WALTERS SAYS HE OUTWITTED THE G-MEN

DALLAS, Aug. 22.—Ted Walters, desperado arrested here Sunday with Floyd Hamilton, bragged today of outwitting Federal Bureau of Investigation agents.

Walters revealed that he had "spent some time" in company of G-men who failed to recognize him as the No. 2 bad man of the Southwest.

The incident occurred Saturday night when Walters visited the home of a relative in South Dallas. He spent several hours in the house and fled when G-men attempted to capture Hamilton, who had followed him.

The two were later captured. Walters went to the house and was met by federal agents. He said he explained he was one of the "Wall boys." Elmer Wall, who lives at the address, is Walters' cousin.

Later Hamilton approached and was recognized. When he was ordered to surrender he fled. An agent shot him in the left leg but failed to stop him.

As the agents fled from the building after Hamilton, Walters escaped. He was arrested shortly afterwards, however, by city police.

Hamilton escaped the G-men in the darkness, only later to be captured by city police in the Trinity river bottoms.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, telegraphed police chief Robert Jones that the capture of the two was "one of the most outstanding pieces of police work performed by any law enforcement agency."

Hamilton pleaded with officers to end his life the same way they did that of his brother, Raymond, in the electric chair.

He said he was tired of living and ready to walk into the death chamber rather than accept a long prison term. Police said they would cooperate in an effort to satisfy Hamilton's request.

Hamilton and Walters, since their escape from the Montague county jail in March, have been accused of scores of crimes, robberies, kidnappings and shootings.

Dewey Snickers Up His Sleeve

Apparently laughing up his sleeve at some aspect of the day's developments, Thomas E. Dewey is pictured here leaving New York Supreme Court during a recess in the trial of James J. Hines, powerful Tammany leader, as the political "fixer" on behalf of the Dutch Schultz gang on policy racketeers. He appeared confident of winning a conviction in the critical prosecution of his career as a "racket-buster."

EUROPE GIVEN BIG SETBACK IN PEACE PLAN

By United Press
Europe suffered a series of sharp setbacks today in her struggle with war worries.

These developments intensified her international headache: Collapse of proposals for non-intervention in the Spanish Civil War.

Resignation of two French cabinet ministers as a result of government action to end labor troubles.

Tightening of bonds between Germany and Hungary.

Slovak threats to support nazis in the Czech minority crisis.

Week-end developments emphasized that six months of British Prime Minister Chamberlain's leadership of the campaign to avoid war had ended just about where it began.

In China the United States gunboat Oahu steamed up the Yangtze River for an unannounced destination, as American and other foreign officials deliberated whether to try to break a Japanese blockade.

The Japanese blockade has been maintained against foreign vessels on the ground that the war made the river unsafe, but Japanese vessels have moved freely up and down.

Branding Averts Baby Mix-Ups

Mix-ups of new-born babies will be easier to prevent with the "brand" new method of identification at birth pictured here. Mother and baby are similarly "branded" by a soft violet ray as pictured above, where a nurse in the Beth Israel Hospital in Newark, N. J., is seen comparing the markings. The process is safe and painless, and the initial last about two weeks.

By United Press

'Incidents' Are Never the Real Causes of War

If you can make any particular sense out of the alarming and conflicting reports about the Japanese-Russian border clashes, and can satisfy yourself from them which side is taking the aggressive, you will be doing a great deal better than most of your fellow countrymen—or, for that matter, than most of the Japanese and Russians.

Nothing in the whole imbroglio seems to make sense. One side relates that the other has been committing wilful and unprovoked attacks; the other denies this and says precisely the same thing about its opponent. All that seems really clear is that some highly confused fighting has been taking place, that a number of men have been killed, and that the world is standing on the very brink of a new and terrible war whose ultimate consequences are absolutely unpredictable.

Whether that war will actually develop is beyond the power of human forecasting right now. But the whole tragic business does provide a working illustration of the truth that the immediate cause of a war is never the real cause.

Japan and Russia may go to war now and they may not; but their real quarrel is not the brush between two groups of frontier guards, or the question of ownership of an unimportant and doubtless unattractive little Manchurian hill. And if the war does come, you wouldn't know much more about its real cause even if you did know just exactly who shot at whom first in this particular border skirmish.

The tragic, fundamental truth seems to be that Asia, huge as it is, just isn't big enough to hold both Japan and Russia—or not, at any rate, under the ideas which their respective governments hold. For it happens to be the aim of each government to dominate the whole continent.

A few men in the Kremlin have looked to the future and have seen a particular kind of world taking shape there. If their vision is to come true, Russia must be mistress of Asia.

A few other men in Tokio have likewise looked to the future and have seen another kind of world taking shape. And if their vision is to come true, Japan must be mistress of Asia.

There is the cause of this border skirmish, and of the terrible thunderheads which are piling up on the horizon. Two ideas, two visions, two grandiose and far-reaching plans, are in conflict.

Whether the average Russian and the average Japanese knows or cares much about those ideas is beside the point. His job is simply to die for the chosen plan, when the right time comes—which he will undoubtedly do with due heroism.

To understand the cause of this threatening war, it is these conflicting visions and schemes which must be studied, not the details of one isolated clash. They mean no more than did the pistol shot which killed the Archduke Franz Ferdinand in 1914.

Bringing in the Next Heavyweight Contender

Re-Allocation of Auto Licenses Urged To Simplify Cumbersome System

BY GORDON K. SREARER
El Paso, Fort Worth, Galveston and Houston head the classification he proposes. Letters which do not form the initials of large cities would be skipped. For the cities with conformable initials, Miller's plan calls for license figures following the initial letter. Each would begin with "1" and run up as far as required. "D18" would be the eighteenth car registered at Dallas; "S286" would designate a San Antonio automobile. If the Miller plan is adopted by the highway commission, a hard blow will be the prestige and fame of a filling station attendant at Carlsbad Cavern. This youth hails touring Texans with "Hullo, Fort Worth," "Howdy, Houston," or other appropriate salutation, depending on what part of Texas they come from.

Many think they have been recognized, or have been mistaken for someone the attendant has known. They ask when the attendant came to New Mexico, where he worked in their home towns, and all sorts of questions, trying to "place" him. He gets a kick out of their mystification. It is all very simple for him. He has memorized the assignment of license plates to the counties with the principal Texas cities in them. If a Texas car has a license plate with a number within the thousands assigned to Bexar county, he salutes it with "How's Old Santos?" Similarly, he spots where the other cars have come from. Chief worries for highway officials over the car registration is in regard to the fee rather than the numbering system. Pierce Brooks' plan for nominal and uniform license charge would cost the highway department a considerable loss in its maintenance fund, if it became a law.

New Deal Choice in Empire State

James H. Fay, New York deputy collector of internal revenue, is out to take the Democratic nomination away from Representative John J. O'Connor, who helped block much New Deal legislation from his post on the rules committee. Administration support is expected for Fay.

The plan is arousing opposition, too, among officials of the smaller counties, which, under present law, are permitted to retain all of the automobile license fees paid within the county. If fees are reduced, they say, small counties will lack enough money to keep up local roads. Depending on this source, the counties have levied taxes up to or so near the limit that they have no room left to increase road taxes. Automobiles and gasoline seem to be the objects upon which taxes can be piled with the least protest. The two, therefore, have come to supply a large part of some of the state's major funds. Automobile and truck registrations bring the highway department about $10,000,000 a year.

The gasoline tax is distributed three ways. Two cents a gallon goes to the highway department for roads. One cent a gallon goes into a fund to pay off bonds that were issued by counties and road districts to build roads that later were made part of the state highway system. The other cent a gallon goes to schools. The bond retirement fund has accumulated about $7,500,000. When the cent-a-gallon first was set aside to aid counties and districts in meeting their bond obligations, it did not produce enough for several years to pay the full debt coming due on the portion of the bond issues which a board computed was used on state highways. Now it brings in more than enough. As a result, county officials are trying to get the bond board to apportion the surplus to them to make up for the years when the fund was low.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
"FOREVER boiled" need not be the fate of potatoes. Turn to France when you want a few recipes with vivacity. Or turn to the stimulating pages of "The Finer Cooking," a book written by X. M. Boulestin. I dined at his world famous restaurant in London recently and I can guarantee his recipes. Pommes de Terre Savoyarde. Cut potatoes in very thin slices. Butter a fireproof dish, put in a layer of potatoes, salt, pepper, and nutmeg, a sprinkling of grated cheese, more potatoes, and so on until the dish is full. Do not press the potatoes down. Fill the dish with meat stock. Boil for 6 or 7 minutes on the top of the stove; if the stock disappears add a little more, then finish with a few pieces of butter here and there, in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). When the stock has been absorbed the potatoes are ready and the top is pleasantly browned. Test the potatoes with a sharp knife. Pommes de Terre Parisienne. Peel large potatoes and scoop little balls out of them. This is done with a special spoon-shaped utensil. Wash the balls and put them in cold salted water. Bring slowly to a boil, boil half a minute and drain well. Cook them slowly in butter at the foaming stage, shaking them occasionally until they are nicely browned (about a quarter of an hour). Drain, salt and serve. Tomorrow's Menu. BREAKFAST: Stewed sour cherries, bacon, nut muffins, coffee, milk. LUNCHEON: Cream of celery soup, stuffed tomato salad, Melba toast, fruit bowl, tea, milk. DINNER: Tomato juice, broiled steak, Pommes de Terre Frites, new peas in cream, romaine with French dressing, fresh gooseberry pie, coffee, milk.

SWIMMING RECORDS FALL before Lenore Knight Wingard. Lenore remarks: "Camels never tire my taste or get on my nerves. When I feel taut after a meet, a Camel helps ease the tension. Another thing—Camels are so mild—they never irritate my throat."

"IT'S CAMELS FOR ME!" declares Jane Fauntz Manks, whose brilliant diving has brought her national fame. She adds: "After a diving exhibition when I feel exhausted, I welcome the 'lift' in energy I get with a Camel. Camels give me a swell sense of well-being—especially during and after meals. Camels certainly add to the joy of living. They're so mild and fine-flavored!"

RALPH GULDAHL, twice winner of U.S. Open golf crown, says: "One thing about Camels is the 'lift' in energy they give. I've smoked Camels 10 years and I've never known them to jangle my nerves. I appreciate Camels."

But after driving Nick the Ferret back to the city, Mr. Scala had returned to Connecticut the following night. Mr. Scala had an excellent reason for wishing to track down Bull Griffin.

He had been told by one or two seccadilloes that smacked of the double-cross, Mr. Scala had insured the displeasure of the Little Cheese. Wherefore, it behooved him to get back into the good graces of his liege lord. And the best way to do this, Mr. Scala knew, was to assist materially in the rubbing out of Bull Griffin.

From a minor and disloyal member of the Griffin gang, Mr.
Scala had learned that Bull had interests in Connecticut, especially in New Haven. And since the minor member had informed him that Mr. Griffin had not returned to the Bronx on the day following the shooting near Winstock, Mr.
Scala concluded that Mr. Griffin still lurked in the Nutmeg State.
Accordingly, for several days, he had reconnoitered in the vicinity of New Haven and in the surrounding country. And this afternoon his efforts had been rewarded. Driving on the main highway, with the cloth cap well

Nick, the Ferret

down over his eyes, he had been amazed to perceive Messrs. Griffin and Spaldini ambling unconcernedly along the road. Mr.
Scala had stopped his car and watched from afar. To his surprise they had turned off on that little side road which ran to the house where the gun battle had taken place.

It was all he wanted to know.
Backing furtively out of Mrs.
Preston's garden, he slunk along the river to his car. Climbing hastily in, he headed for New York.

The reason that Mr. Scala did not shoot Mr. Griffin from the shrubbery and so divide the glory of his demise with no man is simple. Mr. Scala was not an honest-to-goodness gunman. He was an informer.

By nightfall Mr. Scala was reposing in a dimly lit room over a dimly lit ginmill in that witching section of Greater New York known as Queens. Across from him, the center of a small group of lantern-jawed, indigo-chinned characters, was the Little Cheese.

THE Little Cheese looked like something that appears to the disordered brain during a delirium.
He was no more than five-foot-three and the Creator might have had a rain-barrel in mind when He designed him. His shoulders were broad, but rounded. His chin looked like one of the Florida keys. His skin was swarthy and full of furrows. In the dictionary sense of the word he was cockeyed. And to add to the general nightmare, he wore a bristly mustache of gleaming black which he habitually caressed with a forefinger the size of a clothes-pin.

"You say you seen dat mug Griffin?" he inquired of Mr. Scala.

Mr. Scala told all. At the end of his recital the Little Cheese uttered a "pah" of disgust.

"Why'n't you give him da works den an' dere?" he demanded.

Mr. Scala, no mean self-excuser, went into a lengthy explanation
as to why he had not given Bull Griffin the works "den an' dere."
"Anodder 'ting," said the Little Cheese, when he had done.

"Youse guys didn' ought to let him git away da odder night."
He spat irritably into a brass cuspidor. "Youse lugs is a bunch of heels. Dey ain't none of youse c'n shoot fer nuts."

There was unexpected opposition to this doctrine. It came from a small, dark-eyed man.
"Says who?" quoth the small,
dark-eyed man.

This daring soul was none other than Nick the Ferret. Nick the Ferret was pretty fed up. Not only had he failed to drill Mr.
Griffin, but Mr. Griffin, or his man Friday, had successfully drilled him in the right shoulder.
True, it had been but a surface wound. But it had stamped ignominy all over Nick the Ferret.
Wherefore Nick the Ferret was in no humor to discuss shooting.
Particularly bad shooting.

NICK THE FERRET felt safe in offering his superior a bit of back-chat by virtue of the fact that the Little Cheese's position as head of the gang was none too secure at the moment. Of late there had been dissension in the ranks; vague murmurs of rebellion. None knew this better than the Little Cheese. And none better knew the remedy. What he needed completely to reinstate himself with his cohorts was the opportunity - accomplishing some spectacular deed with his own hand. And here it was, ready-made and on the counter. Very suddenly the Little Cheese made up his mind. He took a breath and addressed Nick the Ferret.

"I says so, dat's who," he spurred. "An' just to give youse baboons da lowdown on who's wot aroun' here, I'm gonna go up dere Friday night an' rub out dis Griffin lug meself. An' you - the thrust the clothespin-like finger at Red Scala - "you're drivin' me an' showin' me da layout."

A respectful silence greeted this announcement. Nick the Ferret broke it.

"Oh, yeah?" he sneered. "Wot's da matter wit' goin' tonight?"

"Can't," said the Little Cheese briefly. "Dey's a meetin' of da Greenpoint Social an' Literary Club."

THERE is no question but there has been a scarcity of major league talent in recent years. This is especially true of pitchers and catchers.
But we have the reports of Ray Schalk of Indianapolis and other minor league managers and big league scouts that a bumper crop of material will be ready for deivery within two years.
Heading those ready for next season is the fantastic Charley

Maryland collegian will round out the finest outfield to play base-combination of Speaker, Hooper,

The Rifles have another corking catcher in Walter Judnich of Kansas City, and still another and younger one in Frank Silvanic of the Akron, O. Junior Yankees.
San Francisco has the best Pa-

19-year-old shortstop, Bill Lillard,

ANSWER: Botanists class the tomato, technically, as a berry, and, as such, it would be classed also as a fruit. The Bureau of

"is usually and commercially classed as such."

Ranger Teacher Makes Short Trip

H. L. Baskin and family and Miss Dora Jane Baskin, Mrs. F. G. Yonkers Jr., of Fort Worth and Donald Baskin, a nephew of Gorman, made a short trip last week which carried them through seven states. After leaving Texas as H. L. Sr., stated, "we drove to Little Rock, Ark., the 1st day on Sunday by noon we reached Memphis, Tenn., and from there recrossed the Mississippi river and drove north through Missouri into Cairo, Ill. Having some daylight left we crossed the Ohio river by ferry at Mound City, Ill., into Kentucky and drove on to Fulton, Ky., for the second night in camp. My boys, H. L. and M. L., got a kick from the idea we had touched 5 states that day. On the third we drifted south through Tennessee to Jackson and visited old Shiloh battle field on the Tennessee river, and then drove on into Jackson, Miss., a distance of 280 miles for the 3rd night. Tuesday I was looking for Texas and drove from Jackson, Miss., to Fort Worth, 508 miles.

We had a most enjoyable short trip. An hour spent in Fulton, Ky., with a tobacco commission man was interesting. We were shown a field of crisp growing tobacco and a tobacco barn filled with short leaf and burly tobacco in all stages of curing.

Despite some fine country seen, especially the rich valley land in Eastern Missouri, I still like the appearance of Eastland county very well. We covered 1980 miles.

New Film Presents Virtual Travelogue Upon Race Tracks

Sets representing sections of twelve famous race tracks were constructed at the Warner Bros. Studio for the production of "Little Miss Thoroughbred," coming to the Arcadia Theatre tomorrow.

While racing is only the background for the picture, which marks the first screen appearance of the six-year old child star, Janet Chapman, scenes of actual racing at tracks from Santa Anita to Saratoga and Florida to Canada were used.

These were filmed at the tracks, during actual races. For closer shots showing tiny Miss Chapman, John Litel, Ann Sheridan, Frank McHugh and others watching the races or around stables, betting windows and judges' stands, permanent sets, carefully duplicating the real scenes, were built at the studio.

Traffic Violators Must Curb Tongues When Fred's On Job

By United Press
FORT WORTH—Traffic law violators begin under a handicap if they try to argue heatedly with Patrolman Fred Holland, for Holland is able to record their statements in shorthand in his notebook.

Holland recently accused a truck driver of a parking violation. The driver retorted that it was "a blankety-blank shame" and told Holland to go tell the "so-and-so judge" that he would appeal any charges.

Holland transcribed the notes for the judge, who issued a warrant for the truck driver's arrest.
