Work Experience Is Being Gained By Coryell Farm Boys

AUSTIN, Texas.—Work experience in progressive subsistence farming will be offered 50 Coryell county farm boys on a part-time resident project approved for operation at Gatesville, J. C. Kellam, state NYA director, has announced. The project, scheduled to begin operation by Nov. 15, for a 7-month period, is sponsored by the Gatesville public schools.

Housed in a fourteen-room residence on a 25-acre experimental farm at the edge of the city, the boys will receive practical training in better farming practices under the supervision of a vocational agriculture teacher, furnished through the vocational division of the state department of education, and the Coryell county agricultural agent. They will alternate two-week periods of residence at the farm, where they will live on a cooperative basis.

To assist in the cooperative operation of the residence and farm, livestock will be placed at the disposal of the group. Emphasis will be placed on raising crops which will supply necessary foodstuffs. In addition to practical experience in operating the farm, youths will receive class instruction each day in the fundamentals of agriculture.

The boys will be employed part-time at the Gatesville public school campus on work in line with their training program. They will help construct a building to be used as a farm shop and classroom, assist in operating a general school work shop, and help improve campus buildings and facilities. Each youth will earn a wage sufficient to pay his part of the cost of operation of the cooperative residence and farm, and to have about $9 left for personal expenses.

"This part-time residence project," said Mr. Kellam, "is a part of the program of the NYA in Texas to help train and encourage rural youth to be better farmers and better rural citizens."

'To the Hills! The Women Are Coming!'

It is mortally easy to take a running jump into the wrong conclusion, when an unexpected bit of news comes over the horizon; and the report on women workers—submitted to President Roosevelt by John D. Biggers, director of the Federal Unemployment Census—deserves some careful thought before any deductions are based on it.

Mr. Biggers succeeded in clearing up part of the mystery about where men's missing jobs have gone. The women have 'em—to the extent, at least, of 2,740,000 cases.

On the basis of the 1930 census and the normal population increase it was expected that by the fall of 1937—when Mr. Biggers' census was taken—there would be about 11,750,000 women gainfully employed. But when Mr. Biggers made his check-up, he found that there were actually 14,496,000 women holding jobs.

Somewhere along the line, then, something quite unforeseen happened, resulting in an utterly unprecedented increase in the number of women workers.

Census Bureau experts blame it on the depression. Ordinarily, they explain, women enter the labor market at the age of 20, or thereabouts, and leave it a few years later—to get married, or for other reasons. But in the last half-dozen years they haven't been leaving their jobs. When male members of the family lose their jobs or can't find work, the woman who has a job hangs on to it.

Now from all this it would be easy to reach the conclusion that one cause of male unemployment today is the presence of too many women in the labor market. Already you can hear the first faint muttering of stout-hearted males declaring that women's place is in the home. Before long, more and more people will tell us that the unemployment problem won't be solved until women give up their jobs.

Yet this would be one of those easy conclusions that don't stand up under analysis.

Suppose we did chase those extra 2,740,000 women out of their jobs and replaced them with men: we still would have made only a small dent in the unemployment situation. The basic problem would remain unsolved. The nation's payrolls would not be higher by one dime. The total income going to the families of working folk would not be increased in the least.

We would be precisely where we were before, except that the identities of some two and three-quarters millions of the workers would be different.

Nor would we be better off if we went a lot farther and replaced more and more women workers with men. We would not have progressed one inch in the direction of improving the general well-being of people who have to work for a living.

The unemployment problem ceases to exist only when any industrious, capable, honest citizen who wishes a job can get one. Any "solution" which doesn't bring us nearer that day is no solution at all.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NRA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The one big question asked about the proposed "two-price" system, designed to transfer farm surpluses to low income families at low prices, is: "Will it work—and how?"

The specter of huge subsidies frightens many. Those who have thought about the theory longest insist that in the case of some products it can be worked out, with very little subsidy and in other cases with none at all. Top officials may decide otherwise.

Is the scheme "socialistic" because it means the government will enter the distribution system? That depends on how it's run.

How can poor people be segregated from others, who will want to buy at the lower prices?

How can competition with existing merchants and distributors be avoided?

How about the fact that raw cotton and wheat, which can't be sold to the poor direct, are but a small part of the cost in finished cotton goods and bread?

How could such a system be operated on a vast, national scale?

The two-price thinkers say, first, that the principle should be applied wherever it can be shown the poor would buy more of a given type of food or cheap clothing if they had more money. On some items, they think, it probably won't work.

In cotton, with the government holding 7,000,000 bales, with a crop nearly twice consumption size and with millions in need of cotton goods, textile manufacturers will be called in. The cost of processing, Secretary Wallace says, is about twice the cost of raw cotton and that of finished goods about ten times as much. The prevalent idea is to furnish specifications and ask bids on specific types of goods which can be produced with economy in large scale operations. Cheap cotton cloth, mattresses, towels, sheeting, overalls and work shirts are suggested. Some subsidy such as government contribution of the raw cotton probably will be planned.

Possibility is that cheap goods, such as overalls and work shirts, can be dumped on the market through regular commercial channels with assurance that only the poor will buy them. This is also suggested for nutritive foods in less attractive, cheaper but relatively non-competitive forms—such as dried eggs, dried milk and canned fruit juices.

The two-price theory admittedly becomes extremely difficult when applied to wheat. Bread is a basic food in low-income family diets.

The system is much more easily applied to such products as milk, butter, eggs, fruits, vegetables and meats where there is no major manufacturing problem such as that in cotton. Specially licensed markets run on wholesale lines, with consumers coming to buy and only one operation after the stuff arrives in town, might handle such items of farm surpluses.

500,000 Visit In Texas State Parks During Summer

By United Press

AUSTIN, Tex.—Eleven Texas state parks were visited by more than half-a-million persons during the four months ending Oct. 1, the National Park Service announced.

The attendance represents an increase of more than 20 per cent over the number of visitors to the same parks during the same period of 1937. The figure for this year was 524,700, while that of 1937 was 425,802.

Mackenzil State Park at Lubbock drew highest attendance with 268,206 visitors. Tyler was second and Daingerfield third. Goliad State Historical Park, it was revealed in a study separate from the general survey, had attendance of 56,400. Attendance at other state parks was:

Balmorhea 26,600; Fort Parker 19,500; Lockhart 15,000; Lake Brownwood 14,200; Longhorn Cavern 9,000; Garner 7,900; Huntsville 7,200; Cleburne 5,700.

In the metropolitan areas where the National Park Service is supervising CCC development the attendance at Bachman-White Rock Park in Dallas dropped from 771,040 in 1937 to 470,300 during the corresponding four months of this year. This decrease was due to main entrances and some of the park roads being closed during construction work, officials said.

The attendance at Tyrrell Metropolitan Park, Beaumont, increased from 43,093 in 1937 to 44,709 in 1938.

The greatest per centages of increase were registered at Tyler and Daingerfield, where lakes the CCC developed were opened to the public for swimming and boating. The attendance at Tyler jumped from 12,989 in 1937 to 60,100 this year, while at Daingerfield it advanced from 20,423 to 48,690.

The attendance figures were included in a general recreational study the National Park Service is making in a selected group of CCC-developed state parks. The State Park Board is cooperating. Public participation in the study included return of questionnaires in which park users designated facilities most enjoyed and offered suggestions for additional features that might advantageously be provided. These questionnaires are being reviewed as the basis of working out future development programs.

"The study has revealed," Acting Regional Director Herbert Maier said, "that Texans are quick to take advantage of added recreational facilities, and that they are alert in recognizing possibilities for future development. The questionnaires seem to indicate that Texans are 'naturals' as park planners. The practical suggestions we have received under this public cooperative plan will be helpful in working up long-range development programs for the state parks of Texas."

Graduate School For Negroes Is Planned

By United Press

FORT WORTH, Tex.—A plan for a campaign to secure graduate school training for Negroes in Texas will be mapped here Nov. 18 and 19 when the Texas Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation meets.

The commission has advocated such a school, possibly in connection with the present Prairie View Normal for Negroes. Present plans are to ask a separate appropriation from the legislature or to include the appropriation in the general bill to provide money for state schools.

Should these fail, the commission may institute a test case in court, commission members said. A similar case, now on appeal before the U. S. Supreme Court, was presented in Missouri. A Negro was refused admission to the state university law school, and the Negro pleaded in court that he had no alternative.

MURDER TO MUSIC

BY NARD JONES

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MYRNA BOMBAY—Serial heroine.
WIFE OF THE sensational swing band leader.

ANNIE LESTER—Myrna's closest friend.
DANNIE FEELY—Myrna's assigned to investigate Ludden Bomber's murder.

CHAPTER XXV
DANNIE FEELY, his long, old-fashioned nightgown trailing beneath a battered bathrobe, opened his front door and blinked at Bob Tait.

"For the love of Mike," he growled, "have you got a conspiracy on to keep me from sleeping, Tait? In the devil's black of this mornin' you ring me out of bed by telephone—and tonight you pound on my own peaceful floor at 11."

"You'll be glad I did," Tait said, stepping inside. "Dannie—I've found the musician we're looking for!"

"George Weeks? You're crazy!" Tait grinned excitedly. "Maybe I was crazy enough to play my lute and put that ad in the Personal column. And I got this."

He handed Feely the letter he had received from the messenger half an hour before.

Bewildered, Feely read the letter. Then read it again, this time aloud: "Dear Sir—I can write a song similar to the one you mention in your classified ad in the paper. In fact, I can tell you some things about it which may surprise you. If you want to talk to me I will be in the lobby of the Pacific-Plaza Hotel at 3 o'clock tomorrow. I will be standing by the Number 4 elevator. Yours very truly, G. K. Weeks."

FEELY looked up. "The guy is nuts."

"At least slightly. That's what I banked on when I put the ad in the paper. He couldn't stand to have it rubbed in—and no doubt the $10,000 had something to do with it."

"What ten thousand?" said Feely, wrinkly. He showed the letter to his bathrobe pocket. "All searching started this. What do the physician in K... appear to be...?"

"The Magnolia Petroleum company," said Fred M. Leno, Jr., president in charge of marketing, "is participating in this interproof service program, by holding a series of educational merchandising meetings for magnolia dealers."

"Dealers and Magnolia officials thoroughly discuss new and better ways of providing winterproof service, together with safety check."

Additional participation will be a day newspaper campaign, together with spot announcements and stunts, which should prove a profitable impetus in making motorists conscious of the necessity of service."

"Magnolia dealers have been trained to provide winterproof service, with the latest methods. Mechanicals found in the over-all check will be noted on a special interproof ticket and given to the driver."

Dr. Cox described this gas as seep inside from leaky connections and overwhelm occupants of the car," Dr. Cox warned.

He said that "warming up" a car in a closed garage is the greatest cause of carbon monoxide deaths. Leaks from manifold connections, cracked manifolds, defective mufflers, leaks from loose muffler connections and leaks from hot air heater connections are potential sources for release of carbon monoxide and should be checked, Dr. Cox pointed out.

"Pay particular attention to these items and remember that proper carburetor adjustment causes minimum production of carbon monoxide and that the highest proportion of this gas is produced by an idling motor."

The state health officer said that headaches which occur during long drives may be an indication that carbon monoxide is leaking into the car. Sleepiness, dizziness, fatigue and in extreme cases, paralysis are other symptoms of carbon monoxide leaking into the car. Truck drivers making long drives are particularly vulnerable, he stated.

Swingsters. Remembering a certain night in the Millby district, I think it's a good chance, too. So I'll go along with you and pretend I'm interested because my band will introduce and plug the song that you select to publish."

"Okay, Bob. I've been everything else, I might as well try acting a song publisher. Got any idea how they act?"

"Sure. They act dumb—like a detective," Tait laughed. "You won't have any trouble."

"Get out of here," Feely roared. "And I'll meet you in front of the main entrance of the Pacific-Plaza at a quarter until 3 tomorrow."

"Good!" Tait said. "By the way, did you have Neida Starr watched?"

Feely nodded. "Mike Dunphy's been watching her. She stayed in her apartment after you left her, apparently, and then about 10 o'clock tonight she went down to the Golden Bowl. Mike phoned me from there I told him to stick with her."

"Was Roger with her?"

"No. He may have gone after you left—or he may still be in the apartment. I had one of his men stick around to see if Rogers came out anywhere he went if he did come. I haven't heard from him, so guess there's nothing on that."

Tait pulled a magazine from his pocket. "I don't know whether it's anything or not, Dannie—but look at this."

It was a thespit comic magazine with Tait had picked up in Ned Starr's apartment.

"Thanks," Annie said. "I like comics."

"Listen, Feely, look at that advertisement on the back," Dannie grinned. "Yeah, I used to send for a lot of stuff like this when I was a kid. Once I got a chamber. I put it on the linoleum in our kitchen. It was checkered in oleum and the darned old did trying to make good."

"That's an old joke, Dannie. Look at there in the lower left-hand corner."

Feely looked. Then he raised his eyes. "Well, what do you say about that?"

"I donknow anything about it yet. I do know it advertises a set to make a noise like a cat's cry. You put it in your pocket, squeeze it, and have fun with your friends and your dog. But I wonder if maybe it might be used for something else."

"You're dreaming, Bob. This nutty musician with his obsession about a song called 'The Cat's Meow,' might get one of these things if he figured to do some murder. But Rogers or this Starr girl aren't crazy. It's just a coincidence."

"I suppose so. But the thing interests me enough so that I'm going to wire that outfit and ask them to tell me the names of the people who've ordered that gadget from this town in the last two months."

Feely yawned. "Well, go ahead and have your fun. But let me get some sleep." The detective politely opened his door again "How's Myrna these days?"

Tait caught his breath, wondering if Feely knew that Myrna had disappeared. He took a long chance. "Fine, Dannie." He felt like a heel, saying that—but he consoled himself with the thought that if Dannie knew that Myrna wasn't sleeping peacefully at the Claremont then Dannie Feely himself wouldn't sleep the rest of the night.

AT 2:45 next day Tait stood in front of the Pacific-Plaza. He was on edge and worried. A telephone call to Anne Lester had revealed that no word had been received from Myrna since last he had telephoned. And Tait wondered if Weeks, the musician, would really appear. If he didn't—

"Well, Mr. Tait!" The newspaper photographer turned to see Dannie Feely, a flower in his lapel. "Perhaps you don't remember me, Mr. Tait. My name is Farnsworth. Elliot Farnsworth, the song publisher."

"Of course I remember you," Tait said, grinning in spite of himself. "Let's go inside and see if our genius is standing by the Number 4 elevator."

Side by side the pair went into the luxurious lobby of the Pacific-Plaza, steering themselves directly toward the bank of elevators. Surely enough, there stood by the fourth elevator a tall, slender-looking fellow whose clothes were out of keeping with the well-groomed lobby and its prosperous-looking occupants.

"There's our man," Feely whispered.

"Take it easy," Bob Tait said out of the side of his mouth. "Remember, you are a song publisher, not a dick. Don't whip out your handcuffs yet."

Every important Paris collection features at least one evening gown of material that looks for all the world like molten gold. This especially dramatic creation—a glamor gown if ever there was one—is from the house of Jean Patou.

Its only decoration is a metal circle which holds the ends of the daring, draped bodice and fastens the... down draped being colorless, odorless, and tasteless. When in the air it gives no sign of its presence and is taken into the blood instead of oxygen. Suffering or collapse result from lack of oxygen.

THE first tangerines come to town with the first of November. Their gay color is a sign of approaching holidays, for they seem a part of Thanksgiving and Christmas gaiety. They are a citrus fruit, therefore an excellent source of Vitamin C, and are said to be a good source of calcium.

Quick Tangerine Jam
Two cups tangerine pulp and juice, 1 lemon pulp and juice, 1 teaspoon grated tangerine rind, 1-2 cups sugar.

Tangerine Rolls
(About 3 dozen)
One cake yeast, 2 tablespoons sugar, 2 eggs, 6 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 tablespoons grated tangerine rind, 4 cups flour, 1 cup milk, 3 tangerines.

Remove seeds from tangerine pulp and juice. Combine ingredients. Boil rapidly 10 minutes or until syrupy and clear. Delicious with cream cheese for nut bread sandwiches.

Roll dough 3-4 inch thick and cut with a small cutter. Make a crease through center, brush top with remainder of melted butter. Peel tangerines and carefully remove sections, place one section which has been rolled in remainder of sugar in the center of each roll.

Fold roll over and let rise until light. Bake 20 minutes in hot oven.

Tomorrow's Menu
BREAKFAST: Cranberry juice, tangerine rolls, crisp bacon, coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Tomato juice, escalloped corn, wholewheat bread, fruit cup, cookies, tea, milk.
DINNER: Hungarian goulash, noodles, broccoli, raw vegetable salad, French dressing, fruit bowl, assorted cheese, crackers, coffee, milk.

Scald milk, cool until lukewarm, add alternately with flour to above mixture. Stir well and make a stiff mixture. Turn on board, knead lightly. Let stand in a warm place and rise until double in bulk; knead down and let rise again.

Prize Money Given For a Black Bass
EL PASO, Texas—There was a $200 prize on Blackie's head. Yet Blackie wasn't a man-killing grizzly or a sheep-killing wolf. He was a three-pound black bass.

G. C. Marks collected the $200 when he pulled Blackie out of Cement Lake near here. The prize was paid in cash and merchandise. The fish had been tagged on Sept. 16, as merchants advertised prize for his capture in a contest staged by the El Paso Herald-Post.

Marks, a fisherman since boyhood, caught Blackie on his fifth trip to the lake.

Hallowe'en Was Celebrated at Hodges Oak Park School Monday Evening

On last evening, the children and patrons of Hodges Oak Park enjoyed a very pleasant evening. Spooks could be seen here and there. The ladies sold pop, candy, coffee and doughnuts at their little stands. One stand was very unique. It carried a sign, fish pond, fishing 5c. Of course you paid 5c and fished and someone placed a present on your fish hook. Several were enjoying this fun. At eight o'clock a basket of groceries was auctioned off by Fire Chief Murphy, who did a swell job auctioneering. The basket brought a neat little sum. After which Freddie Joseph was crowned king and Barbara Stewart the queen. Several tag dancing numbers were presented. Also readings. The affair ended with everyone saying they had enjoyed a fine evening.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

By Bill Mayer

Statistics of the Stephenville-Brownwood game, clipped from the Brownwood paper, indicate that the Yellow Jackets can be as stingy as all get out when it comes to allowing scores, first down or ground gained from scrimmage. At least they can on occasions, as is indicated by the following:

The Lions made but two first downs in the entire game, while the Yellow Jackets made seven. Only 40 yards were gained on 23 rushing plays from scrimmage and only one of nine passes was completed, while three of the nine were intercepted. The one pass gained a total of 14 yards, making 54 yards gained from scrimmage in 32 plays. But that isn't half of it.

Those same 32 plays lost a net of 57 yards, leaving the Lions three yards in the hole when the game was over.

The Lions punted 11 times for an average of slightly over 22 yards, while the Yellow Jackets punted six times for an average of slightly over 35 yards, which is fair to middling punting.

One of the Brownwood first downs came in the first quarter, the other in the last, while the Yellow Jacket first downs were scattered throughout the game. Only two substitutions were made by Stephenville in the game.

One fan who saw the Breckenridge-Stephenville game reports that anyone who thinks the Bulldogs have a setup is mistaken, that the Jackets are a much stronger team than the 58 to 7 score against them would indicate, and that while Ranger failed to threaten against Breckenridge, Stephenville not only threatened a number of times but scored once. It was also reported, from the same source, that anyone getting an offer of 10 points in the game would be doing well to take it, because the Bulldogs couldn't win by any such score.

At least one Stephenville back, by the name of Welch, if we heard it right, is a man any team should fear when Stephenville has the ball.

Although they have not won any conference games, and have tied only one, the Jackets are due to upset some team in the district before long and it could be the Bulldogs, if they take the game lightly, we hear.

MAGNOLIA Winter Proof TICKET

From my experience in servicing cars in ALL kinds of Southern weather, there are seven reasons why you should let one Winter Proof your car, now.

FOR A SAFE, SURE RIDE THROUGH WINTER

WINTER PROOF YOUR CAR TODAY!
WHY? It's a sure way to protect your car from winter weather.

CRANKCASE PROTECTED. WHY? Crankcase oil thickens and won't flow freely enough in cold temperatures to protect moving parts.

CHASSIS PROTECTED. WHY? Under ordinary driving conditions winter Mobilgrease won't squeeze out—Wash Out—of Congrat—except squeaks and makes your car run smoother.

TRANSMISSION PROTECTED. WHY? Your gear-shift lever answers this when it sticks and is hard to move. Winter Mobil Gear Oil makes shifting easy.

RADIATOR PROTECTED. WHY? Mobil Radiator Flush loosens rust and scale and re-opens clogged passages. It prepares your radiator for Mobil Frezzone.

BATTERY PROTECTED. WHY? Cold weather reduces battery efficiency. Clean and grease terminals; regular servicing speeds cold starts.

Your friendly Magnolia Dealer is ready to issue your Winter Proof Ticket, now! It's good for quick starts, easy gear-shifting, and real motor protection that means smoother driving and longer life for your car.

Winter Mobiloil, an important point in Winter Proof service, is necessary now. Because summer oil thickens enough in cold weather to keep it from reaching moving parts in time to prevent frictional wear.

Flowing freely at all cool temperatures, even down to sub-zero, winter Mobiloil springs into action when you step on the starter... quickly lubricating and protecting all moving parts. Play safe. Get a complete Winter Proof job, now!
