Judge Provides One More Accident to Complete a Case

By United Press
CAPE TOWN, South Africa.—A native was in the dock at Port Easton, South Africa, charged with stealing a neighbor's goose. "What have you got to say?" asked the magistrate.
"It was due to three accidents," the native.
First of all there was an accident when the goose entered my pen. An oxen-yoke fell on it.
Then I accidentally upset a pot boiling water over the bird.
"I saw my neighbor would say I had let the bird with the boiling water, so I threw it into a bush.
Then in the night I heard cackling for the goose. I didn't think of good meat being fed on cats, so I got up and fed and ate it myself."
The magistrate leaned forward: "Here's another accident," he said. "One month in prison."

Where Rulers Meet London's Second Battle of Trafalgar

Adolf Hitler and Neville Chamberlain chose Godesberg, on the Rhine, for the second historic meeting. It was at this momentous conference that Chamberlain was to answer demands made by Hitler during their first meeting at Berchtesgaden. Diplomatic circles believed Britain and France would let Hitler have his way in Czechoslovakia.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA TO GIVE UP HER CLAIMS TO SUDETEN SECTOR

Europe surrendered to Adolf Hitler today, the key to Nazi dominance of central Europe.
The Czech cabinet, acknowledging the "irresistible pressure" of Britain and France, announced it agreed, "with pain," to give Germany the rich Sudeten mountain district.
Unless the army should revolt and decide to fight Germany, the post-war Czechoslovak republic ceased in effect to exist at 9:55 a. m. (CST).
At that hour the note of acceptance was handed the British and French legations.
"The Czech government has been forced, under irresistible pressure from both the British and French governments, to accept, with pain, the proposals elaborated in London."
It does not include surrender of other areas to Poland and Hungary, but those countries, with approval of Hitler and Mussolini, have notified the powers it must be done.
Germany, risen from the ashes of the World War, rejoiced.
France, uncertainly, watched the collapse of post-war security alliances.
Soviet Russia thundered the democracies were selling out to "sabre rattlers" today, only to make certain a great war tomorrow.
Great Britain, certain she is choosing the only alternative in a war that would destroy Europe, will send Prime Minister Chamberlain to the German town of Godesberg tomorrow to make Hitler the most powerful man in Europe.
The crisis over the Sudeten minority admittedly is the turning point in Europe's post-war history. Czechoslovakia, with its frontier, was the point at which the German eastward thrust must be resisted.
Great Britain and France chose to grant the German demands. The Czechs, they argued, could be nothing but losers. Perhaps 300,000 German troops were ready to strike and Hitler hinted they would strike Thursday midnight unless the little republic accedes.
Repercussions will be felt for a long time and might still flare into war.
Great Britain and France must go through bitter parliamentary fights, which could upset the entire deal. The Czechs are famous as fighters and may take matters out of the hands of their government leaders.
In the world financial market, there were repercussions, also. The Prague stock exchange was suspended. Ireland sold $10,800,000 worth of British securities. Czech bonds collapsed in London.

Professor Denies That Lights Sing

By United Press
WASHINGTON—Dr. A. S. Eve of McGill University disputes reputable witnesses by denying that the Northern Lights "sing."
In a study of the aurora borealis published here by the Smithsonian Institution, Eve said the Northern Lights were in a near-vacuum some 60 miles above the earth.
"Thus, even if there is some mysterious mechanism for producing sound waves associated with the auroral phenomenon," the institution reported, "there is no medium through which these waves can travel to reach the ears of an observer on earth."
The institution admitted, however, that "witnesses assert that accompanying an auroral display there is a sound like a swish of a silk dress, a sword moving with blade broadside to the air, to the whistle of wind in the rigging of a ship."
Eve said the witnesses probably heard the "stinging" sounds, but not from the Northern Lights.
"In dry, cold weather," he said, "there may be a small brush discharge from snow or brushes somewhat similar to St. Elmo's Fire seen on mountains, and sometimes as an electric discharge from the masts and rigging of a ship when the earth's voltage differs considerably from that of the air. Men cannot possibly hear the Northern Lights, which can make little or no noise, but they may hear something else not far from them, such a local brush discharge."

The fight for control of the Central Texas area, within reach of the Colorado River system, is bitter. The T. P. & L. offered to sell its facilities to the river authority.

Fight for Democracy The Sane Way to

What better thing could we do than to keep democracy and freedom alive within our own borders? How preserving them intact on one continent? What more could we serve those magnificent causes better than by that we can perform only by staying at home.

No American can read the foreign news these days without asking himself some searching questions about his duty to the cause of democracy and freedom.

That Europe's freedom and democracy are in dire straits is too tragically clear to miss. The struggle may come tomorrow or it may be postponed for a few weeks; that it is bound to come before very long now seems certain.

We cannot be unmoved by this spectacle. We have in our keeping the brightest, strongest flame of liberty that burns anywhere on the globe today; and as the lights flicker out in Europe we are compelled to ask ourselves just what our duty to the world calls on us to do.

Yet if we cannot avoid asking that question, we must be extremely careful about how we answer it.

Democracy and freedom are indeed in peril abroad; but we would be making the gravest error of our history if we assumed that we were obligated to go abroad to help them.

We do indeed have a duty to perform—but it is a duty which we do for the world than demonstrate, in our own gigantic laboratory, that the way of liberty brings men and women more happiness than any other way?

The war peril in Europe makes it more than ever important that we do just those things. We can do them only by resolving to stay out of any war that Europe may concoct.

History moves in a roundabout way, and men learn things very slowly. Yet in the long run reason will prevail if it has a chance to make itself heard. The people of this world do not want war, nor do they want the eternal suspicion, enmity, and rivalry between nations that lead to war. They want peace, a chance to make a living, a little time to be happy, a little security against hunger and poverty.

If America goes on, year after year, proving that those boons can be had more abundantly under democracy than under oppression—if it shows that we can live at peace and plenty under a regime of complete freedom—will not the argument some day become irresistible?

Our first and greatest duty is at home. If we continue to make democracy work and to make peace and liberty go hand in hand with plenty and justice, we shall serve the world better than in any other possible way.

A fisherman in Yatesville, N. Y., has caught a trout with two mouths and two sets of teeth, and he's got enough nerve to try to take some of the credit for the feat.

SERIAL STORY

HIT-RUN LOVE

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN

Yesterday, Pat meets Tom at the club after Larry leaves her for Dottie Barnes, a rich playgirl.

CHAPTER V

PAT felt lost again after Tom's goodby, and turned back awkwardly to find Larry. He was still talking to Dottie Barnes, but he came toward Pat when he saw her.

She suddenly was tired of the party. "Sweeney, assistant prosecutor assigned to the court. He was here playing golf this afternoon."

Larry's eyes narrowed. "Acted like an old friend." "He's very nice," she said. "Always helpful and considerate."

They danced and moved around with other couples for the rest of the evening. Going home though, she felt depressed. She supposed it was her own fault. People had been nice to her. She hadn't been a wallflower. Larry's friends had taken them into their groups, yet she had experienced no spontaneous pleasure.

The quiet of the early spring morning settled about them as they drove back to the city. Only a tummy rattle at intervals broke the monotony of the motor.

"Something must be loose on this car, Larry," she said, sleepily. "I noticed it on the way out, too. Is your fender hitting something?"

"Another car must have hit us when we were parked at the club," he said quietly.

"She was drugged with weariness, unaccountably persistent. 'We were last in line,' she reminded him. 'The same car was next to us when we came out. I remember because it was a gray roadster. And I heard the noise on the way out.'"

"I don't see why you get so worked up over a car rattle," he said pettishly.

SHE sank back in the car, awake now and with that unworried feeling of fear creeping into her heart again.

"Was Mr. Abbott in the office late this afternoon, Larry?" she asked. As soon as the words were spoken she wished them unsaid. Yet some secret fear made her ask.

"Abbott—" Larry said. "Sure. He was there at 5—" She sensed his sudden alertness. "I know," he added quickly, "because I called in. As I said, I was out all afternoon."

Her throat was dry, aching with the tightening of her nerves. This suspicion was building a high wall between them: a barrier built because of her unreasonable imagination, her stupid suspicions.

"The judge spoke of going over to see him," she lied desperately.

Larry mustn't know she thought of him with fear and suspicion. She had no cause to think of him as anything but honest, upright, kind, humane.

And yet the picture of those cars knotted at the wet corner, the coupe flashing in and out ahead, the crumpled figures on the pavement was indelibly etched on her mind. Larry had been on the opposite side of town. The car she thought was his belonged to another. The man at the wheel with his hat and coat like Larry's was another. Larry knew that Abbott was at the office at quitting time because he had phoned in, and not because he was there.

Her lips as they kissed him good night were clinging. She must make up to him for those unspoken fears, those shameful suspicions, yet as she tossed on her bed during the gray hours of the Sunday morning her sleep was troubled.

SHE awakened to the common-sense, prosaic routine of a rest day. Sundays could always be filled somehow. There was her trousseau to think about, weekend purchases to put in the big cedar chest, linens to unfold and finger happily, a dusky red suit to knit upon.

It was afternoon before she found time to read the Sunday papers, and the front page story with pictures set her mind back in the frantic squirrel cage of suppositions again.

"Mother dies in hit-run accident—" The details were all available now. Mrs. Mary Gillespie, 38-year-old mother of four children, wife of a factory worker—dead. Her back broken by the racing car that knocked her down in an unprotected traffic zone. In the big, drear municipal hospital her 6-year-old daughter, Jean, fought desperately for her own life and suffered from a broken leg and fractured skull. Police were seeking the driver of the car that brought grief and heartbreak to the Gillespies. They were said to have received some valuable information from two witnesses, but as yet no arrests had been made.

Pat thrust the paper aside, tried to busy herself with the society section, the comics, the women's pages.

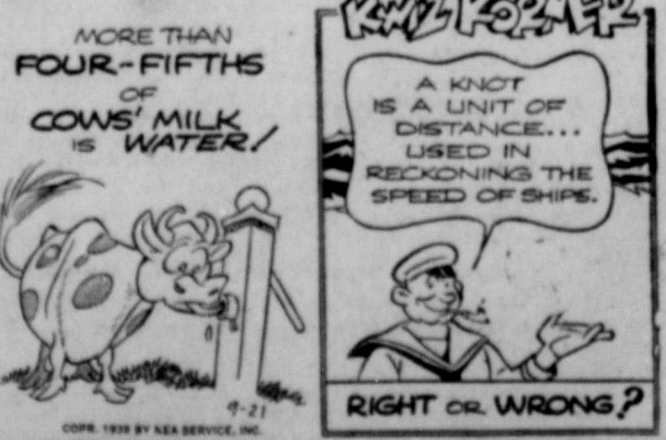

"Where are the boys, mama?" she asked at last. She wanted the security of the family about her. Wanted the boys' ready noise and humor.

"Bill interrupted. 'Gee, we wish you would stay. We want your advice on buying a second-hand car. Pat doesn't seem very enthusiastic, but you can change her mind. And, by the way, Pat, I need some more help,' he stammered. 'We were out with Art this afternoon. Wanted to see if those new bearings worked on the stepped old bus up. We were over on the boulevard where there isn't any traffic, but some sorehead cop gave Art a ticket. We feel it's sorta our fault, so you could fix the ticket—'

Larry laughed suddenly. "Shouldn't be difficult. Should Pat? That assistant prosecutor of fix it. He's a friend of yours, fact I'd rather like to know just how much pull you do have."

THE BUILDING OF A LIFE
 Life is a building. It rises slowly day by day, through the years. Every lesson we learn lays a block on the structure which is rising silently within us. Every experience, every touch, of another life is ours, every book we read, every conversation we have, every act of our commonest days, add something to this building.

The Purpose of This Paper
 We wish to explain the purpose of our school paper, as this is our first one.
 The main purpose is to offer a channel through which the child's expression may flow. Many an expression may be inert due to cause of not having the proper factor to take it from its hidden cast and propound it forth in thought and beauty. This paper is searching for those held back expressions.

We also desire that this paper may be a means to bring about a community understanding regarding school matters.
 We invite articles of constructive thought by patrons of the community at any time.

School News
 Lone Cedar school began Monday, Sept. 12, with an enrollment of thirty-four pupils. Some of the parents and all trustees were present for the opening exercise, everyone enjoyed the address given by the principal, Mr. Roy Holiday.

PEEPING THRU The KNOTHOLE

By Bill Mayes

WE really got on this column too late today to do anything with it, but there are a couple of letters, both received today, which apparently need recognition, but not answering, as they are both self explanatory. One is from "A real Bulldog Fan" and the other apparently is from "Yours truly" as there is no other signature.

Taking them in the order in which they appeared in the mail, Yours truly writes from Gorman, with the letter dated Sept. 20, to say, "In Your Sunday's paper you said the Gorman Yellow Jackets. It is not Yellow Jackets, but Panthers." And is our face red? Introducing a guest, or guests, by the wrong name. Maybe we should have just called it the Gorman team and let it go at that.

Then the other, which has no date, but which is on a Hotel Gholson notehead, reads "Editor Mayes, "I sure do agree with you that spectators should be kept off the players bench during ball games. It look like Coach Tipton knows what he is doing and believe fans on the bench will handicap him in running the team. Keep up the good work and put the "old Grads" up in the stands and make them let the Coach and players alone."

We hope "a real Bulldog Fan," doesn't expect us, personally, to keep everyone in place in the stadium. If so we will tell A. R. B. Fan right now that we are too light for that kind of work and will leave it to the stadium guards, if any.

THE DOPE on Comanche is that there are seven lettermen and six reserve lettermen on the team that defeated Stephenville 21 to 7 last week and which will play the Bulldogs Friday night at Comanche.

 The regular quarterback, Bear, is out with a broken leg and Gore is working in his place. What names for football players—Bear and Gore.

In defeating Stephenville the Indians—and we have it on the word of J. C. Wilkerson, Jr., of Comanche that they are Indians—accounted for 12 first downs to 7 for Stephenville, and gained 246 yards to 130 for the Yellow Jackets. (That's where that Yellow Jacket name belongs, we hope).

There are three outstanding backs, according to our informant. They are Late, Carzas and Cox. Late personally accounted for 85 yards against Stephenville. All of which looks pretty rough for the Bulldogs.

C. E. May Gives History of Ranger At Rotary Meet

With a near hundred per cent attendance today the Ranger Rotary Club enjoyed an hour of delightful fellowship. J. C. McAfee, of Cisco was a visitor and C. M. Tandy, Fort Worth, present to preserve a 17-year perfect attendance as a Rotarian.

C. E. May gave the program. It was a version of the club during the eighteen years of its existence in Ranger. Nearly all the 166 men who have been and are members were mentioned by name, or nicknames. The "good old days" when money was a storm of liquid gold, were brought to mind. The collections for charity and civic improvement were graphically described by Mr. May. One method of surviving friends made every one sit up and take notice. The fire truck and siren was commanded. At 3 a. m. it clanged through the town, awakened a citizen, who smelling fire rushed out in his night clothes only to be greeted with a demand for $25.00 for charity. When John Citizen "paid off" he was permitted to go back to sleep. Mr. May said $1500 was raised in that way. Another great occasion was when the club spent $100 on a "Ladies Night." Which it was admitted that "them days have gone forever," it was also agreed that with a fine little club of business men today, a great work may still be done in Ranger.

All members were urged to keep in mind, Oct. 12, when the District Governor will be present.

Negro Choir Will Sing at Services

J. M. Gray of Eastland will have charge of the singing service at the Calvary Baptist church on Friday evening, it was announced here today, and will present a negro choir from Eastland.

There will also be a string band in addition to all the visiting choirs and quartets from other towns.

In the past few months the attendance at Calvary Baptist has been more than doubled, it was reported, and now there are more than 300 in Sunday school and about 200 at the mid-week prayer services. Steady growth is being seen too, in the offerings.

It was announced that every child bringing seven or more children to the children's service on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock would be entitled to a free trip to the Dallas fair.

It has just been demonstrated that a stretched rubber band snaps at a speed of only 294 miles an hour, thereby proving conclusively that that British racing driver went to beat the band.

Students Find Brazos Is a Winding River

By United Press. FREEPORT, Texas. -- "As the crow flies" does not describe distance on the Brazos river, four Baylor University students learned in canoe trips down the meandering stream. James Garner, 22, and his brother, Milton, 20, left Waco on Aug. 21 in a 15-foot canvas canoe for the trip to Freeport. The next day, Howard Crow, 20, and Wilford Stapp, 19, started out on the same journey. Crow said they had calculated the distance at 500 miles and planned to reach here in 10 days. They made slow progress, they thought, as the days wore on. Mosquitoes made sleeping almost an impossibility at night. Haggard and bitten badly by insects after 15 days on the river,

Whites Brought Horse to Indians Professor Declares

By United Press. COLLEGE STATION, Texas. -- The white man was responsible for the interlude during which the North American Indian utilized the horse, Prof. Robert M. Denhardt declares. "There were no horses in America before the arrival of Spaniards," says Denhardt, recently appointed instructor in agricultural economics at Texas A. & M. The quartet arrived here to discover that they had traveled approximately 900 miles, almost twice the distance they had calculated.

college, who is writing a book on the subject. According to Denhardt's work, horses first were carried across the Atlantic by Columbus. They were brought to the mainland by Cortez and de Soto, he says. "So rapid . . . was their spread throughout the continent that by the close of the 17th century the French in the St. Lawrence Valley were trafficking in horses with the Indians west of the Mississippi river," Denhardt writes. "Curiously enough, the horse as a race advanced ahead of the Spanish settlers, although the old idea that Montezuma sprang from the strays of de Soto's and Coronado's expeditions is false. "The influence that the horse had upon the Plains Indian, his life and his culture is remarkable. Once he was using the horse, he kept the plains clear of white men until the Texas Ranger and, the Colt revolver sounded his doom."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX N.E.A. Service Staff Writer. DUDOLPH VALENTINO'S recipe annoyed Miss Lena Coniglione of Hartford. "My Italian food boiled over his way of cooking spaghetti. So will you kindly print this real Italian recipe that real Italians and American born Italians will say is best," Miss Coniglione writes. Italian Meat Balls and Spaghetti (Serves 4 to 6) One-quarter pound ground beef, 3-4 pound ground pork, 3 eggs unbeat, 1 cup grated Parmesan cheese, 1 finely chopped clove of garlic, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon black pepper. Combine these ingredients, mix well and shape into meat balls. For the second stage-- One can Italian tomatoes, 1 can Italian tomato paste, 1-8 cup olive oil, 1 medium onion, 1 teaspoon salt or more to taste, 1-2 teaspoon pepper, a lot of freshly grated Parmesan cheese, 1 pound spaghetti. In large pan, heat olive oil to boiling point. Add meat balls and sear quickly. Remove, chop onion and fry until brown in oil. Then return meat balls, add Italian tomatoes, Italian pasta, seasoning and 1 quart water. Simmer for about two hours. Plunge spaghetti into rapidly boiling salted water. Cook for from 12 to 15 minutes. Drain place on a large hot platter and sprinkle with lots of grated Parmesan cheese. Serve meat balls and sauce in separate dish. Miss Coniglione adds that the above recipe is one that her mother used, and that her mother came from a small town near Naples.

Mission Finds Vases

Over 2,500 Years Old
By United Press
VATICAN CITY — Two prize Chou dynasty vases of great value dug up by Chinese on their relief list is the story told by two Divine Word missionaries in their report to the Congregation for the Propagation of Faith.

The Rev. Frederic Linzenbach, and the Rev. Peter Heier, recently arrived in Peking from Singiang, Honan, to make their report. They wrote:

"Finding that many people were in need of immediate relief, we sponsored the work of several archaeologists in Hweihsin, thus giving employment to the needy. Digging some 45 feet beneath the surface, the excavators discovered among other things, two delicately engraved vases of exquisite workmanship which have been classified as certainly Chou dynasty products—probably 2,500 years old.

The vases, both of which are about 10 inches deep and 15 inches in diameter, were evidently used for food offerings at funerals and are considered among the best bronze specimens of the Chou period ever found.

Monkey Bands Are Invading San Diego

By United Press
SAN DIEGO, Cal.—There is much monkey business in the back country of San Diego county these days as ranchers tell strange tales of a band of simians which are running wild in the vicinity of Jamul, 20 miles east.

Conflicting reports of the renegades make it impossible to determine their number, species or size. One thing is assured; there are wild monkeys in San Diego county, and Luke F. Pace, Jamul rancher, has the hand of a full-grown female to prove it.

Pace shot the animal as he led a band of half-grown maques on a chicken raiding expedition in Pace's hen coop.

There is considerable speculation as to the band's origin. Mrs. Belle J. Benchley, executive secretary of the San Diego Zoological society, suggested they escaped from their owners and have propagated during the passing years.

Another report is that a motion picture company turned them loose eight years ago after filming a picture in the vicinity of Jamul. Others contend they never were domesticated but wandered north from Central American jungles years ago.

The leader, a big black fellow, is the most elusive and cunning of the band. Many have reported seeing it swinging from the limbs of the giant oak trees in the late evening, but at the sight of humans, it scuttles away into the deep canyons where it is impossible to trail the creature. Farmers in the region argue that the male is not a monkey but an ape, and those who have glimpsed him agree that he is of near-man size.

Hunters by the score have sought the elusive colony, but always have been thwarted by the jungle-like undergrowth and rough terrain which makes hunting impossible.
