RENE ALLRED IS INDICATED IN CONSPIRACY

By United Press

HOUSTON, Sept. 17.—René Allred, brother of Gov. James V. Allred, and two other men were indicted today by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to violate the Connally "let" oil act. The other indicted are Neal Powers, former assistant attorney general of Texas and H. E. Hines, a man who was named in a similar case two years ago, but was never arrested.

U. S. District Attorney Douglas McGregor said he would ask $10,000 bond for Hines and $2,500 for Allred and Powers. The indictments came in the same district in which Gov. Allred was appointed to the federal bench by President Roosevelt. Allred is expected to assume his new duties between now and Jan. 1.

The indictments charged that the defendants and other persons indicted in 1937 violated the Connally hot oil act by producing, transporting and withdrawing from storage, petroleum which had been produced in excess in amounts permitted.

The oil was transported from Monroe, Montgomery County, to Paris Hook, Pa., it was charged.

Rene Allred and Powers were partners at Tyler at the time of the alleged conspiracy.

Rene Allred, Hines and Powers were charged on 10 counts, containing specific instances of alleged illegal oil running and listing 46 alleged overt acts.

As Lewis, petroleum investigator for the department of interior, worked on the case for the last two years.

Heinlein Defies the Czechs of Germany

By United Press

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—Konrad Heinlein, fugitive leader of the Sudeten German party, today re-constructed the party's "free press" and ordered it to remain on the Reich side of the Czech-German frontier.

Defying Czechoslovakian government order dissolving the Sudeten party and ordering its services to be surrendered, Heinlein issued a manifesto denouncing the Czech's act.

The first time the Bulldogs got the ball in scrimmage they lost it to Gorman on downs, deep in Gorman territory, but a 36-yard punt return by Houghton put them back on the Gorman 14-yard line and five plays netted the first touchdown of the game when Houghton plunged over from the 20-yard line.

The Bulldogs scored again in the first quarter with Houghton going over from the four-yard line plunging by McKeivain.

Bulldogs, Under Lights, Bring In Bigger Revenues

If the first game of the season is any criterion the lights on Bulldog Stadium in Ranger will prove a profitable investment, according to figures released Saturday by H. C. Wilkinson, school tax assessor and collector, who has charge of football receipts and expenditures.

Sept. 18, 1937, the Bulldogs opened their 1937 season in an afternoon game at Ranger, playing the Strawn Greyhounds. For that game total receipts were $109.20, with expenses of $60, including the guarantee paid to Strawn, leaving a profit of $49.20.

Sept. 16, 1938, the Bulldogs opened the 1938 season in a night game at Ranger, playing the Gorman Yellow Jackets. Total receipts for the night game were $283.76, with expenses of $65.50, not counting the light bill, for a profit of $218.26.

With interest in the Bulldogs running much higher this year than in 1937, the entire difference in gate receipts cannot be attributed to the fact that one was a night game and the other an afternoon game. But, whatever the cause, there was an increase of $169.00 in the net receipts of the two games, and a difference of $174.50 in total receipts.

No Payments For Destroyed Cotton Garrett Is Told

Agricultural department officials, replying to an inquiry of Congressman Clyde L. Garrett, have informed the official that no payments are made to farmers who plow up cotton totally damaged by boll weevils.

Congressman Garrett had been asked about the matter by Eastland county farmers, particularly those in the Staff vicinity.

Copy of a letter from I. W. Duggan, director of the Southern division of the AAA, to Garrett on the question was in part as follows: This acknowledges your letter of Aug. 19, regarding the heavy infestation of cotton boll weevils in Eastland county, Texas.

We fully appreciate the difficulties faced by those farmers of Texas and other areas whose crops were destroyed by the boll weevil, but there are no provisions of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act for making payments to producers for carrying out practices solely designed to aid in the control of the cotton boll weevil.

If the cotton producers decide it is in their best interest to plow up the cotton this act would not preclude their receipt of payment to which they would otherwise be entitled under the 1938 Agricultural Conservation program.

Sincerely yours,
I. W. DUGGAN, Director,
Southern Division.

DOCTORS VETO LIBERALIZING GROUP POLICY

By United Press

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The Medical association killed a move to liberalize its policy on group medicine and medical advertising today, but moved through five special committees toward a broad program for low-cost medical care.

Resolutions adopted favored the following: To ask President Roosevelt to appoint a committee of five or more to meet with an AMA committee and reconcile differences and work out a plan to provide more adequate medical care. This plan would supersede the proposed $850,000,000 national health program.

Advising the federal government to give financial and technical advice to allow states and communities to care for those unable to pay for medical care. The doctors also approved indemnity insurance, covering the cost of emergency medical care and hospital service.

BRITISH CLASH OVER PROBLEM OF SUDETENS

By United Press

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Informed circles believed tonight the British cabinet had split over guarantees to Czechoslovakia after a plebiscite and had postponed discussions until Premier Deladier and Foreign Minister Benet of France come to London Sunday.

A plebiscite is understood the British solution of the Sudeten German crisis. In event of a plebiscite the powers would have to make certain guarantees as to Czech security, and it was believed a cabinet split had developed over the nature of such guarantees.

Two long sessions of the cabinet to hear Prime Minister Chamberlain's report on his visit with Adolf Hitler and to approve his recommendations apparently failed of unanimous agreement.

Deladier and Benet will fly to London Sunday morning. Belief that the British government would sanction a Czech plebiscite prevailed despite reports Viscount Runciman, British mediator in Czechoslovakia, had told the cabinet that "Czechoslovakia would fight rather than submit to the 'self-determination' demanded by Hitler for the German minority.

Although official secrecy is air tight, the impression is growing the British government will agree to a plebiscite if it can convince the French to unite in putting pressure on the Czechs to accept it.

War danger is not removed, however, even if this occurs, as the Czechs may carry out their determination to resist. It is believed if the British try to hold off the French the Czech SOS possibly would be responded to by Soviet Russia alone.

The Earth Refuses to Be Victimized

A little while ago conservation authorities went to the beaver for help. Several colonies of these industrious creatures were planted in various parts of the west, the idea being that their dam-building activities would help in flood and erosion control.

Just how well this will work out is something only the future can tell. But the experiment will be well worth the cost if it impresses on us the queer, fascinating way in which nature maintains her balance. For it is mortally easy for blundering, thoughtless man to upset that balance, and he usually does so at his own cost.

A glimpse of the way the beaver fits into this natural balance is provided by a recent bulletin from William H. Carr, director of the Bear Mountain Trailside Museums in New York.

Eighteen years ago, Mr. Carr recalls, three pairs of beavers were released in Bear Mountain State Park, which is some 40 miles north of New York City. By now there are several hundred of their descendants, scattered in more than 60 colonies spread over a 39-mile radius.

Now the point is that because this park area has beavers, it has various forms of wild life which it did not have before. The beaver ponds, for instance, have furnished new breeding grounds for various kinds of fish. Wood ducks, which were formerly listed as extremely scarce, are now common. The rare pileated woodpecker has also increased—because the standing trees killed by the flooding of the pond provide him with his favorite stamping ground.

But that is only part of it. Sooner or later, every beaver pond is abandoned. Its dam goes to pieces and its water drains out. But the pond's bed is composed of rich fertile soil, carried downstream as silt and dropped when the beaver dam backed up the water. And where the pond was, a rich meadow comes to life.

Reeds, grasses, and bushes spring up; before long, trees take root. Here is "cover" for songbirds and game birds; a little later, such creatures as muskrats, raccoons and skunks find the spot a good feeding ground. As the number of such thickets increase, deer begin to appear.

All of this is a fascinating example of the way nature's balance works. Take out the beaver, and you pull the props from under many varieties of wild life; restore the beaver, and you restore to a given locality a whole wealth of wild life whose existence depends, in the last analysis, on the activities of those energetic little furcoated engineers.

And the story points its own moral. Nature's balance provides the environment in which we ourselves have to live. Only if we understand how it works, and make certain that we do not disturb it more than we need to, can we enjoy earth's yield to the full. When we exploit nature so ruthlessly, we ourselves are the ultimate losers.

TAKING STEPS TOWARD PEACE--OR WAR?

High in the Bavarian mountains three men walk up the steps of a rambling white house for the conference diplomatic observers believed would decide whether Europe will have peace or war. Adolf Hitler shows the way to his guest, Neville Chamberlain, who had flown to Hitler's home, near Berchtesgaden in a dramatic move to halt Europe's mad plunge toward conflict. When the British prime minister left after a three-hour conference, he was believed to have carried to his government Hitler's declaration that only annexation of the Sudeten region of Czechoslovakia would satisfy Germany. Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, is seen in the background between Hitler and Chamberlain in this photo, which was radioed to America.

Ladies Bible class Monday 3:00 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday 7:45 p. m.

The religious debate at Gorman will close Tuesday evening. About 1,000 people have been in constant attendance since the debate began last Monday. The disputants are Bro. W. Wallace Layton, Ranger Church of Christ, and W. A. Kile, Landmark Baptist, Cisco.

The discussion now in progress is on the Eternal Perseverance of the Saints, or can a child of God sin and be lost. Mr. Kile, as all Baptists affirm, says that it is impossible for a child of God to sin and be lost. Mr. Layton denies.

Come to the services of the Church of Christ. You'll be glad to hear the old Jerusalem Gospel preached true to form.

HOW 25 WOMEN LOST UGLY FAT In Special N. Y. Test

Ask Your Doctor If It Isn't Good Way. Read Every Word

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Is a test by a prominent N. Y. physician and nationally known newspaper woman—25 women lost a total of 288 lbs. in 40 days. YOU, too, can follow this SAME SENSIBLE plan right at home and here it is:

First of all get on a fatty meat and sweets. Eat plentifully of lean meats, fish, fruit, fresh fruits and vegetables. And for proper functioning—take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in hot water every morning. DON'T MISS A MORNING!

And this is important! Kruschen is NOT harmful. It is not just one salt as some people ignorantly believe. Rather it's a blend of 4 active mineral salts (ferrous, right on base) which when dissolved in water make a healthful mineral drink similar to Famous European Spa waters where healthy women have gone for years. A jar of Kruschen costs only a few cents and makes 5 gallons of a most highly efficient mineral drink.

cial Order" will be the theme of the pastor's sermon this morning. The great need of real regeneration will be emphasized in this discourse. As the schools have opened, and business picks up, the church needs to take its place in the activities of the autumn season.

This church extends to everyone a cordial invitation and welcome to all its services.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

G. Alfred Brown, Pastor
In the Church School beginning at 9:45 this morning, final preparations will be made for next Sunday's big "Back to Sunday School Day" which will include Promotion Day in the Sunday School, and Rally Day at the morning church service. Also, this morning, there is to be formed a new class for Intermediate Boys, with Mr. J. R. Banes in charge.

Mr. Banes has had wide experience in boys work, both in the Sunday School and Boy Scout work.

At 11:00 o'clock, the choir will sing the anthem, "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings," with Mrs. Weir, former choir director who is back on a vacation, taking the solo part, and with Mrs. James Campbell, the former Marguerite Adamson who is also back on a vacation, at the piano. The pastor will preach on the theme of "Christian Progress," as urged by Paul, in his letter to the Philippians.

The Epworth Leagues will meet at 7:00 o'clock, and the Evening Service at 7:45. In the latter service, the pastor will preach from the theme, "God Is Love."

On Wednesday at 7:30, there is to be another of those famous church-wide covered dish suppers, with everyone invited to come and bring a "covered dish" of food to help supply the meal.

DAVID: Triumphant Faith

Text: Psalms 23 and 27:1-6

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

DAVID, king of Israel and ancestor of our Lord, was surely one of the most amazing men who ever lived—a man in whom several personalities, conflicting and contradictory, seemed to mingle.

We know him first as the guileless shepherd boy coming to the camp of armed men to bring food to his older brothers in the army, finding the camp in consternation at the challenge of Goliath, and fearless and confident, going forth to meet Goliath with a sling and five smooth stones.

The shepherd boy grows up into a composite of characters. We have the man of peace, a leader of daring men like himself, an outlaw who becomes the deliverer of his people, yet whose career is so drenched in blood that he is forbidden to build the Temple, so that honor is reserved for his son Solomon.

We see him engaged in an illicit love affair, leading in the foul murder of an innocent man and patriot—and yet when his sin is brought home to him by a courageous prophet, his sense of justice is such that he acknowledges his wrong.

We see him in the camp, uttering without any thought of its fulfillment a yearning for a drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem. When hero-worshipping soldiers have risked their lives to bring it, we see him paying it out on the ground as a sacrifice and offering, unwilling to take for himself that for which men had risked their lives. Then, we have him pictured with his harp as the sweet singer of Israel and the reputed author of many of the Psalms, which in general have been for the world "The Psalms of David."

He appears in our lesson, especially through Psalms 23 and 27, as a symbol of triumphant faith.

If more than write the 23rd Psalm, he would have been worthy of a great place of distinction among men. Successive ages have borne witness to the beauty of his sentiment and to the note of calm and unwavering confidence in which it contemplates both life and death.

It moves on the plane of the highest things of life. There is physical satisfaction. How can there be any truly happy living where there is penury and want? The human spirit may triumph over these things with great fortitude—and there have been men and women who have been noble in their poverty, but they could hardly be said to have been happy or satisfied.

The Psalmist recognizes the need of satisfaction for the body. There is refreshment and enjoyment. There is rest from labor and fatigue.

But there is man's part and place in the higher paths of righteousness. There is the sense of triumph over evil, and the consciousness of a great Presence that is near man to strengthen and help and support him. There is the consciousness that the surrounding human life is goodness and loving kindness, and there is a sense of the permanency of human life.

It is the same thing which the 27th Psalm in its early verses reinforces with striking illustrations. It is the note of triumph of light over darkness, of salvation over destruction, of courage over fear, of beauty and order over chaos and ugliness, of worship and song over evil and untruth.

Are these things true? Need we ask it? The witness of history, the witness of man's spirit, the witness of the divine revelation of Jesus of Nazareth—all these confirm the vision of the sweet singer of Israel and the beauty and faith of his song.

SERIAL STORY

HIT-RUN LOVE

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN
COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday Pat recalls her first meeting with her fiance Larry. She had insisted on taking her home.

CHAPTER II

THAT was the first time she had experienced his persuasive manner. She had demurred, even argued, but had he carried out his plan. Soon she was in his car, not one of the great shining ones, but a car that made them two against the world with the snow beating down harder without, and laughter and easy talk within. He had mapped on the radio and talked quickly to break the formality.

He was interested in her work, in the people she met in the court—the attorneys, bondsmen, judges. "It pays to have friends like that," he had said casually. "They can help you out."

Pat nodded slowly. "Yes, I suppose they can. I got my job there because of my father. He knew influential people when he was alive. But I never thought of needing the help of important people for myself. I guess I'd rather get places on my own."

"You shouldn't have much trouble," he had said smiling down at her.

That was the beginning. Five months later they were engaged. And so now her life was full, preparing for their home, and then marriage. Larry had promised to get the boys jobs during vacation, so that worry was lessened. And the family liked him. Liked his easygoing manner, his acquaintance with the big city, with those magic names that meant society out in the west end.

THE memories faded. Judge Kelly came back to the bench; he gavel rapped for order. Pat clenched her grip on the pencil and filled another sheet with notes.

The day wore on. Tom Sweeney sat sprawled out in the witness chair, his brown hair with red tints in it tumbling over his broad forehead, his lower eyes friendly as they looked at Pat. Nothing came about him now, she thought, but those same eyes could be cold, searching when he was questioning people. She smiled back at him. He was new in the job and not yet at ease in the courtroom. She was well thought of over at police headquarters, she had heard. That was why he had been assigned to the tough traffic job.

He turned his hair back and saw Tom on the chair. "You're a good lawyer," he said in that deep, steady voice that had made many people squirm earlier in the day. "We ran overtime, didn't we?"

"I'm glad to hear that," he said, nodding. "How about going down to the drug store for something? You won't have to take any words of wisdom down then, you know."

She smiled, but shook her head. "I don't think I'll take time. I have an orange in my desk. I want to get through early. Thanks, though."

She wanted to finish up, wanted to get away to do some shopping and hurry home to be ready when Larry came—Larry!—the name rang through her heart. The room faded away. Nothing was real except Larry and herself.

"Ought to take time off to relax," Tom's voice came to her again. "Or is it all this rush for a social reason? A young man, I suppose." He grinned and turned to answer a question as the desk sergeant came over.

... a familiar coupe cutting out dangerously, speeding away—away from two limp figures on the pavement.

BACK in the little cubbyhole that she used for an office Pat looked at her face in a tiny mirror. She wondered if her happiness could be seen in her eyes as a young woman.

Lights were flickering on in street windows, headlights of cars made highlights on the wet streets. People ran and hurried at crossings, and cars honked and jockeyed at stop lights.

HER eyes narrowed as she caught a glimpse of a familiar coupe. Then a smile curved her lips. Funny how in all that maze of traffic she could see but one car; should recognize that bumped place on the rear left fender, and the way the license plate hung crookedly down near the bumper.

The bus sped up and she caught a glimpse of Larry; his felt hat turned down at the familiar angle, his collar up around his chin. Then the cars separated and he was lost ahead in the rain, cutting in and out with the speed he loved. She hoped he would be careful. So many accidents happened in the rain. Probably she was too tired to think of anything else, but working in an atmosphere of reckless driving, speeding, illegal parking phrases all day.

The bus slowed down with an abruptness that threw her against the window. A scene flashed across her eyes, changed, melted into a new picture, but not before certain things stamped themselves indelibly on her consciousness. The familiar coupe with its bumped fender cutting out dangerously close to the bus, speeding away, other cars slamming on brakes, wheeling out—away from a rain-soaked bundle on the pavement.

The bus driver was already out. Voices came in the door. "She was standing in the safety zone!" "Hit-run driver!" "The woman's done for, but the kid's still moves!" Words that beat at her like machine-gun bullets.

The lights still made bright pools of color in the rain, but the bundle on the street that now evolved into two limp figures, overshadowed all else.

For a moment a stab of jealousy had gone through her, and then she had silently laughed it away. It was she whom he loved, she whom he had chosen. With her arms filled with bundles she waited in the shelter of a door as her bus scrambled on as another rush of rain broke over the city. She slipped into a seat shaking the drops from her collar, wiping the mist from the window to watch the home-going traffic start.

until then it was her own. Hers and Larry's. She went back to her work, her fingers flying over the keys, playing a melody of promise.

Intermittent showers came and went while she hurried through her work. And then out on the street, running to the shop where she had seen the brightly colored breakfast set, gay flowers against a cream background, squat cups, a funny cream and sugar set, tea towels in plaids, and a few odd plates rich in the shades of old Mexico.

Soon they would be in her own home. She wished sometimes that Larry felt the thrill she did in furnishing their home. He left it up to her.

"You'll have to live with them," he had said, "whatever you get will be all right with me. I have enough to do talking colors and fabrics when I'm selling cars."

Yet she knew he liked nice things: rugs, crystal, pictures and clothes. During the winter social season he had told her of some of the big homes in the west end where he had gone on business.

"Young Dottie Barnes got a new convertible yesterday," he had once told her. "A debut present from her old man. I took it out and drove her around for a trial spin. What a house and what a girl. She's young, but she sure knows how to wear clothes. Not bad company either."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

Sunday school, 9:45 a. m. Morning Worship, 11 a. m. Wednesday, testimonial service.

Public cordially invited. "Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday, September 18.

The Golden Text is: "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand for ever" (Isaiah 40:8).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power; for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created" (Revelation 4:11).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Matter disappears under the microscope of Spirit" (page 284).

Ranger Couple Start A Loan Fund For Students at College. WEATHERFORD — Hon. and Mrs. L. H. Flewellen of Ranger have begun a loan fund in Weatherford College in honor of their son, Lonnie Hugh, deceased. This loan fund was begun by placing $100.00 in the Weatherford College Loan Fund.

They expect to add to this until it becomes a larger fund. It was their request that students borrow from this fund in small amounts in order that it may reach a greater number of students.

The Board of Trustees, the faculty and the administration of Weatherford College have expressed to Judge and Mrs. Flewellen their hearty cooperation for this worthy cause.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — Amateur referees who take it upon themselves to decide such matters as handing down a curbstone opinion that the reputation of Secretary Harold L. Ickes as a name-caller was suffered severely in competition with Senator Carter Glass of Virginia.

Under the loosely drawn lines of the game as interpreted by gossip circles around Washington it would be necessary to post Senator Glass several yardsticks were to prove Glass had persistently bestowed PWA grants. Even in Washington you can't run up a very high score by calling a man a liar who proves he isn't. But let us say he ever said any such thing naturally isn't trying to get that Glass has been lawing PWA funds all these years. Inference is that there isn't such proof.

Somebody has been getting PWA money for Virginia it isn't Glass—and he denies repeated, insistent demands must be someone else. PWA Senator Harry Byrd, who has the New Deal at least as much as Glass does.

Virginia had received $111,000 of PWA allotments—some grants—up to Aug. 1. Compared with the two states of comparable population, Oklahoma received $61,135,480 in allotments and Kentucky only $48,000. Those are official PWA figures.

When you recall that Kentucky and Oklahoma were two of the New Deal was hard to renounce New Deal senators—Barkley and Thomas and that the New Deal as they have Glass and Byrd as they you can't help feel that something here which is quite meet the eye. Possibly Ickes and Byrd will shed some light on their next passage-at-longue.

Climbs a Mountain And Swims at 70

EDINBURGH, Scotland.—William Tait, 70, Scottish-born resident of Trenton, N. J., recently climbed Ben Nevis, highest mountain in the British Isles, and also attempted to swim Loch Linnhe, "just to show a 70-year-old can do it."

Tait has been vacationing with relatives at Nevis Cottage, Fort William, near the foot of Ben Nevis. He climbed the 4,406-foot peak on a sweltering afternoon. The last time he made the ascent was in Queen Victoria's 50th Jubilee year, 1897. This time, however, he found the trip the Ben much rougher and more dangerous.

He attempted to swim Loch Linnhe, near Fort William, on the previous afternoon, gave up near the opposite shore when he was stricken with cramp.

"I swam nine miles on the ware river to prove a man not too old at 60," Tait said, "the temperature of the water is 30 degrees lower, or I have crossed the Loch safely."

Good School Year Is Anticipated In Ranger Hi School

"At the end of the first week of school the enrollment of the Ranger High School was 448," Supt. W. T. Walton stated Saturday. "With an enrollment of 448 at the close of the first week there are prospects for even a larger high school than in 1937-38. The original enrollment for 1936-37 and 1937-38 reached 449 and 467 respectively at the end of the school year with total enrollments of 472 and 513 respectively. If we can judge by what the last two years have shown, we can expect a total enrollment this year of considerably more than 500."

"Everything points toward a splendid year for Ranger High School. A better spirit is evident everywhere. Pupils seem interested in their work more than usual and teachers report better activity and interest in classes. Typing is rapidly becoming one of Ranger High school's most popular elective courses with an enrollment of more than 110. Such popularity for typing is highly desirable because of the practical value of the course. There is some temporary decrease of pupil interest in Texas History, Commercial Law, and Spanish, with the other courses just about holding their own."

"It is hoped that every parent in the district will see the value of regularity and systematic habits on the part of their children and that they will make every effort possible to keep their children in school every period of every day. Regularity, systematic preparation, clean habits, and sportsmanship are valuable equally in school and out; and they are more to be desired than mere information that may be secured in any one particular course in the schoolroom. It is the desire of the school to help the parents in developing such qualities, and no conscientious efforts will be spared in trying to attain that end. The help, criticism, and suggestions of parents are highly welcome at any time."

CAME THE DAWN-

"EVERY night I counted sheep... every morning I counted new grey hairs... I barked at my wife and children, and I grouched all day at the office, but still business didn't improve. Finally I realized that my condition was getting worse than my business. 'Just what good,' I asked myself, 'do I hope to accomplish by all this insomnia, worry, and bad disposition? Is that going to help business improve? No, it will only make me old and dither, and actually make business worse.'"

"But I just can't Pollyanna myself into being happy. What can I do to get out of this slough of despond? I must have some diversion to take my mind off it all. I must find something to make me laugh... but that all costs money and I have to economize. I might afford to throw a small party, but that would be expensive and only temporary relief. Then came the dawn of an idea. How about a good picture show... used to like 'em, but I've got out of the habit... inexpensive... Ought to take the little woman out, and give the children a treat ofteger, too."

"I tried it... it worked... first once a week—now twice a week. I forget my troubles. It has proven a real tonic. I'm getting better and so's my business."

"I had no idea modern pictures were so good. They're marvellous! They cost millions to make and so little to see. It's the most fun for the money we get nowadays."
