DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 6.—The State Fair of Texas returns this season to bid for its old title of the world's largest attended annual state exposition.

The fair opens its Golden Jubilee Celebration Oct. 8 in its rejuvenated $12,000,000 plant and runs until October 23. This will be the first State Fair season since 1934, as the annual show was called off the last three years because of the Texas Centennial and Pan American expositions.

Fair officials feel so sure that this year's will be the "biggest and best fair yet" that they predict a record making attendance of 1,250,000 persons—an average of more than 80,000 daily for the 15 days.

Outstanding attractions of the 1938 celebration will be the agricultural and industrial exhibitions, two popular musical shows, presentations in the Auditorium, and the Midway amusement center.

"No efforts have been spared to make this the finest fair ever staged in the Southwest," said President Otto Herold of the fair association. "This season is designed to put Texas back in first place as the home of the world's No. 1 annual state fair, as well as to commemorate the forty-ninth year during which the fair has been staged here."

Newspapermen, according to custom, have been invited to attend the opening day ceremonies and participate in Press Day. Tributes will be paid the founders of the exposition on that day.

Then Cliff Wheeler, a Negro, told police he helped Ball kill Hazel Brown and that he had seen Ball feed parts of other girls' bodies to his alligators. TODAY

The best thing we have in this world is today. Today is your Savior; it is often crucified between two thieves, yesterday and tomorrow. Today you can be happy, not yesterday nor tomorrow. There is no happiness, except today's. Most of our misery is left over from yesterday or borrowed from tomorrow. Keep today clean. Make up your mind to enjoy your food, your work, your play today, anyhow. You can do anything if you'll only go at it a day at a time. If you're bereaved, betrayed, heartbroken, why take a day off. One day will not matter. Today put away your festering thoughts. Today take some simple joy. Today be a little happy in sunshine. You can do it. It's the burden of the coming days, weeks, years, that crushes us. The present is always tolerable. Whoever planned this life of ours did well in giving it to us one day at a time. We don't have to live it all at once, we've only got to get through till bedtime. Every morning we are born again. Why let life oppress you? You don't have to live your life, only a day of it. Come let's finish our small task manfully. It's not long. Don't let life mass against you. Attack it in detail and you can easily triumph. The past is what we make of it. It is temper of the present that qualifies it. It depends upon how you now consider it, whether it brings you despair or discouragement. Don't let the past unman you, besumb you with remorse, weaken you with self-contempt. The poet says we rise by stepping on our dead selves. And as for the future the best preparation for it is an unafraid today. If you are to die tomorrow the best way to be ready is to discharge faithfully today's duties, and to enjoy heartily today's simple pleasures. Today is yours. God has given it to you. All your yesterdays he has taken back. All your tomorrows are still in his hands. Today is yours. Take it's pleasures and be glad. Take its pains and play the man. Today is yours. Just a little strip of light between two darkneses. Today is yours. Use it so that at its close you can say: "I have lived, and loved, today!"

Building Life's Monuments Whether by choice or otherwise we are all builders. We strive from the cradle to the grave, hoping to be conquerors or in hopelessness we falter and faint. We march, as a caravan, through the atmosphere of intellectual ambitions and spiritual honors to attain architectural glory at the end of life's mystic dream. We are builders either in dreamland or in realistic favor. We ponder in the realm of realism. We all become artist in the painting of life's picture. Glorious it is that God leaves us as judges with choice as His greatest attribute to man. We are left to handle the brush and choose the colors that blends life's finished picture. We look behind the faded curtains of time and behold the workmanship of man; his footsteps are gone; his form no longer lingers, however on the walls of the monument of time there hangs life's picture; it speaks, "Behold the workmanship of my own hands; it's finished, unchangeable it hangs." "I leave it as a heritage; my portion of me to you." Life is a picture, "No man, woman, boy or girl can do better to pay tribute to his God, country, home, or school than to paint in this picture the rainbow of promise.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY WILLIS THORNTON
WASHINGTON.—The clouds are down for a knock-down and drag-out fight this winter over anti-trust legislation. Whether or not, as Representative Patman believes, the proposal bearing his name is "unstandards" among all laws of its kind ever passed, the successor law is expected to present will stir up much opposition. Details aside, the difference between the present and future Patman acts is this: the earlier law is aimed at eliminating certain advantages in mass purchasing and distribution which have been enjoyed by chain stores. The principle was "make them compete fairly with the independent dealer." The new law will aim by discriminatory taxation to kill off chain stores entirely. Progressive taxes, increasing with the number of units and the number of states in which they are operated would make chain grocery or shoe-store operation next to impossible. The campaign to rouse public opinion against any such law has already begun by the A. & P. stores, which got tangled up badly with the present act and regards the proposed one as a death sentence. With a candor rare in such cases, the A. & P. has frankly announced it is going out to fight the "death sentence" law proposal, and that it has hired public relations counsel to disseminate information, prepare paid advertising, organize consumer groups and forum discussions. Patman, whose heart and soul are wrapped up in his legislation, is himself one of the best propagandists in Congress, spending ing for a walk, and told little rabbit to stay at home. Little rabbit said he would stay and pretended he was sleeping. As soon as mother rabbit was out of sight little rabbit started out too. He walked and walked until he saw a big dog. The big dog saw little rabbit and started running toward him. This frightened little rabbit and he hurried back home, when he saw his mother he was very happy. Afterward when his mother told him to stay at home he always obeyed her and they lived very happy.—Ludell Griffen, 3rd grade.

A Round-up This summer while visiting my grandfather, he wanted me to help round-up about two hundred head of cows. Early one morning we saddled our horse and made ready to go. It was about sun up when we got to the pasture and the round-up began. It was fun driving the cows from a large pasture into a pen. At noon, we built a camp fire, made coffee and fried bacon. All the cow boys came in to eat. Oh! so hungry. Late that evening we had all the cows in the pen ready to be shipped the next morning. When I got home I un-saddled my horse, fed her, ate my supper and hurried to bed.—Clayton Wayne Todd, 4th grade.

The Ghost Once there were three boys going to church. On the way they had to pass an old vacant house, and it was said to be haunted. As soon as they got in front of the house something white appeared at the window. The boys were so frightened they began to run. When they got to church they told several boys about what they had seen. All the boys decided they would go back to the old house and go in, so they did and found the white ghost was only a white billy goat.—Margie Seay, 4th grade.
The Scare of My Life Once upon a time dad and I were hunting and suddenly dad shouted "the dog has treed." We ran up the hill and on the summit of a peak I saw my dog; he had a squirrel tree. We got the squirrel and started back down the hill. I was walking in front. All of a sudden, dad yelled. I turned around, but I kept walking. Dad grabbed me by the arm and pulled me back. Right in my path lay a diamond black rattlesnake. He was coiled up ready to strike. We killed him and found that he had eighteen rattlers. Now when dad yells, I jump like I was shot out of a cannon.—Stuart Utley.

Momentary Amusement for a Puzzled Posterity

Assuming that 5000 years from now there is alive a civilized race interested in the doings of its forebears you can have an amusing time figuring out what that race is going to think when it opens the "time capsule" buried recently on the grounds of the New York world's fair.

The outfit that put this capsule together was thorough. Nothing else. It set out to bury a collection of odds and ends which would give the people of 50 centuries hence a good cross-section view of our civilization, and it got in practically everything (as they say) except the kitchen sink.

There was a Bible, a woman's hat, and a can opener. A tooth brush nestled alongside a paper of safety pins, flanked by a box of children's blocks on one side and a camera on the other. Samples of modern textiles were wedged in with a pipe and a box of cigars. Seeds from the grain belt were put in, along with hunks of coal, bits of asbestos, and an 1100-foot microfilm "essay" which included 100 books and a thousand pictures.

Altogether, the collection ought to make a fine stew, if stirred sufficiently. But although it ought to give our descendants an interesting half hour or so, it is doubtful that it will really tell them what the world of 1938 was like.

The important things seem to have been left out, principally because no capsule ever made would contain them. Where are the intolerance of peoples, the brutal craftiness of dictators, the cowardice of statesmen, and the jealousy and suspicion of great nations? These are the things that set the key for today's civilization. Without knowing about them, one cannot get even a glimmering of the true state of things in the world today. But how are you going to put them in a test tube for examination 5000 years from now?

Where is the blindness and the division of spirit that makes separate classes within a nation seek their own good rather than the good of the whole? Where is the folly which leads people to put up with scarcity in an age of abundance, with unemployment in a land crying to heaven for needed repairs with hunger in a time of bumper crops? You can't put those things in a capsule—and you can't understand this world of ours unless you know about them.

The truth is that while we are a race of matchless gadget-makers, technicians and inventors, we don't know much more than the ancient Romans knew about the business of running society intelligently. We live in what ought to be a matchless, incomparable age of promise—and we have mismanaged it so that it looks remarkably like a prelude to a new dark age.

And it is that fact that will be interesting to historians of the future. They will want to know how it was that a world so marvelously equipped for living in happiness, peace and plenty managed to travel so fast in the opposite direction.

Undecided

The employer called his secretary. "Here, Miss Black, look at this letter. I can't make out whether it's from my tailor or my lawyer. They are both named Smith."

This is what the secretary read: "I have begun your suit. It will be ready to be tried Thursday."

A Wise Reply

A sailor, after placing some flowers on a grave in a cemetery, noticed an old Chinaman placing a bowl of rice on a nearby grave. The sailor asked, "When do you expect your friend to come up and eat the rice?"

The old Chinaman replied with a smile: "Same time your friend come up to smell flowers."

A Thought

No quality of Christian character can be essential that is not possible to every man.

On every side there is so much to inspire gladness of life. The love of men, the beauties of nature, the sweetness of friendship, the joy of service. Every day is the dawn of golden opportunity and every night a purple benediction of rest and peace. We should go forward with blithesome heart strong and happy in the consciousness of living here and now.

School Days

Vacationing and swimming days are o'er For the children of Lone Cedar school. Back we go to our school room and books, And back to our school teacher's rule.

The old school house threw open its arms. To welcome us back again. It seemed so glad to see us come. Our school book knowledge to gain. We will all study and make good grades. And our teacher we will obey, And faithful we'll be to our Lone Cedar school, And thru the next 9 months we'll stay.

SIREN FOOLS COUNTRYSIDE

By United Press SOUTH YARMOUTH, Mass.—When the fire siren cut loose with a screech shortly after midnight—and kept up the din for an hour—residents of this community and four neighboring villages joined volunteer fire-fighters in a hunt for the blaze. Their nocturnal trek was futile. The alarm was caused by a short circuit—in the siren.

Chevrolet Dealers To Attend Meetings Throughout Nation

A program of 42 meetings to be attended by 80,000 members of the company's retail organization from coast to coast, is being arranged by Chevrolet for the period between Oct. 6 and 14. W. E. Holter, general sales manager, announced today.

The purpose of the meetings, designated as dealer preview conventions, is to present all models of the 1939 Chevrolet line to the dealer organization and acquaint its members with sales and advertising plans for the coming year. Decentralization of the sessions at which the new product is presented to dealers and salesmen is expected to accomplish in a few days what would require weeks if the retail forces were brought to Detroit, as they were in 1933. In that year, 12,000 men were brought in by Chevrolet, and three solid weeks were required to complete the program. Now that the number of men attending has been increased to include dealers' salesmen and mechanics, bringing attendance up to 80,000, the present plan is the only one that would finish the job on time, for Chevrolet plans to announce its new product Oct. 22. The task is expedited, however, at the cost of elaborate arrangements, whereby central office executives and wholesale field personnel will go into the territory, arrange for the largest meeting place available in each of the 42 convention cities, install scenery, backdrops and other properties, and supervise the meetings themselves. Each of the meetings will be attended by all the dealers and dealer employees of the zone in which it is held, and in the case of two meetings—those at Boston and New York—retail personnel from adjacent zones will be included. This means that nearly 80,000 men will require transportation to the meeting points in their various zones. They will travel by railway, airplane, bus and automobile. "Even with the decentralization of the pre-announcement meetings of 1938 product to our organization," said Mr. Holter, "the majority of cities, this will require the largest available meeting place. It will require the coordinated efforts of the whole Chevrolet organization to prepare and conduct the huge gatherings, the results of which has never before been seen in the history of American business."

Try Our Want Ad

A Statement of Public Policy by The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company

The Honorable Wright Patman, representative in Congress of the first district of Texas, has announced that he will introduce in the next Congress a punitive and discriminatory tax bill frankly designed to put chain stores out of business. In the past, Mr. Patman has been very successful in securing enactment of legislation which he has sponsored. He has demonstrated that he is a very able lobbyist and propagandist for his own bills. The management of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company is therefore faced with the necessity of deciding upon a course of action in relation to this proposed legislation—whether to do nothing and risk the possibility of the passage of the bill and the resulting forced dissolution of this business, or to engage in an active campaign in opposition to the bill.

In arriving at a decision, the interests of several groups of people deserve consideration—the management, the 85,600 employees of the company, the consuming public, the millions of farmers producing the country's food, and labor.

1. The Interests of the Management

The interests of the management can be dismissed as of very little importance.

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company is managed by George L. Hartford and John A. Hartford under an arrangement made by their father, George Huntington Hartford, the founder of the business. George L. Hartford has been actively engaged in the grocery business for 58 years, working generally six days a week, 52 weeks a year during that entire period. John A. Hartford has been actively engaged in the grocery business for 50 years, working generally six days a week, 52 weeks a year during that period. Both of these men could, of course, retire without personal or financial inconvenience and live very comfortably if chain stores were put out of business. The record of the last calendar year shows that out of any money earned annually from the business, in the case of George L. Hartford, 82 percent is paid to government in taxes; in the case of John A. Hartford, 83 percent is paid to government in taxes. As neither of the brothers has any children, any monies left out of their earnings would accrue to their estates, and in the event of their death, inheritance taxes would probably amount to two-thirds of such accrued earnings, leaving approximately 6 cents on the dollar as a motive for continued personal service.

It is therefore apparent that the interests of management need hardly be taken into consideration in arriving at a decision.

2. The Interests of the Employees

The interests of the employees of the company are, however, a matter of very grave concern.

It is simply a statement of fact to say that the employees of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company generally throughout the United States receive the highest wages and have the shortest working hours of any workers in the grocery business, whether chain store or individual grocer. Many of them have devoted all of their working lives to the interests of the company.

The management, therefore, has a definite obligation and duty to defend the interests of these 85,600 employees against legislation intended to throw all of them out of work.

3. The Interests of the Consumer

Since this business has been built by the voluntary patronage of millions of American families, we believe that we must give consideration to their interests in this matter. Millions of women know how acute is the present problem of providing food, clothing and shelter for themselves, their husbands and their children out of their present income. When food prices go up it is not a question of paying more for the same food. They do not have the additional money with which to pay. Therefore, they must buy less and eat less. A & P Food Stores last year distributed at retail $881,700,000 worth of food at a net profit of 1%.

This food was sold to the public at prices averaging from eight to ten percent lower than the prices of the average individual grocer. Literally, millions of sales were made at prices twenty-five percent lower than those of the average individual grocer. This saving of eight to twenty-five cents on each dollar is of vital importance to these millions of families. If they were denied the opportunity to buy at these lower prices it would simply mean that in millions of homes they would have to leave meat off the table another day a week, eat less fresh fruits and vegetables, give the growing child one bottle of milk less every week or stint on butter, cheese, poultry, eggs and many other of the most nourishing foods.

In the last 10 years during the greatest period of chain store growth, the number of individual dealers has increased rather than decreased. We maintain that there is nothing wrong when these dealers charge more than we charge. They must charge these prices in order to make a fair profit. The average grocer will, upon request, deliver the groceries to the customer's door and in many cases extends credit to some of his customers. Delivery service costs money. The grocer must put this added cost in the prices to his customers. In the same way the extension of credit involves the expense of bookkeeping, the tying up of capital, and credit losses. There is nothing wrong in the higher mark up of the individual grocer, because he is rendering a service that justifies his prices.

If some customers can afford and voluntarily elect to pay a higher price for groceries and meats because they want credit or because they want delivery to their homes it is quite proper that they should pay an additional price for such service. However, the millions of families in this country whose income is limited and who can have more and better food because they are willing to pay cash and carry home their own purchases, should not be denied this opportunity. Millions of families of limited incomes can only enjoy their present standard of living through these economies and savings. These millions of American families have helped us build a great business because they believe we have rendered them a great service. The company, therefore, has an obligation and a duty to protect the interests of these customers.

4. The Interests of the Farmer

Eight million farm families are engaged in producing the food consumed by the American people. All of the farm homes in America, therefore, comprising one-fourth of all of the population of the United States, have a direct interest in the methods of distribution by which the products of their labor and of the soil are marketed.

Approximately 30% of their production is marketed through the chain food stores; about 70% through individual grocers. Their fruits, vegetables and other foodstuffs are sold through the chain stores at prices averaging 8% to 10% cheaper than the prices at which they are sold by many grocers. If the farmer sells a given product to both at the same price, the individual grocer must charge the public more to take care of his higher costs. Thus 30% of the farmer's products reach the public at low prices and 70% of his products reach the public at higher prices.

If the public cannot consume a given crop of apples, potatoes, berries or any other product, at the prices at which they are offered, these goods do not move from the grocer's shelves; a surplus accumulates and the farmer finds that he either cannot sell the balance of his crop or must sell it at a substantial loss. Only too often a situation arises when it is literally cheaper for the farmer to let his apples or his peaches rot on the ground than to expend the labor costs necessary to pack and ship them. Every farm economist knows that a 10% surplus does not mean 10% less return to the farmer but often more than 20% less return.

In other words, the farmer's problem is to sell his products at the cost of production plus a fair profit and to get them to the public with as few intermediate costs and profits as possible. It is therefore obviously unfair to the farmer to propose legislation which would, at a single blow, wipe out 30% of his distributing machinery—and that 30% the part which maintains the price to the farmer yet reaches the public at low cost because of economical distribution. It would be just as unfair to the farmer to propose putting out of business all of the individual grocers of the country who distribute 70% of his produce. Both chain food stores and individual grocers perform a distributive function vital to the interests of the farmer. If either failed to function the farmer would be faced with tremendous surpluses and heart-breaking losses.

For years the A & P has dealt with the farmers both as producers and consumers. We feel that we have a definite obligation and duty to oppose any legislative attack upon their best interests.

5. The Interests of Labor

Every business in this country has a vital interest in the purchasing power of labor. When labor has high wages and great purchasing power, everyone is prosperous. When labor's purchasing power is curtailed, all business suffers and the American standard of living is impaired. For many years it has been the wise policy of the national government to protect real wages and the purchasing power of the worker's dollar. Combinations or agreements to raise prices, thus reducing real wages, have been declared illegal.

It certainly seems strange that it should now be proposed to destroy a group of businesses for the frankly admitted reason that they furnish the necessities of life to the wage earner and his family at low prices. There are approximately 900,000 workers directly employed in the chain store industry. What course is open to us but to oppose the action of a man who, at a time when more than 11,000,000 wage earners are already out of work and 3,000,000 families on relief, proposes a bill that would add almost another million to the roll of unemployed, wipe out 30% of the distributing machinery of all of the farmers of the United States, and raise the cost of living of the wage earners of the United States.

We believe that our organization has rendered a great service to the American people and that it is as a result of that service that we have prospered. If we consulted our own interest it would be very easy to stop and enjoy whatever leisure we have earned. No one is dependent upon us except our fellow workers. However, after the fullest consideration of all interests, we have arrived at the decision that we would be doing less than our full duty if we failed to oppose, by every fair means, legislation proposed by the Honorable Wright Patman.

As we have said, Mr. Patman is an able politician, an able lobbyist and an able propagandist. In that field he is an expert. We are experts only in the grocery business. We believe the chain stores have a right to present their case to the American people. We will not go into politics, nor will we establish a lobby in Washington for the purpose of attempting to influence the vote of any member of the Congress. We expect only a full and fair opportunity to present the case for the chain stores as a great service organization for the American people.

Since the task we have set before us is one involving the widest dissemination of complete information to all of the American people, and since this is a profession in which we are not expert, we have engaged Carl Byoir & Associates, public relations counsel, to do this work. We realize that our views are seldom news. We know, therefore, that we must be prepared to spend a substantial sum of money in telling our story to all of the American people. We declare now that this money will be spent in the dissemination of information through paid advertising and every medium available to us, and in cooperating in the work or formation of study groups among consumers, farmers and workers, which provide open forums for a discussion of all measures affecting the cost of living.

We believe that when the American people have all of the facts they will make their decision known to their representatives in Congress. As Americans we will be content with that decision.

MURDER TO MUSIC

BY NARD JONES

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS: MYRA A. DOMBEY—heroine, the beautiful singer; MICHAEL DUNPHY—her manager; ANNIE LESTER—Myra's close friend; DANNIE FEELY—officer assigned to investigate Ludden Dombey's murder.

Feely whirled. "Hello, Bob. Is that a fact? Did you see Mrs. Dombey?"

CHAPTER III

Reaching the entrance of the Golden Bowl, Bob Tait found the big doors closed tight. A perceptible knocking conjured up the face of Detective Officer Michael Dunphy. "Hello, Mike," Tait greeted him. "In is it? You're the first one it's been wanting to get in. The it's been wanting to get in." Reluctantly, Dunphy shifted a huge bulk to admit Tait. The great Bowl was empty now. A comparatively small knot of people down near the orchestra platform. Tait recognized the face of Detective Officer Dannie Feely, the most persistent of the men from down at headquarters. "Where're all the rest of the boys, Mike?"

"Don't worry," said Michael Dunphy. "Dannie has watched the place. They're upstairs, the women one room and the men in another, and they're being frisked suspicious belongings. The first of it is, about 50 or 75 got out of here right after it happened." The detective sighed. "We don't know where they went—where they are. A fine lot of fish." Tait answered good-naturedly, "There's nothing like in a lot of probable suspects, if you're going to commit a murder." "Yeah, I saw a movie once where a murder was committed in a football game." "That was worse than this, any- way."

"Funny thing, the dame he married just before it happened—she skipped out. That looks mighty queer." Tait pretended not to hear. He sauntered toward the group, began listening to the questions that Dannie Feely was barking out. The boys in the band seemed obviously broken. If their expressions and voices could be depended upon, they had worshiped Ludden Dombey. And Bob Tait had reason to believe that this was a fact. "All right," said Feely, then. "You boys can go on home now. But I'll be wanting you. Don't forget that."

Tait heard the smooth, well-modulated voice of Harris Rogers. "I'll be glad to stay, Officer Feely. As manager of the band and Mr. Dombey's personal affairs I can probably answer any questions the boys could." "That's enough for now," Feely said. "The question I want answered right now is why Dombey's brand new wife isn't here."

Tait saw Rogers smiling toward him. "Perhaps Bob Tait can answer that one. I believe I saw them together just after it happened." Feely whirled. "Hello, Bob. Is that a fact? Did you see Mrs. Dombey?" "Yes, I was at the table with her and her friend—and Rogers here." "What happened to her afterward?" Feely wanted to know. "I took her to the ladies' lounge. She was pretty well hit, naturally. Then I asked her friend, Anne Lester, to look after her. I imagine they went on to the apartment they shared."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

NEA Service Staff Writer

BEANS and Boston brown bread is a sturdy Saturday tradition. With fluffy codfish cakes, we rejoiced in this fare late Saturday at the Colonial Inn at Concord, Mass., after a long green drive through New England. Paul Revere must have eaten them here, also Emerson and his neighbor, Louisa M. Alcott of "Little Women" fame.

Colonial Inn Baked Beans

(Serves 6 to 8) Three cups California pea beans, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 cup molasses, 1 cup sugar, 1-2 pound salt pork, scored, small onion if desired.

Soak beans over night or bring to a boil. Drain, then add other ingredients and cover with water. Bake in a slow oven for 8 hours or until done. Keep beans covered with water while cooking.

Boston Brown Bread

(Serves 6) One cup cornmeal, 1 cup graham flour, 1 cup white flour, 2 cups sour milk, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 3-4 cup molasses, 1 cup raisins.

Mix dry ingredients, add molasses and milk. Stir well and add the raisins. Pour into well-battered mold and steam for three hours.

Louisiana Baked Beans

(Serves 10) Life and history flow leisurely under the ancient elms of Concord. Perhaps you must have quicker recipes. Try this compromise with tradition. It hails from a modernized Louisiana kitchen.

One large onion, 3 cans baked beans, 1-3 cup New Orleans molasses, 1-2 cup dark brown sugar, 3-4 cup ketchup, 3-4 cup boiling water, 1-4 pound salt pork.

Place onion in bean pot or casserole. Add beans. Combine molasses, ketchup, sugar and water. Pour over beans. Score rind of pork. Bury pork in beans, leaving rind exposed. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 1 hour.

That crossroad Europe's been ought to be a pretty well built-up section by now.

Here are the NEW LAMPS that make Seeing Easier

Local stores which sell floor and table lamps are co-operating this week in presenting to their customers an elaborate display of all types of lamps, emphasizing the desirability of these lamps to make seeing easier and to make every room in the home more attractive.

Visit those stores which sell lamps and see how little it costs to have an attractive and well-lighted home.

The popular tri-arm lamp is generally known as the "all-purpose lamp," for it provides a wide illumination, adds to the attractiveness of the room and provides three intensities of lighting at the turn of a switch.

The table-study lamp was especially designed to aid students and others who read a great deal. These lamps are low in price and are high in quality and quantity of illumination.

This lamp pins up on the wall, over desks, radios, beds and other places in the home where a decorative light or a light for seeing is needed.

The primary purpose of a lamp is to make seeing easier, and this lounge lamp, also called a floor reading lamp, serves that very important purpose.

Council Hears Supt. Walton
 Talk on interesting subject.
 The City Council met with its president, Mrs. E. R. Green, at her home, 423 Pine street, Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 5.

Mrs. Green presided at the meeting, calling on all P-T. A. units for reports on what they have accomplished so far. All units reported that they have their year books out, and budgets planned for the year's work.

Superintendent W. T. Walton was next called upon for a talk on "Things the Council Can Do."

He said, "There is a great need of a high school P-T. A., and the council can assist us in getting one started."

Ranger will be host to the district congress of P-T. A.'s in the spring, and this will be a big opportunity for service and a time to show other districts what Ranger is doing.

"Another thing the council can do is to be a booster for our own junior college."

Bring all the criticisms to the school faculty and school board, for they are never deaf to the needs of the school."

All present gained much from Mr. Walton's inspirational address.

Mrs. Weldon Webb gave a piano selection, "Sylvia," by Olej Speaks.

The following committees were named:

Mrs. Hansford reported she had been quite active in visiting the sick and assisting the needy.

A committee with Mrs. Preston Burks as chairman will meet with the Legion on Thursday night to work out some plans for memorials to the deceased members.

There were nine members present.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

A Brownwood fan visited us yesterday afternoon and gave us some dope on the Lions.

He said that there were three mighty dangerous backs on the team, all being speed demons and as shifty as a hula dancer, once they got into an open field.

The three are Murphy, Rice and McCormick, who are about the size of the hanger backs, but reputedly much faster. Their forte is around the ends at top speed and outrunning everyone else on the field. Their touchdown jaunts have ranged around 40, 50 and 60 yards, with a few being longer.

Murphy, he tells us, heads for one sideline to pull the opposition over, reverses his field and snatches his way on to the goal line.

We remarked that the longest run for a touchdown we had seen this year was about 35 or 36 yards and he promised we would see a much longer one Friday night.

We may have misunderstood, but we think he said Pat Cagle, the Lions' coach, had a habit of pulling 11 men at a time and running in 11 substitutes. Maybe he didn't. Anyway he promised that long touchdown run. The theory was that at least one of these touchdown-minded, speedy backs would score from at least midfield on a punt return, end run from scrimmage or intercepted pass, and would prove too fast for the slower Ranger line and secondary defenses.

And, in scrimmage yesterday, it looked like he might be right. The second team, using Brownwood plays, with Tipton doing the quarterbacking, made about six touchdowns against the first string. Tipton doing part of the running and passing. On those end sweeps, with Floyd carrying, they had plenty of trouble stopping the plays. All of which looked bad. And the ball was put in play each time about the 40-yard line of the offense.

There seems to be more interest in the Brownwood game than in any other, because, as it has been remarked along the main drag many times this week, "It will give us a chance to see if the Bulldogs have anything or not." Which it probably will.
