PLANS TO AID GERMAN JEWS ARE DISCUSSED

U. S. Ambassador Joseph Kennedy is conferring, in London, with the British government in an effort to find a plan to aid German Jews, it was learned today.

Kennedy has met with British officials several times in the last three days, in talks with Chamberlain and others.

These talks coincided with two other developments:

1. The departure from Berlin of U. S. Ambassador Hugh Wilson was credited with increasing possibility of a British move to arrange an Anglo-American solution to the problem.

2. The United States, Great Britain and France were disclosed to have asked Germany, two weeks ago, to discuss orderly emigration of refugees including the Jews, but Germany has not replied.

Two questions faced the English-speaking nations:

1. The problems of resending thousands of Jews in Germany.

2. A long-range problem of peace on which Hitler may throw new light in a speech Thursday at the funeral of Ernst von Rath, German diplomat, slain by a Jewish boy in Paris.

Both questions have aroused tremendous public anger in the democratic nations and a bitter wave of counter-attack in German newspapers, where it was revealed that 50,000 Jews have been arrested.

World Refugee Situation Demands Careful Study

It would be interesting to know just how many of us who now live in America are living here because of some acute wave of tyranny or persecution in Europe.

A few generations ago, each one of the periodic upsurges of repression on the continent sent a flood of new immigrants to America. People came over by the thousand, fleeing from every form of autocracy; America received them gladly, and was so proud of the ability to take them in that a Democratic party platform in 1856 boasted that the country was "the asylum of the oppressed of every nation."

But times have changed. The oppression goes on—in forms which make some of the 19th century abuses look mild—but America's gates are closed. Under the current immigration law, only a small fraction of the host that formerly came is admitted. The most that can enter in any one year now is 150,000.

Now that immigration law was not passed hastily. Americans have had a good many years to observe the workings of the melting pot, and it was perfectly obvious that in many ways it was not working so well. When the tide of immigrants was running around 1,000,000 a year, it seemed as if fundamental traits in American character and American life were in danger of being submerged, and there was reason to fear that the nation was taking in new arrivals faster than it could hope to digest them.

So restrictions were voted, with the approval of the vast majority of Americans, and there is small chance that a return to the old era of unrestricted immigration would win much approval. Yet we might as well realize that we are facing a new situation in Europe, and that both our humanity and our traditions require us to examine it very carefully.

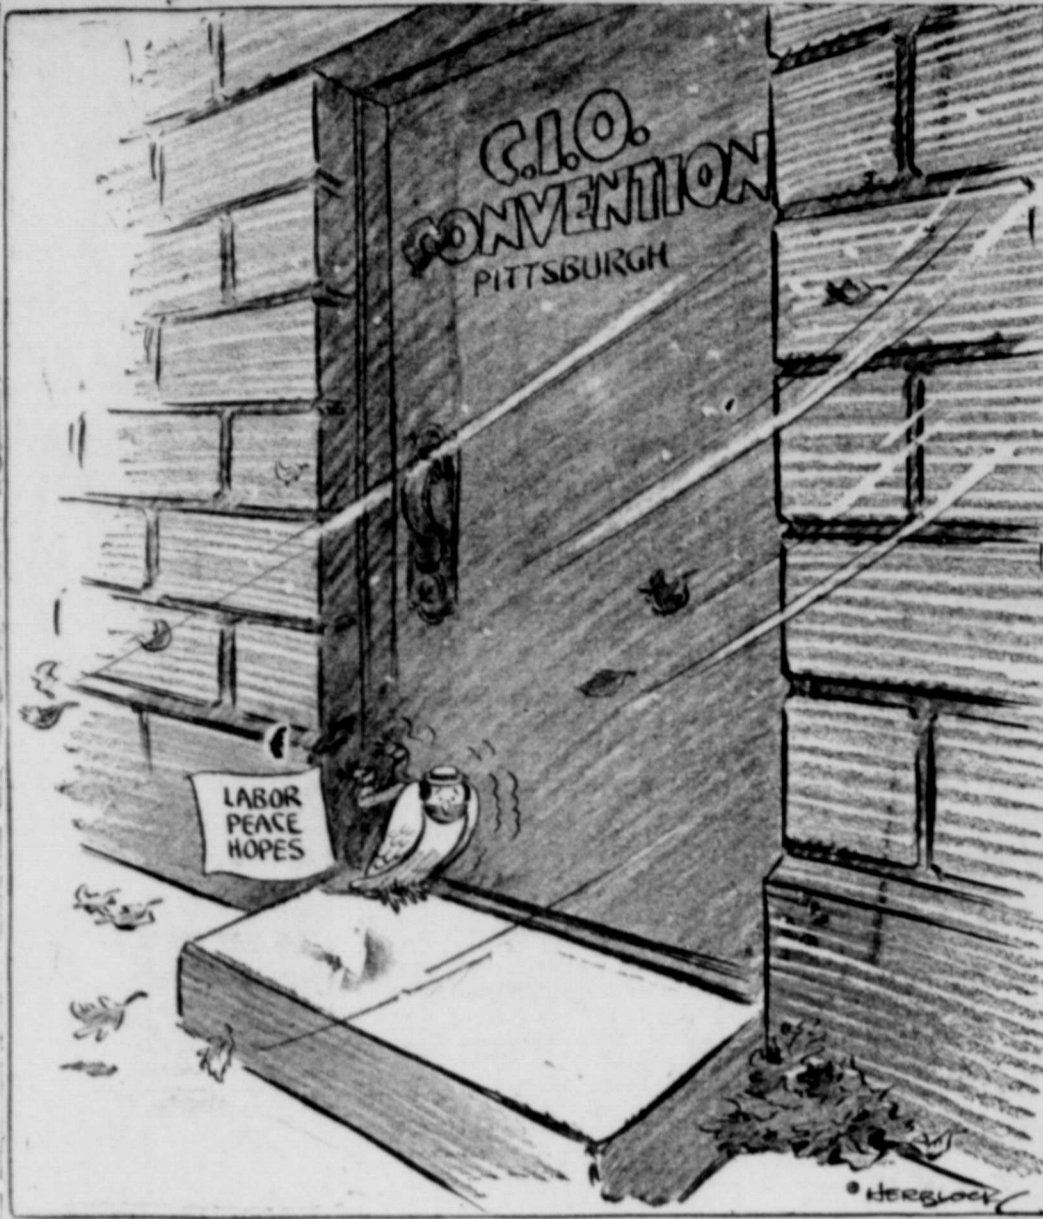

For the refugee situation abroad is worse than ever before. The great authoritarian states are calmly exiling people by the thousand, and in innumerable tragic cases these people have literally nowhere on earth to go. Among these exiles are men of talent, even of genius; considered by and large, they could make valuable contributions to any country which offered them asylum.

It is not easy to say that a nation with 10,000,000 unemployed should open its gates to thousands of newcomers. Yet the idea of offering a haven to some of Europe's refugees at least deserves prayerful consideration.

Henry Goddard Leach recently pointed out in Forum Magazine that our times of greatest immigration have been our times of greatest prosperity, and that cutting down on immigration did not save us from the great depression of 1929. Perhaps some relaxation of our barriers could be accomplished without making our economic situation worse; perhaps the infusion of new blood might even be a help.

In any case, the refugee situation is one which we cannot dismiss offhand. If we can do anything, we should; and we ought to study the situation very thoughtfully before deciding that we can't.

Magnolia Dealers Offering a Safety Service to Public

As their part in the nation's constant safety crusade, thousands of Magnolia dealers throughout Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and New Mexico are offering winterproof service, and a complete, over-all inspection, in order to increase the efficiency and safety of all automobiles. "The Magnolia Petroleum company," said Fred M. Lege, Jr., vice president in charge of marketing, "is participating in this winterproof service program, by holding a series of educational and merchandising meetings for Magnolia dealers."

"Dealers and Magnolia officials thoroughly discuss new and better ways of providing winterproof service, together with safety check-ups. "Additional participation will be a 60-day newspaper campaign, together with radio spot announcements and posters, which should prove a powerful impetus in making motorists conscious of the necessity of this service."

Switzerland Will Fight Against Nazis

BERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 15.—The federal council, continuing its drive against nazis in Switzerland, decided today to suppress three nazi newspapers. For days nazi quarters have been searched for propaganda literature.

Traffic Engineer Warns of America's Fatal Streets

Inadequate Visibility Blamed for Night Fatalities on Town and City Streets.

NEW YORK—R. E. Simpson, nationally known traffic expert and formerly consulting engineer for the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, warned motorists, and town and city officials that their main traffic thoroughfares are America's Fatal Streets, and that the fatal record is due, in large part, to lack of adequate visibility for night driving. Most street lighting in operation today produces less than half the minimum visibility for safety and they must be modernized if night traffic death is to be reduced, Mr. Simpson says.

R. E. SIMPSON

The facts about America's Fatal Streets were drawn from a two-year survey, by Mr. Simpson, of traffic accidents in 47 cities having 20,000 miles of streets and involving 7,379 automobile fatalities. The survey showed, though main thoroughfares represent only 10% of the total street mileage, that they account for 41% of all fatalities and 50% of all night fatalities. Three times as many people are killed on them at night as in the daytime, and all of this despite the fact that only one-fourth to one-fifth the traffic moves after dark.

Averaging his own estimates and those of the National Safety Council and Illuminating Engineering Society, Mr. Simpson says that about 50% of all night accidents are due directly to the lack of adequate illumination. He estimates that these excessive and preventable night fatalities on America's Fatal Streets cost about $2,444 per mile per year. It is Mr. Simpson's prediction that authorities will come to realize the vital relation of light to safety and cities Detroit as the outstanding example of an American city that has saved both life and dollars through modernizing visibility. Detroit re-lighted 26 miles of its fatal streets and, as a result, cut the former ratio of 7 night deaths to 1 day death to 1.6 night deaths to 1 day death.

L. J. Schrenk, General Superintendent of Detroit's Public Light Commission said, "Had that ratio been maintained in 1931, 1932 and 1933 prior to improved lighting, more than 100 lives would have been saved."

CHAPTER VIII

IN the days that followed, Judy Alcott tried to forget Jack Hanley's face, tried to forget the impression... She was still heart shaped under the long lashes, were cool. They looked back at her, and if she had not known the turmoil buried in their depths, she would not have seen it.

ought to get out more, do things. When she was dressed, she looked at herself in the mirror. Her face seemed thinner than before. But it was still heart shaped under the long lashes, were cool. They looked back at her, and if she had not known the turmoil buried in their depths, she would not have seen it.

Diane said, "Suppose you tell me why you've suddenly buried yourself? You weren't at the dinner for Captain Lane, you've hardly played bridge—I never see you!" Judy said carelessly, "Just resting. I'm sort of fed up on gaiety."

It was a sunny morning, warm, but not too warm for comfort. Judy felt her spirits lift a little as they rode into town. Perhaps she did need to get out more. She felt a little surge of gratitude toward Diane. She said, smiling, "I'm going to be painfully honest about every hat you try on, Di."

"Maybe to get away from here," said Diane flatly. "You quarreled with him, Judy. I don't like to see you going over the bumps without doing anything to stop you. And Bill tells me Jack Hanley's staying aboard these days, moping. Said he mentioned something about thinking of requesting a transfer to Pensacola."

SHE was wandering about the house one morning, thinking the same futile things over and over, when the phone rang. He heart leaped. Maybe it was Jack. She would see him. She had not treated him well. Even though she could not marry him, their friendship had meant a great deal, and she missed him.

The Paradise was one of the best restaurants in town. It had cool, dim spaciosness, and the sum of cultured voices greeted them as they walked in from the street. There was a trim hostess who came forward and said, "Two? This way please."

"You're so blamed sunk in pitying yourself because Dwight Campbell's marrying somebody else, you don't even notice Jack Hanley enough to quarrel with him!" Suddenly Diane stiffened. "Look!" she whispered. "Over there—in that table right across—isn't that Marvel Hastings?"

AT least two of the seven unbeaten and untied major teams stand an excellent chance of being smacked at a hilarious football season reaches a new crescendo, Nov. 12.

The downfall of perfect Pittsburgh and mighty California is something in the way of evidence that all clubs must lose at least once in these high-pressure pigskin days, so we may just as well start at the top and pick Minnesota over Notre Dame at South Bend and Cornell's mobile giants to repel Dartmouth at Ithaca.

Of the other squads with unblemished records, Texas Christian has another romp in Texas at Dallas, Tennessee should shade Vanderbilt in Nashville, unscored on Duke should have no undue difficulties with the Orange in Syracuse, Oklahoma will have to be at its best to whip Missouri at Norman, and Iowa State will be fortunate to hurdle Kansas State at Manhattan for its ninth consecutive victory.

At Ann Arbor, Northwestern, on the rebound, gives Michigan its severest test since the Minnesota match, but the Wolverines are expected to continue their inspiring comeback.

YALE invades Princeton for the inaugural Big Three battle, and it is about time that the Elis ran out of last-minute luck.

With Sid Luckman pitching once more, Columbia should pass Navy to defeat in New York, where Fordham takes North Carolina in stride, and Colgate should dispose of New York University the same way.

Carnegie Tech, conqueror of conquerable Pitt, should march on at the expense of Duquesne in another neighborhood row even without Bill Lee, captain and fullback who dislocated his knee in the third period of the rout of the Panthers.

on at the expense of Duquesne in another neighborhood row even without Bill Lee, captain and fullback who dislocated his knee in the third period of the rout of the Panthers. Pennsylvania is favored to get back on the right track against Penn State on Franklin Field, but the Quakers will know that they were in a football game. Ohio State, with only one creditable showing to date... its tie with Northwestern... should do a little salvaging at the expense of disappointing Illinois at Champaign. Indiana finally stumbles into a crew it should beat in Iowa at Bloomington.

FOLLOWING their shallow victory over Tulane, Alabama's Red Elephants are likely to stampede against Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

Auburn's internal trouble won't do the Plainsmen any good in their Birmingham engagement with competent Louisiana State. Texas A. and M. is picked to get over Rice by a gnarl eyelash at College Station. Improving Southern Methodist is given the call over Arkansas at Dallas.

Southern California, which became the west's Rose Bowl choice by making a show of the vaunted California Bear, goes to Seattle, where the Trojans run smack dab into a Washington array which has struck its true stride after a long delay. I'm picking the men of Howard Jones, but it will be a dog fight.

U. C. L. A. will see what a big and strong Big Ten team really looks like when Wisconsin deploys against the Bruins in Los Angeles. But, as it has been so frequently demonstrated, there's many a slip betwixt the snap-back and the forward march.

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The extent to which the European situation and the conflict between democracy and fascism is on the official mind crops out in every other utterance in Washington.

As President Roosevelt signed a proclamation reducing the postal rate on books to the rate for magazines, he observed:

"They're burning books over in Europe. But as they burn them, we will extend them in the official mind crops out in every other utterance in Washington. Postage on books formerly was from 5 to 25 cents a pound, based on regional zones. It now becomes 1 1/2 cents a pound. Roosevelt was told that book sales would be increased by the lower rate and that the population now lived an average of 30 miles from any bookstore.

Congressman James M. Mead of New York, chairman of the House Post Office Committee, and Attorney Morris L. Ernst of New York are chiefly responsible for the reduction.

"I am getting rid of 33 years' accumulation of useless papers," said O'Reilly with a smile as she cleared her desk on her last day. "I am now in my seventy-fourth year and when a woman gets to be that old, she shouldn't think of doing anything strenuous. My plans, therefore, are to read and knit and munch apples."

HAROLD J. T. HORAN, once an ace competitionist in Europe and now stationed in Washington, has returned from a European vacation with word that the job of being an overseas correspondent has lost its glamor in most foreign capitals.

The newspaperman who writes "unfriendly" articles from Berlin is likely to have trouble getting milk for his baby, let alone official news, says Horan. Other forms of pressure are exerted. Much the same sort of thing applies in Rome and other capitals, except London and Paris. Correspondents who use the mail often have found their letters were tampered with before they left the country.

PROFESSOR O. M. W. SPRAGUE, Treasury adviser who quit early in the New Deal on a violent disagreement over policy, is back in the fold. He was called in as a consultant by the Temporary Economic Committee conducting the monopoly investigation. Sprague says the national debt can rise from its present $38,000,000,000 to 50 or 60 billions without disturbing government credit. But he warns that deficits can't go on indefinitely.

Six-Man Football Game The Junior College Central Texas Conference, of which Ranger Junior college is a charter member, is one of the many Texas junior college conferences that are considering adopting a six-man football team as one of the major sports of the junior colleges next year.

At the present time the Gainesville, Weatherford, and Ranger Junior colleges have signified their interest in this sport.

In six-man football, passes are the greatest source of ground gains. The team must acquire perfect timing, great deceptive skill and accurate tiring. The team's skill also depends strongly on the alertness of the quarterback, who, for this reason, must not only know his team's strength and weaknesses, but also must know what each man does on each play. He must know all the rules of football and how to meet different game situations; he must be a good ball handler, shifty on his feet, and a good blocker with the ability to run. Since six-man football requires such intellectual and physical strength of the quarterback, he should be the most carefully selected. The center, the next man in importance on the team, must have courage, speed, and ball snapping ability. The full back, half back, and ends must also possess natural ability, courage and alertness, and all must be able to work together.
