she can pay is fast vanishing.

Which means, obviously, that Japan's fate rests on the outcome of a race between her armies and her gold supply. If the armies can win a complete and final victory before bankruptcy arrives, well and good; if they cannot, Japan faces utter ruin. And if the ruin comes it will not come from the rout of Japanese troops in the field but from that slow, inexorable, silent trickling-away of yellow metal.

All of this, of course, is Japan's worry, not ours—except that it emphasizes an important little fact which we sometimes forget.

Despite all of the thimble-rigging and phengling which most great governments have indulged in, in the field of economics, it does seem to be true that there are a few fundamental economic laws that in the long run have got to be obeyed. The oldest, simplest, and most-often-forgotten of them all would seem to be, simply, that if you spend beyond your income, and keep on doing it long enough, you wind up in a disaster.

There are all kinds of expedients by which the evil day can be postponed, of course. Some of them work beautifully—for a time. But the reckoning has to be paid sooner or later. And if you can't pay it when the time comes, you are in for an exceedingly unpleasant experience.

THE FUN-LOVING ROVER BOYS

Company I and the Third Army Games

By The Company Clerk
CAMP BULLIS, Texas, Aug. 7.

Just a few memoirs from the company clerk to let our friends and loved ones back home know that the boys in Company I are enjoying army life to the fullest. After a rather uneventful trip from Ranger, we detrained at Viva (a wide place in the road 16 miles north of San Antonio) at 4 a. m. this morning. However, one little incident, which reflected the first blood spilled in this war, occurred while our troop train was rounding a curve near Weatherford, when Private Joseph Aaron was thrown against the company ice box and bursted a blood vessel.

No sooner had we detrained than First Sergeant "Fuzz" Thomas called "Fall In," and we were off for another adventure. About two miles of hiking in single file on either side of the road (to allow the supply and artillery trucks to pass) brought us to our quarters in the southeastern portion of Camp Bullis.

Our two weeks training was to start, so naturally the first order from Captain Fletcher was to police the area of our company quarters, erect the tents, and fill the bedsacks (mattresses) with hay which had been provided for the purpose.

In view of the fact that approximately 13,000 men are quartered in this camp alone a system of arrangement and organization was very essential to the training of the men. It is a veritable beehive of soldiers, almost as far as one can see. Dinner right on the spot and prepared to a nicety by Chief Cook Bill Rainwater, erstwhile baker for Schooley at Ranger, together with Assistant Cooks "Stubbie" Aaron, Mace Oylar and Jessic Minter.

Leaves were granted to a few of Company I men during the afternoon and evening to see the bright lights of San Antonio. However, the majority remained in camp.

The first day in camp passed only too soon. After the echoes of sing-songs from across the camp, to the tune of "K-K-Katy," "There's a Long, Long Trail A-Winding" and the Field Artillery song, the Ranger boys of Company I obeyed the call of taps, and tucked away in their bunks to pleasant dreams.

Monday, Aug. 8.—First call at 5:15; reveille at 5:45; chow at 6:15; and then to the drill field along with the balance of the 142nd Infantry Regiment to receive instruction in flag maneuvers.

Attached to our company for training purposes for the duration of the field maneuvers are the following reserve officers: Captain C. Weber and Lieutenants Longshore and McDonald. These men have been quite helpful to Captain Fletcher and to the men of our company since they are well trained in war tactics. Lieutenant Longshore, due to his World War experience, is especially helpful to us.

Came those evening "bull sessions" around quarters, with myriads of yarns which not even the lowest rookie believed; soldiers strolling about camp; a "runner" now and then with orders from the major to the captain; intermittent trips back and forth to the canteen, a Comanche whoop now and then, and at last—taps.

Tuesday, Aug. 9.—Company I, together with the balance of our regiment, arose well before daylight, was served with the customary ham and eggs and that good black army coffee, was off at 7 a. m. under full pack and rifle on a six-mile hike to attack Hill No. 1106, which was reported by S-2 to be held by the enemy (the Browns). With the assistance of the three machine gun companies of our regiment, we captured our objective and returned at 11:30 a. m. The regiment left again (in trucks this time) on a ten-mile hike and arrived at Hill No. 1193 at 6:30 p. m., for outpost duty. In order to prevent the enemy air force from detecting our movements, our trucks left out at three-minute intervals and consequently were about a mile or so

Judge to Speak On Reforms in Prison

By United Press

HOUSTON—Judge King, crusader for prison reforms, has been invited to speak on jail problems before the Prison Association meeting here in 1934, and he spoke at the next convention, in Atlanta, Ga. The invitation to the St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 27 meeting was extended by Roy Flannagan, Richmond, Va., chairman of the committee on prison reforms, Judge King said he would accept.

Other than serving on post duty, the most of our spent their first night out of the barracks only by the aid of "pup tents" which were a part of the pack. After this marching, both by truck and on the bunks on Mother Earth, fine, and taps at 9:30 p. m., music to our ears.

Wednesday, Aug. 10.—We all glad to reach camp again at 8:30 a. m. this morning, only glad for a rest and the opportunity to police up in preparation for the divisional parade for the benefit of Governors Alfred of Texas and Marland of Oklahoma, and Governor-elect O'Daniel of Texas. And what a parade! "I'll forget it," said Private Ewart, who lives on Mesquite street in Ranger. The march started at 2:30 p. m., and at 6:30 did it stop. Infantry, cavalry, artillery (both light and heavy), machine gun companies, anti-aircraft, engineers, and everything that is used in a war, occupied the line of march. And was Governor-elect O'Daniel proud of "his boys"? "I know Texas had many heroes," he said in his address.

A soap manufacturer believes that soap may be used in the future to increase fluffiness. "Just for that, man, you're going to have mouth washed out with a angel-food!"

PREVIEW OF A SEASON

By the calendar it's still Summer . . . but it's Autumn by the advertisements! They're starting now with exciting bulletins from the fashion front, news of special fur and furniture sales, and clever ideas for home decoration.

Turn the pages! So those are the hats we'll wear this Fall! Here's a chance to select your winter coat—of fur, or fur-trimmed—at a great saving. There are items of interest to September brides and grooms looking for unusual values in furnishings for the new home. Right alongside is a description of the latest in window hangings that would lure Mother from her preoccupation with the children's school wardrobes.

Look ahead to Autumn for a reason of thrilling activity . . . and look to your favorite newspaper's advertising columns for a foretaste of coming fashions in clothes, and housefurnishings and entertaining. Buy, when you're ready, from the merchants who, through their printed messages, have kept you posted, guided you to values, and saved you money. Read the advertisements . . . and be ready for Fall.

SERIAL STORY

HAYWIRE HOUSE

BY EDWIN RUTT

Yesterday: The Great Pierre, magician, joins the great list. Then Wilton Ames writes up.

CHAPTER XI

WILTON AMES seemed in a most affable frame of mind. As he parked his car, he glanced with some suspicion at the Great Pierre's combination car-and-trailer. But his face was pleasantly blank when he greeted Sally and Kinks.

Spencer Ames

"Gang up on him, eh?" Kinks said.

"It certainly is," said Sally. "We've got a magician with us now, Wilton. Also a couple of gangsters." She spoke carefully, as if she'd devoted the better part of her life to operating a rendezvous for gangsters.

"That's it," Wilton turned friendly eyes upon him. "Naturally, being his son, I'm the last person in the world able to influence my father. But you two might have better success. And I'll go along for whatever good it may do. Now I happen to know that he isn't very busy this afternoon. It's as good a time as any to tackle him."

"I'm for it," said Sally decisively. "Kinks, you get my car out. I'll run in and tell Mrs. Clipstack to look after the people."

There was surprise in Mr. Spencer Ames' pale, blue eyes as Miss Sally Pennington swept into his office, followed by his son and a young man whom he had not met.

"Well," he said, waving them into chairs, "I know why you've come, of course. Wilton's been at me about the same thing. And I feel bound to tell you at the outset what I told him. I can't do a thing for you."

"Now, look here, Mr. Ames," said Sally. "We've got the best reason in the world for asking for a short extension. We're doing business over there. I'll admit that when Kink—Mr. Parker got the idea of running a sort of inn, I thought he was crazy. But he wasn't as crazy as he sounded. We're getting people. And in a few weeks we can pay off that note. Or a great part of it, at least."

Spencer Ames rubbed his chin. "I have no doubt, Miss Pennington," he said, "that all you say is true. But a bank is not a charitable institution. We can't do business by—by employing slack methods."

"But, Mr. Ames," said Sally Pennington desperately, "we simply can't raise $600 in the time that's left."

"I'm very sorry for you," said Spencer. "I have no object in causing you and Mr. Parker to lose the place. But I don't know what I can do."

Unexpectedly, Wilton Ames rose to his feet. He advanced to the desk and smote it with the flat of his hand.

"Well, I call it a dirty trick," he cried. "Sally and Parker have made a real effort to keep their property. And just because a board of directors who look like a bunch of stuffed owls are pressing you a little, you give in. Believe me, I'd soon tell those directors where to get off."

SALLY looked at him wonderingly. It was the finest burst of emotion that she had ever seen Wilton put on. But Spencer Ames' eyes simply bulged coldly, like the eyes of a dead fish.

"Wilton," he said, "sit down. You're only beginning in the banking business and you know next to nothing about it. I'll thank you to remember that I'm running this institution. And I repeat that I cannot extend the time of this payment."

"Oh, dear," she said, "it never rains but it pours. That was Mrs. Clipstack, and someone else—a woman—wants to stay at the—Restaurator. We'll have to go back right away. Kinks."

Spencer Ames bowed them out. "I'm sorry, Miss Pennington," he said. "If I could hold out any hope for you, I'd do it gladly. But I'm afraid I can't."

But when they were gone he sat down again and looked at Wilton.

"Oh, dear," she said, "it never rains but it pours. That was Mrs. Clipstack, and someone else—a woman—wants to stay at the—Restaurator. We'll have to go back right away. Kinks."

Arrest of Truckers For Overloading Shows An Increase

AUSTIN—Arrests of truck drivers hauling excess loads and other wise violating registration laws have increased 25 per cent since the Department of Public Safety created a special detail of state police for that type of enforcement work last June, according to Captain Homer Garrison, Jr., assistant public safety director.

While the special unit of plainclothesmen was directing attention to load law violators, state patrolmen, relieved of that responsibility, brought about a 14 per cent reduction in traffic deaths on Texas highways.

The license and weight inspectors, all veterans in that type of work, lodged 1,562 complaints against commercial vehicle operators in July. Violations of the 7,000 pound load limit law were charged in 1,395 of the cases; 39 were for improper registrations; 14 for failure to have chauffeur licenses; 33 for speeding, and 70 for other motor code offenses according to J. W. Langley, chief inspector of the new division.

Until the new unit was assigned to duty recently, patrolmen had divided their activities between the weighing of trucks and enforcement of moving traffic law offenses. Under the new operating plan mounted patrolmen directed their activities toward assisting motorists and reducing speeding, careless driving and other violations to which most death-dealing accidents are traceable.

"This new system has brought gratifying results," Captain Garrison said. "Every man can perform his duties with a maximum of efficiency when he does not have to divide his time. The good results are shown in the increased truck law violations arrests and the sharp decline in tragic traffic tolls."

Classification of High School Teams Problem for 1939

By Lynn Jackson
AUSTIN—Re-classification of schools and the entrance of three institutions into Class A competition will mark the panorama of Texas high school football when teams start interscholastic league play in September.

R. J. Kidd, starting his first full year as the league's athletic director, said that the three schools participating in Class A for the first time will be Lamesa in district 1, Odessa in district 4, and Livingston in district 10.

Plans for re-classification, Kidd said as he exhibited Texas maps covered with red, white and blue pins "corralled" by rubber bands, include removing schools from unbalanced districts and placing them with schools of similar rank.

"Many schools now playing Class A or Class B football really belong in the next lower class," Kidd said. "So we are trying to re-classify the schools to promote rivalry and do away with topheavy scores."

"There are 108 Class A schools enrolled for competition in the state championship football race this fall. There will be approximately 390 Class B schools and 130 Class C schools."

Besides enrollment troubles, Kidd said, the league has the problem of the 11-grade and 12-grade schools in the same district and also that of "the school with an enrollment of 100 pupils competing against the school with an enrollment of 425."

Re-classification of schools for more effective trade-territory and equalized competition is badly needed, Kidd said. The usual plan is Class A schools, 500 or more pupils; Class B, 200 to 500 students; Class C, 75 to 200.

"However," the director said, "teams may be voted into Class A or Class B by other schools in the district. That may bring about a high school with 250 students playing a school with 2,250."

Seven Class B district champions in 1937 had enrollments of less than 150. Those schools had been voted into Class B by other schools in the district.

"Re-classification," Kidd said, "will prevent one-sided scores, teams playing out of their class, and will promote real rivalry."

HS Homecoming At Abilene Set For October 1st

ABILENE.—Homecoming at Hardin-Simmons university will be held on Oct. 1, with the Centenary Gentlemen from Shreveport, La., as the gridiron opponents, for an intersectional clash.

Coach Frank Kimbrough, H-SU director of athletics, announced today.

The homecoming date is the earliest for H-SU followers in many years, and the Centenary-Cowboy fray already booms as a major early season clash for West Texans.

Coach Curtis Parker of Centenary, and Coach Kimbrough, meeting at the state high school coaches' sessions at Lubbock, exchanged pre-season "bear stories."

Centenary meets TCU, Southwest conference foe, and the Cowboys play the University of San Francisco Dons, in San Francisco, the week-end before the game here.
