Mexican Forecasts On Expropriation Of Oil Exaggerated

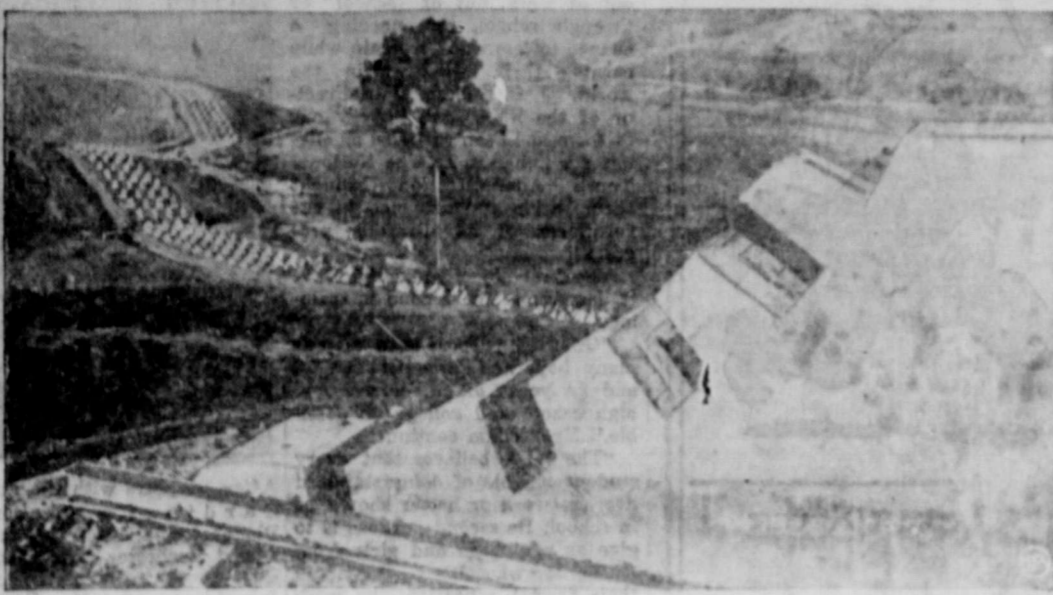

By United Press
MEXICO CITY.—Friends and enemies of Mexico in the United States both seem to have overdone considerably their forecasts of what is going to happen south of the Rio Grande.

Ever since the expropriation of foreign oil companies on March 18, 1938, government officials at Washington and the American reading public have been bombarded with predictions of chaos and disaster which may strike Mexico unless the United States does something about it.

Both the closest friends and the longest enemies of the government of General Lazaro Cardenas have been predicting trouble. This sounds paradoxical, but it is perfectly logical—it is another manifestation of the old axiom that extremes meet.

Naturally, each side wants President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull to handle the problem in a different way. The friends of Mexico, organized into various societies and associations, for months have been harping on the idea that Mexico is on the verge of becoming a "second Spain." They have frequently asked the state department to do something to help Cardenas, with a loan if necessary, or else the United States may face the historical responsibility of seeing the country plunged into such a state of affairs that what happened in Spain will look tame. Every time that Mr. Hull writes a strong note to General Eduardo Sney, Mexican secretary of state, these societies send telegrams to Washington, lamenting that the United States is about to undermine the stability of the Cardenas regime.

Hitler's 'Chinese Wall' Is Tank Trap

Reminiscent of the famous Chinese Wall but actually the latest thing in tank traps, the cone-shaped steel and concrete blocks shown in the photo guard mile after mile of the western frontier of Germany. They are the tank trap section of the Siegfried Line. The fortress at the right in this picture can be shifted to block roads since it is mounted on rails.

Mexico's adversaries, instead of portraying a Fascist menace, predict there will be trouble and chaos due to the establishment of a "bolshievis" government on the southern border of the United States. Some even contend that Mexico today is already "redder" than the Soviet Union under Joseph Stalin.

There is no doubt that Mexico has been moving consistently to the left in the past three years. With the same dogged determination that characterized Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler in achieving his announced aims, Cardenas has proceeded to accomplish the campaign promises he made in 1934 and the provisions of the "Six Year Plan." Nothing so far has been able to swerve him from his course. The demands of Hull have met with not only rhetorical but with actual negative replies. When

World War Power Now A Farmer

Twenty years ago David Lloyd George was directing the conferences to end the World War. Today he is directing operations on his 160-acre farm near Churt, England. Above, the part-author of the Versailles treaty watches a giant "gro-tiller" at work.

Mr. Hull asked Cardenas to cease expropriating American property. Cardenas ordered the agrarian departments to take some more land away from American individuals and land companies. Nobody denies that Mexico is going through very serious social, financial and economic difficulties. The depression's roots go back to 1935, and were intensified in 1937 when there were big crop failures. The monetary reserves of the Bank of Mexico steadily declined during 1937, while the government's overdraft with the bank increased. The peso had been weakened long before March 18, 1938, but it was good politics for Mexico to cease pegging it to the dollar that night, and then blame the "rebellious foreign oil companies" for having caused it

The prophets of chaos cannot fathom the "mystery" of how it is that the peso has not crashed to its silver point (around 6.50 to the dollar) and how it is that the government still finds it possible to pay punctually the wages of the army, government employes, oil workers, railwaymen, and others.

As a matter of fact, Mexico is a country which is accustomed to depressions. It has a low standard of living, and can weather financial storms which would send the United States to the gutter in no time.

As for a Mexico today in line to become a "second Spain", is conceived, that is a far-fetched analogy. Spain in 1935 was suffering from the after-effects of the Asturias revolt of 1934; it was a country divided into two distinct camps: "Popular Front" and "Catholic Action"—Phalange military coalition.

The revolt came after the elections of 1936. Spain had a dozen generals to lead a revolt; here in Mexico there is nobody at present, and the best proof of this is the miserable fiasco of the San Luis Potosi incident of General Saturnino Cedillo in May, 1938.

Today in Mexico a half-dozen or more generals hope to reach the presidency by the constitutional method of election. As long as they think they have a chance of being the official candidate for the July, 1940 elections, they will play ball with Cardenas. Once the candidate has been chosen, then those who were left out may begin to look around to see what can be done. Most of Mexico's revolutions have been started because the man in power chose an unpopular candidate to succeed him; and it is axiomatic that the danger of a revolt increases as the electoral period approaches. So far, Mexico's presidential campaign is still a long way off, and if the country is lucky enough to have a popular man chosen, it may see a peaceful transmission of power from President Cardenas to his successor on Nov. 20, 1940.

Billy Rose has finally made up his mind, it's Holm Sweet Holm.

Man Is Still the Master in Great Emergencies

We are fond of saying that this is an age of machinery, and that the ability of the individual man doesn't count for as much now as it used to. But every once in a while something happens to prove that when the machinery goes wrong—as it inevitably does, sooner or later—we are right back in the old spot and have nothing to rely on but the courage and resourcefulness of one man.

An example is that recent wreck of an air liner near Montgomery, Ala.

This liner, bound from Houston to New York, left the Montgomery airport with 14 people aboard shortly after midnight. It reached an altitude of some 1400 feet; in its cabin the lights were dimmed and the passengers were settling back in their seats for an uneventful, drowsy trip. And then came trouble.

The right-hand motor began to vibrate violently. Something went wrong with the propeller, maybe, or a bolt was sheared off; anyway, the sudden vibration broke the motor loose from its fastenings and it fell to the earth. A gas line was severed and the plane took fire, and what had been a routine flight abruptly became an emergency freighted with the dire peril of death.

The emergency was met and passed, and nobody was killed. And why? Because the plane's chief pilot, Dave Hissong, was a cool and capable chap who knew exactly what to do, and was able to keep his head while he did it.

Hissong managed to keep the left wing up while he brought the ship down. With only his landing lights, he sought out an open space on the ground and negotiated a landing. His co-pilot, C. R. Russell, gave him the minutes he needed to do this by cutting the gas line and holding the flames back with an extinguisher. Steward Frank Gibbs saw that the safety belts of the passengers were properly tightened, and stood by to open the cabin door and help them out the moment the plane had stopped.

Nobody got hurt. It was a close call, of course; the occupants had got perhaps 20 yards from the grounded plane before it exploded in a vast puff of flames. All in all, they had about a minute to spare in their escape. But the point is that they did have that minute, and it was enough.

The moral to all of this—if that's what you want to call it—is obvious. The most cunningly-devised machinery fails once in a while; and when it does, everybody involved is in the soup unless the right man is in the right spot. This mechanical age has not done away with the old need for human capability, bravery and self-possession.

That's a good thing to remember. For underneath all of the stainless steel gadgets of modern civilization, life is still lived on its old terms. In the last analysis, we sink or we swim by what we have in ourselves and not by our equipment. There is no substitute for the time-honored individual virtues, and there never will be. We may build the most refined and fool-proof machines imaginable; but if we cannot come up with a Dave Hissong when we need one we are out of luck.

Youths Get First Hand Information And Training Under the NYA

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 8. — If in camp attend classes to learn you can remember the first job you ever had, the first time you ever saw something develop and progress under your own hands, you have something to compare with the thrill a group of Texas boys feel collectively because of a National Youth Administration program.

These 125 boys are at Lake Buchanan on the Colorado river in Burnet county, Texas. They live for the present in dormitories within the abandoned construction camp for workmen at the first dam of the Lower Colorado River Authority series.

The old camp is, in itself, a key to the esprit de corps which permeates the whole project. It is not without its inconveniences, its shortcomings, its potentialities for discouragement in its lack of facilities. Yet the boys who live there, who are training there, working to earn their own wages, have rallied so wholeheartedly around their supervisor, John Coers, that they have never yet found time to think about what it lacks. They have found it a place of refuge and achievement while, three miles away, below the Roy E. Inks dam, they have been helping build themselves new and modern camp quarters—quarters in which they will finish their scheduled program and in which other boys yet to come will live during their period of training.

Half of each day all the boys are learning the use of modern earth-moving machinery, the construction of small earthen dams and dikes to hold water—the elements of soil conservation, soil engineering.

Work and earn, work and learn. These are the fabric on which the NYA is weaving the warp and woof of these young lives.

Every boy at Buchanan camp and at every other resident project operated by the NYA in Texas came from that group of typical youths of post-depression days, out of work, out of school or through school, yet needing a chance to learn and to train while earning their own way in the world," J. C. Kellam, state director of the NYA said. "Every one of them had been certified as eligible for public work. The National Youth Administration brought them within its influence in the fulfillment of its two-fold program."

The first objective of the NYA is education. The second is training. "Our first purpose is to keep as many boys and girls between 16 and 24 years old in elementary, high school and college as possible," Mr. Kellam continued. "The NYA believes that every student capable of doing standard average work or better should be in school. Its second purpose is to give as many boys and girls from 18 to 24, who have completed their formal education, the work and training they need to get and keep better jobs. We have projects for girls, as well as boys. And that's what we're doing with each of them."

A day spent at Buchanan dam is certain to be an eye-opener for anybody. It begins early and lasts late. Quarters are put in order before breakfast, in such order they will pass finicking inspection. Then there is breakfast, in the mess hall, operated on a co-operative basis. The food is plain, wholesome, substantial and plentiful. Each boy contributes his share of the expense from the wages he earns. His pay is sufficient to cover all his expenses and allow him about $10 in cash besides.

After breakfast the camp is divided into groups. Some go to work at the Administration building, at the fish hatchery, clearing the old campsite, or at the new camp, now rapidly nearing completion for occupancy. Others attend classes or work on their training program for the day. The groups alternate. The work which pays wages goes on uninterruptedly and so does the training program of boys are learning the use of modern earth-moving machinery, the construction of small earthen dams and dikes to hold water—the elements of soil conservation, soil engineering.

Work and earn, work and learn. These are the fabric on which the NYA is weaving the warp and woof of these young lives.

There is a lure in fishing on the lake, of riding on its waters. There is a lure in a mess of fish for a dinner at camp. There are games, physical contests, a library of magazines.

"Even the hours of relaxation are made to count," Mr. Coers explained, summing up the work. "These boys are learning to be better workmen. These are fundamental things. But above and beyond this life, this association, this inspiration is wiping the depression from their minds. Boys are learning to live together, to be better citizens, to be better neighbors, better Americans.

"We have the material Texas boys are good enough for anybody. The NYA is giving them everything it has, only regret is that it can't give more of these boys. They are for the most part, somewhat disturbed, undetermined. They are out equipped, inspired. That we are striving for."

To Eliminate Depression Based Upon New Canal

PASO, Tex.—A plan "to eliminate the depression, pay off our war debts, and unify the Americas without costing the States a penny" was proposed here by John F. Shaw, veteran hunter and sportsman of Pahuahua, Mexico.

Shaw, who has spent 20 years in the Mexican republic, centers his plan about the construction of a "Panama Canal" at a point already surveyed for that purpose in Nicaragua.

Shaw's plan is based on the construction of a canal in South America which would be situated in much the same manner that Mexico appropriated the rights of the British holderness of the Panama Canal, and if Shaw's proposal were carried out, the United States would be paid for the expropriation in return for trade treaties and permission by South American countries for construction of a canal joining the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Shaw's plan with foreign countries is based on the cancellation of the $12,000,000,000 debt to the United States.

Shaw does not owe us that sum, he would be one way of getting something for our money," Shaw said.

Shaw pointed out that the Panama Canal was too small and

The President on Politics

The nation's No. 1 political figure faces the microphones for the most important talk of the campaign. In New York state, where Democrats hope the President's address from Hyde Park would nullify last-minute Republican gains, the talk was awaited with especial interest. It was believed the administration was making an all-out effort to save all-important New York, loss of which might foreshadow a national Democratic defeat in 1940.

College Declares Faith In Concepts

By United Press
BELOIT, Wis. — Century-old Beloit College has pledged itself to a declaration of principles upholding the tenets of democracy, freedom of speech, press, worship and academic research.

The declaration was adopted by college trustees "in an attempt to phrase the meaning and motives of Beloit College, and to make articulate the faith and purposes of her early founders."

Dr. Irving Maurer, president of the college, declared that in a world turned "topsy-turvy" by strange "isms," it is "most reassuring for an educational institution like century-old Beloit College thus to declare for the fundamental concepts of democracy."

The tenets adopted by the trustees are:

1. A Christianity uncontrolled by nationalism or sectarianism.
2. An integrity of purpose and performance steadfast against expediency or exploitation.
3. A tolerance of spirit that will perpetuate freedom, whether of work, worship, speech, press, or academic research.
4. A government by consent of the governed, constitutionally expressed.

Adoption of the declaration by Beloit, one of the oldest colleges in the Middle West, was believed to be the first action of its kind taken by any educational institution in the United States.

"Our colleges really stand for these principles and it is high time used for construction would be gotten in this country," he added.

Shaw also suggested that the United States should offer to help complete the Pan-American Highway system in South America, saying that tourist travel over the toll road would make the project pay for itself and a tremendous amount of undeveloped resources might be made available.

"Such a plan would accomplish beyond the wildest dreams of the Monroe Doctrine and, upon completion, would present a unified America to the world," Shaw declared.

Swinging Strikers

Striking workers of a New York phonograph record company made some kind of record for dizzy picket lines when they went jitterbug and, as pictured above, shagged up and down the sidewalk before their former employer's establishment. A merry time was had until police swung into action and stopped the swinging couples.

that they remind society that they do," said Dr. Maurer, asserting that the declaration of principles is "an expression of a fact not very well recognized." The fact, he said, is that colleges of Beloit's type truly strive to represent the democratic ideal.

"Disbelief of regimentation is in our blood," the president said. "We believe that a real government demands independent people thinking and acting in the light of their best knowledge. Like our New England founders, we believe in that kind of independence based on spiritual ideals."

"It is time that people recognize the importance of keeping promises—it is time again that we get

SERIAL STORY LOVERS AWEIGH

BY BETTY WALLACE
COPYRIGHT, 1936 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JUDY—Admiral's daughter. She faced a choice between two navy suitors.
DWIGHT CAMPBELL—Ambitious lieutenant. He faced a choice between his wife and duty.
JACK HANLEY—Navy sailor. He faced a test of a patient love.
MARVEL HASTINGS—Navy wife. She faced the test of being a good sailor.

Yesterday Dwight breaks the marriage news to Judy that he loves Marvel Hastings, is going to marry her, and is leaving her. Judy prepares to go home.

CHAPTER III

SHE didn't sleep much that night. She told herself fiercely that it was not because she was breaking her heart over Dwight Campbell. It was only because Jack Hanley had been so blasted right about him!

The next morning, as she sat on the front porch listlessly, Mrs. Lane came up the stairs. Mrs. Lane was the wife of the captain they had dined with last night. And Mrs. Lane said brightly, "Why, Judy! I thought you and that nice Lieutenant Campbell were having a regular little affair, and now I hear he's going to marry some girl from the East!"

Dwight then had lost no time in announcing his coming marriage. Captain Lane was his skipper. Judy forced herself to smile. "Oh, he spent all his time with me telling me about her."

Mrs. Lane patted her. "You're a good girl, Judy. Judy knew she was thinking of Ward Fenning, and of how it had been five years. . . . Five years, and Judy Abbott still was not engaged."

The phone rang, and then her mother was calling her. She wondered viciously if that was one of the station glad-girls, eager to pump her. But, surprisingly, it was Dwight Campbell's voice that answered her guard, "Hello."

"Listen, Judy, I've wired Marvel. He'll be here Saturday—I couldn't wait a week! I'd like you to come with me to the airport to meet her. You've been my best friend here, and I know you'll like her. She'll need a Navy woman to sort of show her around—got her started."

Refusal was on the tip of her tongue. But she did the sporting thing. "Of course, Dwight. I'd love to!"

"That's fine, then. She gets in at Landergh Field Saturday at 10:15 in the morning. I'll call for you at a quarter of ten."

The phone rang again. This time it was a girl's voice, and Judy waited. But it was not one of the gossip brigade. It was Diane Bell, who had just had a new baby.

"You never have time for me, Judy! Come on over and see little Billy, he's the darndest thing! Give the boys friends the go-by for one day. I'll fix you something good for lunch."

"I'll have Guam salad," said Judy. Diane, as a very young girl, had lived in Guam, where her father was in charge of the station, and she was always boasting about how she had learned to make meals with practically nothing from the States—strictly island fare. Her Guam salad was famous. It was made with California avocados.

It was only a short distance to the Bell's small cottage. Bill Bell was a flyer in Jack's squadron. His pay, even with flight pay, had performed nobly in commanding the services of a famous obstetrician when Diane had this baby, last month, but without the savings that Diane had engineered so gamely in this little bungalow, they couldn't have made it.

JUDY parked her car. In the doorway, Diane was standing, the baby in her arms. Her dark eyes danced, her ivory skin glowed.

"Darling!" said Judy. "You look wonderful!"

"Never felt better in my life," Judy remembered the pain, wan countenance on the hospital pillow and said, "There was a time when I doubted you'd ever be the same!" She peeked into the opening at the top of the little bundle of blankets. "Oh, Diane, isn't he little!"

"What'd you expect?" "But he's so sweet! Oh, oh, look, he's smiling at me."

"He's merely well fed, and smiles because his tummy feels good. I keep telling Bill that, but he doesn't believe me."

She put the baby in its crib, pointing to the stuffed elephant on the dresser. "Bill, the fool, thinks that's just right for our child. At the age of one, he will probably present him with a Navy bomber."

After Diane had told her all about how marvelously Bill was taking her absorption in the baby. "Even washes diapers when he gets a minute!" she asked about Judy.

"You, my dear, look peaked." "Slightly," Judy admitted. "What's the matter?"

"Nothing." "Listen, my girl, you're among friends!"

But the words stuck in Judy's throat. She couldn't tell her. Tactfully, Diane changed the subject. She went on some more about her precious Bill, and her wonderful baby.

"I only hope they don't transfer him off to some ungodly place where the climate will be bad for the kid. Think of me, with a baby, shoving off in the good old Chaumont. Or daycoaching it across the continent!"

"They won't, I guess," Judy said. "Flyers stay put pretty much, except for battle maneuvers."

"Yes," said Diane, a shadow across her face. "And then I can sit home and wonder what's happening out there. . . ."

IT was Judy's turn to be tactful. "How about that Guam salad?"

The baby cried. Judy said, "Oh, let me hold him. Oh, goodness, he's so little. Here, take him, I'm afraid he'll break."

Diane lifted him casually and expertly from her arms. "Just a little damp, that's all. You'll get used to it, when you have one of your own."

Judy said, "You're going to put that funny square on him? I thought they used 'em triangular."

"You're behind the times, Triangles are old-fashioned." But her eyes were on Judy's face. Judy got the oil in the little blue jar. "I'm glad to see you're using my gift," she said.

"Without gifts, my son and he would be naked and cribless," said Diane.

She kissed him on the top of his fuzzy little head and put him back in his bed. "On to the kitchen," she said, picking up an old cap of Bill's which was on a chair and putting it in the closet.

Judy said suddenly, as she sat at the table while Diane reached into the cupboard for a can. "I guess I'll tell you. I've got to tell someone, or burst!"

Diane said, "Shoot." "Dwight Campbell. . ."

JOHNNY PINGEL of Michigan State is a great runner, a good passer, one of the best kickers in the history of the game, and the finest defensive player on the Spartan squad.

Against Syracuse he quick-kicked 80 yards in the air. He had a favorable wind, to be sure, but it was still quite a boot.

He's not a giant. . . hasn't the big legs of many outstanding backs. . . yet he has never been hurt.

Pingel last fall averaged more than six yards a crack and completed 30 of 68 passes for nearly 500 yards.

In Michigan State's first five engagements this autumn, including those with Michigan, West Virginia, and Syracuse, he juggled the leather 60 times for a total of 274 yards. He completed 25 of 39 forwards for 254 yards. . . . scored five touchdowns and passed for four more. He averaged slightly better than 42 yards in punting.

WILMETH SIDAT-SINGH of Syracuse has no peer at getting a pass off under distressing circumstances.

"Once three Michigan State men hit him when he went back to pass. . . really made contact," relates William A. Blake of Chicago, who refereed the game. "I was about to blow the whistle when Sidat-Singh just kind of shivered those three tacklers off, stepped clear of them, and fired a pass 45 yards against the wind."

Hellllp!

How did I ever get in this mess, and what do I do about it?—that seems the gist of Ernestine Bazemore's thoughts as she and a six-foot pine snake pose for the cameraman at Birmingham-Southern College in Birmingham, Ala. Oswald, the snake, is one of a collection owned by the college snake fancier, Martin Knowlton.

Stores of Ranger To Close Friday

Announcement was made today by A. J. Ratliff, president of the Ranger Retail Merchants association, that all members of the association would close their places of business all day Friday on account of Armistice Day. This has been a custom of Ranger merchants for years.

The public is reminded of this closing for the holiday and are asked to buy their supplies and make any other arrangements necessary to fill their needs until Saturday.

Ratliff also called attention of the public to the fact that Saturday was trades day in Ranger, that every Saturday was trades day in Ranger and that merchants and business men of the city were really making it worth while to attend these affairs and check the many bargains of Ranger merchants who are cooperating with the association in making Ranger trades days better each week.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDON

HAVE you wondered what ration do people eat? Three of them tell me they often enjoy this joint dinner. So let's dial in. Benay Venuta likes this quick and simple soup.

Onion Tea Soup
(Serves 4 to 6)
Two onions, thinly sliced (raw), 2 tablespoons butter, melted, 1 10-oz. can bouillon (condensed), 1 10-oz. can pea soup (condensed), 1/2 cup milk, 1-4 teaspoon salt, small dash of pepper.

Saute onions in butter until golden. Combine milk and soups, add to onion and simmer over very low heat for about 10 minutes. Season and serve with a garnish of coarsely minced parsley. Serve with Melba toast.

Sea Food Casserole
(Serves 4 to 6)
Ben Grauer, the announcer, favors this Friday dish. One 18-oz. loaf bread, 2-3 cup butter, salt and cayenne, 1-2 lb. shrimp (raw), 1-2 lb. scallops (raw), 1-2 lemon, 1 small onion, grated, 3-4 cup thin cream, paprika.

Trim crusts from bread and cut loaf into 1-4 inch cubes. Saute in butter until crisp and golden brown. Season with salt and cayenne. Cover bottom of casserole with layer of bread cubes, place a layer of sea food on top, sprinkle with salt and cayenne, few drops of lemon juice and a bit of grated onion. Continue until all cubes and sea food are used, finishing with cubes. Pour cream over all, sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a moderate oven (325 deg. F.) for about 35 minutes.

Even an orchestra leader stirs up a dessert. This is Sammy Kaye's idea.

Swing Pudding
(Serves 4 to 6)
Two cups boiled rice, 1 cup shredded pineapple, 2 dozen marshmallows (cut up), 1 cup chopped apples, 1-2 cup granulated sugar, few grains salt, 1 cup cream (whipped). Mix all ingredients but cream. Whip cream, fold into mixture. Chill and serve in sherbert glasses. Garnish with few shreds of cocoanut sprinkled over top.

ZOO "CHECKS" BABIES

PHILADELPHIA—The Philadelphia Zoo has expanded its "check" room to accommodate babies while their parents are showing their older children the animals.

Striking out 17 batters it good enough in any company, but when you fan 14 of them in succession in a no-hit victory, you get your picture in the paper. That is what George Bock, above, of Nappanee, Ind., high school did against Millersburg high in an autumn league game.

HOG CALLER ANNOYS JAIL

EL CENTRO, Calif. — Lane Montgomery, 25, arrested on a vagrancy charge, began a one-man hog-calling contest in the jail with a voice that made so much noise and carried so far that the charge against him was raised to disturbing the peace.
