JITTERY EUROPE IS AWAITING SPEECH OF HITLER ON MONDAY

By United Press
Europe, armed for war, entered a fateful week end tonight with declarations by Germany and Czechoslovakia which left her on the brink of conflict.

Warships, artillery, tanks and troops were in motion in advance of the important speech, on Monday, by Adolf Hitler, which may decide peace or war. Everything hinged on Hitler, who was silent at Nuremberg.

A thunderous prelude to Hitler's pronouncement came in a speech at Nuremberg by Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Nazi Germany's No. 2 man. Goering warned the world to keep hands off the Czechs. Boasting the might of the German air force and the impregnability of her borders, he virtually defied Britain and France.

He insisted that Germany is self-sufficient and could withstand a siege of 30 years. He branded Czechoslovakia as an uncultured little nation of oppression and declared that Germany will not allow the Sudetens to suffer long. If a world war starts, he declares, Germany will win.

The other speech was by President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia. He told of the mixed nationalities of his country and the power of the Czech army and the strength of her resistance of invasion.

While firm, Benes was not threatening or belligerent. He explained the sacrifices which Czechoslovakia is making to pacify the minority and expressed conviction that "our state will emerge victorious from its present difficulties."

The key to the question was believed to be in the hands of Sir Neville Henderson, British ambassador to Germany, delivered by secret courier.

The order was understood to have instructed Henderson to see Hitler immediately and warn him in cold, plain words, that Great Britain is not bluffing and must join France against Germany if Czechoslovakia is invaded.

There was no longer much doubt, except in some quarters in Germany, that Great Britain and France meant business. Her Maginot Line manned for war, France moved heavy artillery and tanks into the front back of the lines.

The Mediterranean and Atlantic fleets were ready for action. Residents of French towns along the German frontier were evacuating their families into the interior.

The government of Holland cancelled leaves of Holland troops along Holland's frontier facing Germany.

On the other side the London Evening Standard reported that 200,000 German troops were massed along German and Austrian frontiers, facing Czechoslovakia.

OIL DEVELOPMENTS IN PAST WEEK ARE LIGHT

Almost drastic reactions are prevalent in oil activities for the week, with few developments to interest the fraternity.

W. J. Dobbs, No. 1 Greer, E. T. R. R. survey, near Carbon, had drilled 209 feet from its 1200 foot depth of last week. This is to be an Ellenberger test.

N. D. Gallagher, No. 1 Hearn section 1-2 H&TCRR survey, is down to 975 feet. It is five miles northeast of Carbon.

Hickok Producing and Development company No. 1 Cleveland "B" lease, northwest of Cisco was cementing 5 1-2 inch casing at 4,017 feet.

New Type Suit For Diving Is Invented

SYDNEY, Australia.—A new diving suit, which may revolutionize present methods of deep-sea diving, will be used in an attempt to salvage the cargo of the steamer Cumberland.

The wreck, with its cargo of metal valued at $200,000, lies at a depth of 47 fathoms off the coast of New South Wales. The ship struck a mine in 1917, while on the way to England with copper, iron and zinc for British munitions.

Navy officials, who have been testing the new diving suit, the invention of E. R. Clifford of Sydney, believe that it will permit diving operations at such a great depth owing to its novel construction. It is built in two compartments, the outer of which is subjected to air pressure, while the inner contains air at normal surface pressure.

In old type of diving suits paralysis often resulted from the pressure of the air that had been forced in in order to resist the water.

TREND OF THE CONVENTION IS STILL PUZZLE

By United Press
AUSTIN, Sept. 10.—The state Democratic convention at Beaumont next Tuesday will heat acute political wounds or greatly aggravate them, but capitol observers tonight were uncertain which it would be.

Some believe that the Democratic nominee for governor, W. Lee O'Daniel, may get into a dilemma, like that which Dan Moody faced in the state convention in 1928. Like Moody, O'Daniel might be drawn one way by liberal supporters and another by a straight-laced faction.

Exclusion of Gerald Mann, the nominee for attorney general, and Jerry Sadler, nominee for railroad commissioner, from their county delegations, threatened another breach. Opponents of both were included in O'Daniel's slate of favorites.

Pierce Brooks, defeated by Coke Stevenson for lieutenant governor, also was omitted from the Dallas delegation. He said he will go to Beaumont and demand a seat. Sadler expects to attend the convention, and Mann's plans had not been announced.

Picture of Prosperity— Drawn From Life

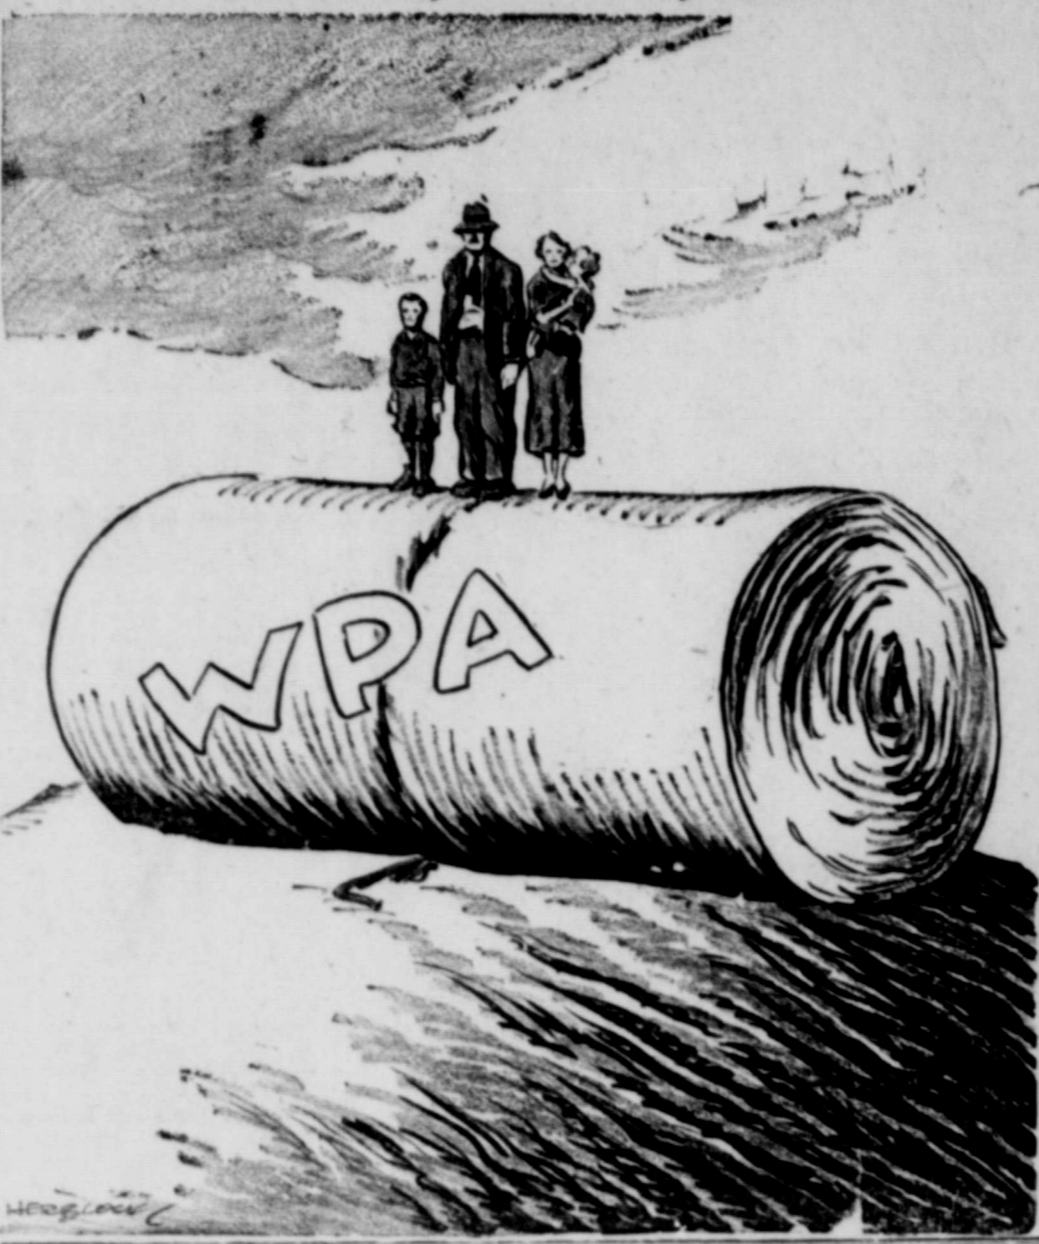

By Bruce Catton

In these days of depression, class antagonism and the threat of war, try to imagine a country where— There is a solid business boom that has brought industrial production 50 per cent above the 1929 level. Unemployment is at a minimum, and the national income can buy 25 per cent more than ever before. There is a "new deal" which has the hearty co-operation of business, which has scared no single industrialist or financier, and which is able to carry on a great spending program without piling up debt for future generations to pay. There is no armaments race on, and the people are not living under the fear of war. All of this sounds rather unreal and fantastic for the year 1938, yet such a country does exist, and the way it operates can readily be examined by anyone who has a few hundred dollars for steamship fare.

The country is Sweden. As a foundation for its immunity from economic disaster, Sweden (according to a recent survey in Fortune Magazine) has these four things: General acceptance by capital and government of a stable wage rate. Consumer co-operatives which present soaring prices in boom-time, and so prevent a subsequent collapse. Legal regulation of agricultural prices so that neither farm income nor food prices fluctuate violently. A government bank which is committed to the maintenance of low interest rates. Beyond this, it has a government which uses the "pump priming" scheme regularly—but which does it with a difference. It begins to pour out money at the first sign of depression—yet deficits so incurred are charged against the following years at the rate of 20 per cent a year until they are paid. In good times, the government spends little taxes highly; in bad times it spends much and taxes little. Thus, when private enterprise falters, the government can keep the ball rolling until the pickup comes.

All of this, of course, represents a determined and intelligent attempt to make both capitalism and democracy work. But it stands for more than that. It indicates a willingness—on the part of labor, capital and politics—to be realistic, to make compromises, to sink selfish interests in the larger good. Whether what would work for Sweden, with its 6,000,000 inhabitants, would work for the United States, with its 120,000,000, is perhaps a question. Probably no exact paralleling of the Swedish program would be possible here. But the example is well worth studying, even so, as an indication that a solution of modern problems is possible.

Washington Experts Shift Pins and Guess Strategy of Next World War

By Joe Alex Morris
WASHINGTON — There is a room in the War Department where blunt-figured men daily shift pins across a map in an effort to guess—on the basis of today's strife—how the world will fight its next great war. This month, however the march of the colored pins is second in importance to dispatches arriving from Europe where American military attaches got a glimpse of unprecedented late summer war games. If the cables sifting into the war department agree with conclusions of experts abroad they are reporting that the world's great armies are at a new peak of perfection. For the last few weeks almost every European frontier hill and ravine has been scarred by hobnail boots and cleated gun wheels. Nations fearful of war have been even more afraid not to rehearse for it. Little Belgium put her 70,000 soldiers through extraordinary tests of endurance. Greater Germany, on the other extreme, called probably a million men to play at arms and other millions of civilians to participate in a test of the theory of total war. Weaknesses in the great war machines came out. Unexpected stresses and strains developed. But the net result convinced European general staffs that, excepting Russia's unknown power, the hosts of destruction on land, in the air and at sea were never in better form. Spain, incidentally, is expected to have an army of about a million reserves when and if peace is restored there. It will be an army trained by many months of violent warfare. It may change the balance of military power in Europe—an added starter in the traditional army set-up on the continent. Opinion of French experts gives the Italian and German air forces high rating, but there has been little change in the generally unfavorable view of the Italian "volunteers" fighting in Spain. The Spanish loyalists call them "la columna Pedro Domecq," because the motto of the Pedro Domecq liquor firm says that it "generally prefers not to expose."

The French army this year is at a new low in one respect. The 1938 class called for military service was born late in 1917 and early in 1918—the low years for births due to the world war. It is 30,000 short of the normal 160,000 men. Italian Premier Benito Mussolini amazed a great many well-informed persons—possibly King Emmanuel included—when he announced he would go straight ahead with the new Fascist racial program which is directed at the Jewish population quota of one Jew to every 40,000 non-Jews in Italy. Reliable sources have said that the ruling House of Savoy thus far has refused to take sides in the anti-semitic controversy; pointed out that King Emmanuel chose a Jewish tutor for Crown Prince Humbert when the heir to the throne was in his teens. Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, son-in-law of the premier; Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist party; Dino Alfieri, minister of the popular enlightenment, were credited with pushing the racial program. Speculation on fundamental reason for Italy's attack on Jews has been unusually divergent; led to suggestions that Mussolini sought to divert his home folks attention from the revived Anglo-French accord dramatized by the visit of King George and Queen

At Wheel When Count Was Killed

A pretty cabaret cigaret girl, Mildred Gaydon, pictured above as she was released by police after questioning, was the driver of the car in which the Count of Covadonga, eldest son of former King Alfonso of Spain, was fatally injured at Miami, Fla. She was booked on a technical charge of manslaughter. Because the count suffered from haemophilia, a disease in which the blood does not coagulate, physicians were unable to stop the bleeding after the accident. A claim near the spot and shortly thereafter the Goldfields Australian Development Company took out a $60,000 option on his land.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
HOP SUEY seems to be a secret passion of many American women. Several times I've received letters from women asking me to print a recipe. To those ladies, I dedicate this American variation of chop suey. American Style Chop Suey (Serves 4 to 6) One and one-half cups lean pork, 1 cup celery, 3 onions, 2 bouillon cubes, 1 1/2 cups hot water, 2 tablespoons soy sauce, 1 tablespoon molasses, 2 tablespoons corn starch, salt, pepper. Cut meat, celery and onions in small pieces. Cook meat slowly in a little fat for 5 minutes, then add celery. Cover pan and cook 10 minutes. Next add onions and cook another 5 minutes, keeping lid on pan. Dissolve bouillon cubes in hot water, add soy sauce, molasses and corn starch that has been mixed with a little cold water. Mix all well and pour over mixture in frying pan. Add salt and pepper. Let simmer until meat is tender, about 1 hour. Serve with rice or fried noodles. Another reader says a friend serves a creamy cheese sauce on waffles but won't give her the recipe. Try this and see if it is what your friend uses. Whipped Cream Cheese One-quarter pound cream

Predicts a Rush to Niger Gold Sites

By United Press
PARIS, France.—A gold rush to the French colonies equal to any of the famous migrations of humanity in search of the precious metal is expected to result from the measures recently called for by Minister of Colonies Georges Mandel to raise the production of gold in France and her possessions. There is gold in French equatorial Africa in the upper reaches of the Niger river. The knowledge it exists will result in a wholesale rush to that part of the world despite the hardships and unhealthy climatic conditions, in the opinion of Louis Rollin, former minister of colonies. Rollin says that during his year of office in 1934 he was the governor-general of Niger. He commences prospecting in the Niger river valley and to the territory in such a manner as to prevent the natives from mining it. Now, with creation of a committee of Gold for the purpose of supervising scientific mining, Rollin believes that the discovery made as a result of their work in France's African possessions. He states that there is reason to believe that the territory in the upper Niger valley shows deposits of gold equal to those already discovered in the Gold Coast and in Belgian Congo. He points out that there is a deficiency of water sources in the district. He points out that there is a deficiency of water sources in the district.

HAPPY MAN!
Imagine! In the last two hours he has been to Timbuktu, China, Spain... laughed until he ached at a comedy...rescued a beautiful girl from the villain's clutches and lived happily with her ever afterwards. He went into the theatre bowed down with worries and came out whistling... with enough zip and zest to settle the war debt—much less his own. There is nothing like a change of scenery and a good laugh to put you in trim to fight life's battles. That's why creators of entertainment stand high among doctors of economic ills... they know that what America needs NOW is a good big Laugh!

THE AVERAGE MOVIE-GOER SPEAKS HIS MIND...

IT'S HARD for a fellow like me who thinks apple pie is one of nature's greatest gifts to man to believe that there are folks who honestly don't like it at all.

On the other hand, I can't abide liver and bacon—though I know it's highly regarded by many.

We all have our likes and our dislikes. We're all different—thanks be! A dull world it would be if we weren't.

That's why I say that the most remarkable thing about motion pictures is that they hit such a high average of pleasure-giving.

Take any individual picture and you'll find that most people who see it will get a lot of enjoyment out of it.

Not all, naturally. For example, I think a certain star is tops—while, to hear the way my next-door neighbor goes on about her, you'd think she wasn't good enough to be an "extra".

Or my wife sees a picture during the afternoon and raves about it at dinner. Maybe son and I take it in that evening—and come home feeling that Mother is losing her judgment. And there you are. It's the apple pie situation all over again.

But, taking them all together, I figure that the "movies" give more pleasure to more people at a lot less cost than most anything the mind of man was ever responsible for—and have done the human race more downright good than all the medicines concocted since creation.

And I'll say this: The times when I've been disappointed in a picture have been a lot fewer than the other times when I've gone to see one I wasn't especially excited about in advance and been mighty glad I did.

Sure, I criticize the pictures. I pay my money and that's my right. As a matter of fact, I kind of figure that it's the criticism of average folks like me that's largely responsible for the pictures getting better and better all the time.

Through the years the motion picture has given its public countless hours of entertainment, countless hours of escape from harsh reality. It has taken millions away from trouble and sorrow, lightening their burdens and brightening their lives... making the world a better, happier place to live in.

It has grown—from "cowboys and Indians" to dramatizations of the works of the world's greatest authors... from temperamental flickers to technical perfection... from infancy to an intelligent maturity.

To provide the finest array of productions ever released the Motion Picture Industry has mobilized all its skill, all its imagination, all its resources to provide the greatest array of productions ever released.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
LINDA GORDON—heroine. She gave up Manhattan to return to her Blue Grass.
BRUCE RADFORD—newspaperman. He would give up anything for Linda.
UNCLE SANDY—horseman. He would give up anything, too, for a good horse.
MONTY HILL—rich racing devotee. He also wanted Linda.
Yesterday, Linda gets five more assignments. The strength of her first story. Then Bruce calls to say he wants to see her about Golden Toy.

CHAPTER XI

THERE was no beating about the bush with Linda. "What's this about Golden Toy?" she asked, the instant she greeted Bruce Radford on the hotel's mezzanine.

"First—my thanks to you." His shoulders straightened; he looked her squarely in the eye. A change had come over him; he seemed soft no longer.

"Thanks—for what?" she asked. "For waking me up."

"How—waking you up?" "When I found you were a competitor I went to work too. I filed my yarn last night. Did you?"

She nodded. Reached out, took his hand. "Sit down here." She drew him to a couch half-hidden in the shadows.

"I'm glad, Bruce, that you came to bat. Our yarns will be printed the same week. I—I didn't want to scoop you, because of what you did for Uncle." She looked up into his eyes.

"What did I do?" he asked innocently. "You gave him back a batch of notes you could have collected."

"Oh, that. He shrugged shoulders, as if it were nothing. "Uncle told me he had left one last vote downtown, for me to get it. He died that night; the trust company beat me to his desk. Found it. I talked to them—finally I yelled and cursed—but they wouldn't give it up. So they called Mister Sandy in. I couldn't stop 'em." His voice trailed off.

"Bruce, you were a peach!"

"Impulsively, she leaned over; her lips touched his cheek lightly. His face flamed red. "Aw, say," he mumbled, embarrassed. He got to his feet. Frowned down at her. "I was going to say something about Golden Toy, wasn't I?"

She nodded up at him. "Just this," he put his arms around her. "I know Brown Donald. You don't—wait!" He spoke quickly, dropping his arms, as her face grew tense. "Just want to say, if the two of you can't agree on anything—such as—whether to make a lepper or a flat-runner out of him—"

"He's a flat-runner," she said quickly.

"All right. Then if you bust up about the color of the cheese in the moon—well, I've got 50 cents or so. I'll buy his share; and let you campaign him, while I write. Fair enough?"

She shook her head. "There'll be no trouble between us." She got up. "Donald and I—everything's lovely."

He looked at her quizzically. "Lovely?" he repeated.

She nodded. "I'm driving to Berwyn this afternoon—to see tomorrow's cup race."

"Oh!" He bit his lips. "Well, be seeing you at the Downs. Going to make my headquarters in Louisville for a spell. S'long!"

He walked off, without looking back. She heard him clatter down the marble steps—

BEFORE nightfall she came to a community of large estates; owned, not by native horse folk, but by millionaires who set themselves up in the English tradition: with hunting lodges, private stables, courses behind well-wooded walls.

Long shadows had fallen over the rolling hills when Brown Donald in white stock, light sports coat and riding breeches, swung into the inn's low-roofed main room. "Linda," the name came naturally to his lips, as he seized both her hands.

He took her to dinner, driving in his roadster to an eating house a league down the country road.

"Golden Toy will make—" he began, as they ate heavy beefsteak and kidney pie.

"Not a jumper," she broke in quickly, but smiling at him. "He's a flat-runner, Don." (She felt so at home with him!) "We're going after the Jockey Club Stakes at the Downs next month. He's had a bit of training."

He thought a moment. "Maybe you're right," he conceded. "Still, I wanted to own my own jumper. You see—"

Dinner forgot, he leaned over the table, poured himself out to her:

"I'm of the unwanted generation, Linda. Came out of college to see bonds, only there's no people to buy 'em. Nobody wanted a well-turned-out chap like me. So, I knew a bit of horses—I'm lucky with 'em—and I began riding for friends; winning gold cups."

Her face sobered. He sensed something. "You've heard things—about me, haven't you?"

She nodded. Said: "But I didn't believe them."

"You heard," his thin lips set in a straight line an instant, "that I'm kept by Merle—whose horses I ride?"

Again she nodded, her face drained of color.

He grimaced. "Let's be honest—between each other. It's true—in a way. I stay at her house while riding in this section; and she did pay my hospital bills last spring when I came a cropper at Pinehurst. But I swear I've never taken a dollar—except for expenses. I'm—I'm just a retainer, in the English sense. Now you understand why I want this Golden Toy—to make me a free man? If we can win a big stake, then buy one or two more horses—get a winning stable—come on, let's go out in the moonlight!"

ABRUPTLY he got up, carried her out to his car. "Now that you know what a bum I am," he began, as they drove off, "object to being my partner?"

"Object?" She put her hand on his arm an instant, leaned toward him. "Don, I understand!" He moved his arm to shift gears—drove on, turned into a wooded lane. "There's a spot down here"—he didn't finish the sentence; slowed up to tool around sharp curves. Then abruptly they came upon it.

A rising knoll; beneath it a tree-lined lake, shimmering like liquid silver in the moon's rays. "Come," he said, stopping, and taking her hand. He led her to a live oak, with branches drooping down into the wavelets.

"I've always wanted to sit here—with someone," he told her, as he laid his coat on the grass for her. "I'm glad it's you."

His arm around her—lightly, in friendly fashion—clouds scurrying across the moon—rustle of leaves in the night breeze—purple lights beyond the water—not a light on the horizon—

His arm dropped; he looked away.

He spoke huskily, so low that she scarcely heard him: "I—I wish we'd met two years ago."

One hand on the ground, she was leaning closely to him. "But there's always the eternal now," she whispered.

For a long moment he did not answer. Below them wavelets lapped against stones somewhere, far off, a cricket chirped.

Again he was looking at her—wistfully, as if she were precious and beyond his grasp. "You're lovely—lovely, and as goddess as moonlight and dreams."

His arms reached out for her; he found her lips.

A dark cloud drifted under the moon; the earth was draped in purple shadows.

POET'S CORNER FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS - By Blosser

AFTERTHOUGHT
By J. B. F. Wright.

The people rose up in their might,
And put a man in power;
A man they thought would dare
to fight,
And try to save the hour.

He tooted up his mighty band,
And passed the biscuits out;
They gladly took him by the hand,
And thousands raised a shout.

The politicians thus were doomed,
The people had their choice;
Before the flowers of hope had bloomed,
The people changed their voice.

Their favorite son of Adam's race
To Austin struck a run;
He met those birds there face to face,
They said "We'll have some fun."

They shook his hand and slapped his back
And lauded him so high;
His mind went blooey, hight went black;
They caught him on the fly.

They told him they would help him out,
For unity 'we'll stand;
We'll pull together good and stout;
He took their proffered hand.

He said, "I'm glad I met you,
friends,
We'll make the grade in high;
We'll sweep the people in the trend,
"For politics must die."

He stepped before the microphone,
And got the people told;
And now the people hate to own,
They yelled so loud and bold.

Jonathan: Courageous Friendship

Text: I Samuel 20:4-17

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of Advance

IN striking contrast to Saul's jealous pursuit of David and his efforts to destroy the young shepherd is the friendship toward David of Saul's son, Jonathan—a friendship that has become a symbol in history, like the friendship of Damon and Pythias.

Saul, as we have seen, was a man of two characters and two moods. In his nobler character, he was modest with elements of kindness and magnanimity, but when jealous rage seized him, he was filled with hate and violence.

Jonathan seems to have inherited all his father's finest qualities and none of the evil. Jonathan was of course deeply pained by the attitude of his father, Saul, toward David, and he did all in his power to protect David from his father's wrath.

In the portion chosen for our lesson, David is confiding to Jonathan his fear of sitting at the table with the king lest the king's anger should endanger his life. Jonathan undertakes to inform David whether Saul is in a peaceable or a hostile mood. He makes a clear covenant of friendship with David, and the covenant is confirmed by both men.

A most effective passage in the Bible is the account of David's lament over Jonathan—over Saul as well as over Jonathan—all the more so because of the friendship of Jonathan and David.

Jonathan was a man of noble character, and his friendship with David was a true and faithful friendship.

David has been called the sweet singer of Israel, but in reality he was a man of bloodshed. But here in the friendship of Jonathan and David, we find a friendship that is the sweetest of all.

It is the poem of a sweet friendship that we have recorded in the Bible.

"I am distressed for the brother Jonathan; his friendship was to both men. David might well have hated the son of the shepherd who had sought to take his father's life; but Jonathan's praise that had been offered upon David, but saw in Jonathan all the qualities that were finest in Saul and any of his evil temptations; while Jonathan, on the other hand, saw in David qualities that he admired—age, magnanimity, and nobility.

The final scene in the friendship comes with the death of Jonathan in the battle of Mithras, which was the death of Jonathan in the friendship of Jonathan and David.

David might well have hated the son of the shepherd who had sought to take his father's life; but Jonathan's praise that had been offered upon David, but saw in Jonathan all the qualities that were finest in Saul and any of his evil temptations; while Jonathan, on the other hand, saw in David qualities that he admired—age, magnanimity, and nobility.

N. Y. TESTS PROVE WOMEN CAN LOSE FAT

Ask Your Doctor If It Isn't Good Way. Read EVERY Word

NEW YORK, N. Y. A test conducted by a prominent N. Y. physician and a nationally known newspaper woman proved there is a harmless, effective way to lose fat. If you'll only STICK TO IT and give it a fair trial.

In 30 days, 35 women lost a total of 296 lbs. EVERY woman lost fat—the average loss per woman being 11 1/2 pounds. The women first of all ate sensibly. And for proper functioning they took a little daily dose of Kruschen Salt. If you have the slightest doubt about this Plan just ask your own doctor about its safety and merit.

And this is important to know: Kruschen is not just one salt as some people may ignorantly believe. Rather, it's a blend of 6 active mineral salts (see box) which, when dissolved in water, make a beautiful mineral drink similar to the waters of famous European Spas where wealthy fat women have gone for years.

Here's the Kruschen Plan: Just take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in hot water every morning for better functioning. Go right on fatty foods and sweets—eat plenty of lean meats, fresh fruits and green vegetables. Plan to do this faithfully for 30 days and see if you don't lose fat and feel healthier and younger. A jar costs but a few cents and makes 5 gallons of most highly efficient mineral health water. At drugstore everywhere.

ARCOSTOOK WAR 100 YEARS OLD By United Press

AUGUST, Me.—The 100th anniversary of a bloodless war will be celebrated this year by Maine and Quebec Province. It was the Arcostook War over ownership of 12,000 square miles along the northeastern borders in the upper St. John Basin.

An authority on military matters predicts that Switzerland will be the Belgium of the next World War. That'll probably be ok with Belgium.

"SHE'S BETTER TODAY"

When a loved one has been ill, what a joy these words bring to you. And to us, too. For not only is a friend recovering, but often we have helped in that recovery by rushing medicines and supplies to the sickroom, filling prescriptions for the doctor.

"Better today!" How glad we are that we had all the drugs needed, that they were fresh, and of the highest quality obtainable. The privilege of filling such prescriptions is sacred to us. So remember, when you need medicine, it's safe to have faith in us.
