CATTLE WHEAT GROWERS TO BE AIDED BY PACT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The State Department, in an analysis of the new trade agreement with the United Kingdom and Canada, said they carried concessions for American wheat growers and the livestock growers.

American livestock industry should gain much from these agreements. The United Kingdom is by far the largest foreign market for American products, taking about one-third of the total export.

American wheat will be permitted to enter the United Kingdom duty-free, eliminating a tariff of almost six cents a bushel.

Of importance to livestock growers is modification of tariff barriers on Canadian cattle which will be permitted to enter the United States for a duty of one and one-half cents a pound. The tariff formerly was two cents. The quota of livestock shipments was also increased, but the increased volume was not expected to be enough to depress prices.

Great Britain appears to have gained most in concessions on whiskey, textiles and manufactured metal goods.

Germany stands alone, now, as the major nation entirely outside the circle of those having reciprocal trade programs.

Eastland County Loses Barnhart, Who Gets Throckmorton Position

Hugh P. Barnhart, assistant Eastland county agent, is to resign December 1 and accept a position as Throckmorton county agent.

Barnhart in his two years and eight months' work in Eastland county achieved what was described as a brilliant record in 4-H work.

Boys under his instruction have won district, state and national honors.

The Eastland County Jersey 4-H Dairy Club which was organized by Barnhart is regarded by authorities as one of the most outstanding in the state.

In his work in the county Barnhart had 4-H club relations with over 400 youths. At Throckmorton he succeeds R. O. Dunkle.

The change is an advancement for Barnhart. He came to Eastland from Coleman where he was an administrative assistant in an A.A.A. program.

Successor for Barnhart has not been officially announced. W. L. Glass, College Station, district 7 agent, conferred Friday with members of commissioner's court regarding the change.

Daladier Is Given A Severe Setback

PARIS, Nov. 18.—Premier Daladier was given a severe blow today when his own parliamentary party split on his financial and economic recovery program.

The party approved his economic decrees and tax increases but only by a majority vote instead of the usual unanimous endorsement.

The consequences were not clear, but observers believed the premier's position, and that of the government, might be in danger.

The vote came at a critical time, as a nation wide protest was started against the decrees. Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax of Britain are about to visit Paris.

Old Double Peg Is Finally Killed By An Expert Trapper

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas — Stephens county farmers and ranchers finally are freed of Double-Peg, a twice crippled coyote infamous for his depredations on flocks in this area.

The stock raisers have nothing but praise for the anonymous government trapper who rid them of Double-Peg.

The coyote was caught twice in traps. He left a forefoot in one and a hindfoot in another. The experiences sharpened Double-Peg's cunning and made him a killer of domestic animals and fowls, with sheep his principal victims. Coyotes ordinarily eat rabbits and other wild game, but the injuries slowed Double-Peg until he could not cope with the wilds.

His depredations on sheep flocks became legendary, and for two months or more this fall his raids cost ranchers hundreds of dollars. Often Double-Peg killed 10 or more sheep in a single sortie, apparently for the joy of killing rather than for food.

The ranchers' traps remained empty and Double-Peg was the section's most sought enemy.

A professional trapper was sent here for the specific purpose of catching the coyote. He rode the ranges for days, searching for the animal and studying Double-Peg's methods from the evidence left on the sheep ranges.

The trapper finally discovered that Double-Peg patronized one secluded water hole on the Benny Ranch. A trap was set and the trapper waited for the coyote. The trapper never so much as changed clothes during his vigil for fear that Double-Peg would be wary of a strange scent of man.

The peg-legged killer finally relaxed his wariness and was trapped on one of his sound legs, then killed. The trapper reported to County Agent W. R. Luce, then departed for other hunts without even giving his name.

Van Hooser's body was found stripped on a road near Malvern. Broken beer bottles nearby indicated he was beaten to death. His automobile was found in Muskogee, Okla., Monday.

Carrier was released recently from the Oklahoma state penitentiary, where he served a sentence for stealing a horse.

PROTEST FILED ON SHUTDOWN OF OIL FIELDS

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 18.—A formal protest against orders requiring Saturday and Sunday shutdowns of Texas oil fields was made today at the monthly production hearing of the Texas Railroad Commission.

Ray Starnes of Gladewater, who made the protest, said he may later file a suit against such orders.

Starnes asserted that the shutdowns violate the marginal well law, under which wells in the East Texas field are allowed at least 20 barrels daily production.

Chairman Ernest O. Thompson said the December production order likely will not be issued until after Thanksgiving day.

Federal Bureau of Mines estimates for December Texas production was 27,000 barrels less than November. The estimate of 1,343,000 barrels daily for December compares with an estimate of 1,371,000 daily for November.

LUBBOCK, Tex.—Freshman government students at Texas Tech were inspiring in their definition of foreign types of governments. The instructor was visibly elated. Good citizenship had hit a new high!

France, German and Czechoslovakia had been scientifically disposed of.

"And what kind of government has England?"

"Cabinet!" cried a potential WPA administrator.

"And what does Switzerland have?"

"Alps," sung out the demure thing in the third row.

His face wreathed in disillusion, Utopia in ruins at his feet, the instructor was heard to mutter: "The Lord 'Alps' those who 'Alps' themselves. Class dismissed!"

Gasoline Company Safety Meeting Held In Ranger

With plant 108 in charge and Everett H. Everett acting as chairman, about 50 employees of the Ranger district of the Lone Star Gasoline company held their regular monthly safety meeting Wednesday night in the Ranger office yard.

J. F. Byas was in charge of a baseball play in which the questions were taken from the state boiler code and the Lone Star accident manual, and L. M. Cavley and Forest D. Ford were appointed team captains and each selected a team from the men present. L. M. Cavley's team consisted of Harry Wheelon, Rolfa Gordon, George Pate, David Vermillion, Robert Durham, R. V. Burns, David Klassen, O. A. Pickett, win Joe Faircloth as a pinch-hitter. Forest Ford's team consisted of J. R. Jarvis, John Ivey, Lonnie Herbin, Harry Henry, Archie Robinson, Harold Getts, Lonnie Todd, Everett H. Everett, with Chick Usery as a pinch hitter. L. M. Cavley's team won the contest with a score of 10 to 4. If a team member answered the question it was considered a hit, while if he failed it was counted as an out.

Those batting 1,000 per cent in this game were J. R. Jarvis of Dallas, Harry Wheelon, R. V. Burns, David Klassen, O. A. Pickett, Archie Robinson, Lonnie Todd and Everett H. Everett. Joe Faircloth, when called on as a pinch-hitter with two out and the bases loaded, observed the usual tendency of pinch-hitters in situations of this kind.

Prizes were given to each of the winning team members.

A short talk by J. R. Jarvis followed, in which he complimented this method of bringing out this safety information to all the men present.

E. H. Peacock, former safety director of the company and now a wholesale gasoline agent in Ranger, was a visitor at the meeting.

Mr. Roosevelt said he thought it would be inhuman and cruel to force the refugees to return to their native lands.

LEWIS ELECTED AS HEAD OF A CIO CONGRESS

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 18.—John L. Lewis today was named the first president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations after a wild 28-minute demonstration at the organization's convention here.

Lewis had no opposition.

The congress called on the government to extend credit to Central and South America in an effort to combat "economic and political penetration" of the "fascist nations of Germany, Italy and Japan."

Lewis sat on the platform with his wife as the demonstration took place. He smiled broadly, and after 10 minutes gave the delegates a military salute.

One delegate carried a sign reading "my last Ford." In recognition of the convention's action voting to boycott Ford products unless the Ford company bargains with the CIO's automobile workers.

The convention voted full support to Harry Bridges, CIO maritime leader on the west coast, Bridges, an Australian, is facing deportation procedure.

Now Bill has been deported to a concentration camp where he will have to rustle his own food. Royalty Guards 24

Japan Denies Any Treaties Broken

TOKYO, Nov. 18.—Japan, replying to the U. S. protest against restrictions on foreign trade in Canada, denied today she is violating the open door principle of the nine-power treaty.

The note said Americans might return to interior points in China, except danger zones. (Most of the important parts of the interior have been proclaimed "danger zones" by Japan.)

German Boycott Is Urged by the AFL

GERMANY HAS RECALLED HER AMBASSADOR

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—Germany completed a "psychological suspension" of relations with the United States today by ordering Nazi ambassador Hans Dieckhoff to return to Berlin and explain President Roosevelt's "strange attitude" toward recent events in the Reich.

The departure of the ambassador and recall to Washington of U. S. Ambassador Hugh Wilson in no way represents a formal break in relations between the two governments. Yet it was a diplomatic way of making clear that friendship between them is severely strained.

Whether either ambassador ever will return appeared uncertain. It is not unusual for nations in controversy to maintain regular diplomatic relations except for the presence of an ambassador.

But the two withdrawals to "make reports" was unusual for several reasons.

The strain came just as Europe's democratic powers were seeking to improve relations generally.

It emphasized the American policy of condemning government by force as illustrated at the moment by the Nazi anti-Jewish laws.

It emphasized that the new Anglo-American trade treaty, signed yesterday, was a symbol of unity as well as for its economic implications.

The Nazi press lambasted the British-American treaty as the result of Jewish "agitation that serves business."

Belated reports showed anti-Semitic terrorism was even more widespread than previously indicated, and there was a rush for Jews to get passports to foreign countries.

Americas Together May Save a Way of Life

It is becoming more and more obvious that the Pan-American Conference which is to open in Peru next month presents New World democracy with a great opportunity. Events in the Old World are giving this meeting an importance which no previous Pan-American Conference has had.

While it is true that democracy as we understand it is not a very robust growth below the equator, it is also true that something fundamental to the New World way of life is being threatened from Europe.

The European dictatorships are not simply one-man tyrannies. They call for a regimentation of social and economic life such as no New World tyrant ever dreamed of.

The New World, both north and south of the equator, was settled and developed by men who opposed that sort of thing from the bottom of their souls.

So this conference offers a great chance for the people of the New World to perfect their defenses.

That is not primarily a military problem. It calls for little in the way of conferences between military and naval authorities. If the statesmen can find ways to keep the channels of New World trade clear, if they can formulate some program by which the New World nations can, through the interchange of goods, services and ideas, maintain and improve their economic levels and move forward toward a freer and richer life—then there will be much less reason to be afraid of developments in Europe.

The dictator states may coerce a single nation; they cannot coerce half the world. In the Americas opportunity still exists. If the Americas stand together, they can make of their half of the world a thriving, unregimented trade area which totalitarian economies cannot affect.

This conference is thus an opportunity—and a challenge. If the statesmen meet it, the steady growth of the totalitarian idea will receive a definite and significant check.

SERIAL STORY LOVERS AWEIGH

BY BETTY WALLACE

CAST OF CHARACTERS JUDY ALCOTT—admiral's daughter. She faced a choice between two navy suitors.

DWIGHT CAMPBELL—ambitious lieutenant. He faced a choice between his wife and duty.

MARVEL HASTINGS—navy wife. She faced the test of being a good sailor.

CHAPTER XI JUDY watched Diane Bell pushing the baby carriage across the station to Admiral Alcott's house.

Diane was hot and tired, but she was still lovely. Judy's mother began exclaiming over the baby at once. She was enjoying herself thoroughly.

Diane got Judy alone on the pretext of wanting a drink of water. "I hear Jack's orders to Pensacola were revoked at the last minute," she said bluntly.

"You're imagining things," said Judy. "So is the whole station. We've got lively imaginations." Then she said, "Judy, you don't know what you're missing by being so blind and stubborn."

"And you love Jack, too, you funny fool! You just don't know the signs. You're infatuated with Dwight. He's handsome and he knows how to—oh—you make me sick!"

"Maybe you make me sick, too," said Judy, smiling. She hugged Diane. "I'll be all right."

They went back outdoors to the baby and Mrs. Alcott. It was an unimportant incident, but it served to warn Judy how much talk was being aired around the station.

She wondered, too, if Jack Hanley was angry at having had his orders changed. He'd know, all right, who had changed them. She thought she couldn't bear it if he leaped to the conclusion that it was her request to her father that had done the job.

But he telephoned her that night, and his voice was almost cheerful. "Man proposes, the admiral disposes," he said. "I'm too valuable to the Enterprise to be lost without a replacement, or some damn thing, and when I do get my shore duty, it'll be on North Island."

"Oh," said Judy. "As long as I didn't succeed in running away from you, may I come over?"

SHE remembered the things he had said. "Crumbs." "The most sensible way is to cut it short." But she could understand, too, that a man who had said, "I haven't forgotten in five years" would still want to try again—if he had to remain close by.

She wanted to see him. That was the worst part of it. She had a friend, the dependable friend, the fine companion, that Jack had always been. But she had lost him the moment he told her he loved her.

"Come over, if you like," she said. "I haven't an engagement." "Coming," he said.

She waited for him restlessly. It wouldn't be easy. The silence was strained between them, the first few seconds, as they looked at each other. Then he said, "Judy, you're thinner than yesterday. There's something—something gaunt in your cheeks."

She laughed. "You're crazy! Nobody loses weight overnight." "If they don't sleep—" "I slept."

"About as much as I did, I'll bet." "Why couldn't you sleep? You thought you were going to Pensacola—getting away from it all—" "I never wanted to get away from you."

"Listen, Jack," she said steadily. "We talked it out. We decided something. Now you're not going. But what we decided still stands. Can't we be friends—the way we used to be?"

The brown eyes held hers. "I'll do anything you want," he said. "On any terms."

"All I want is that we—we act natural—that I don't keep feeling I— the words that came to her lips were, "That I've knifed you." But of course she couldn't say that, so she said nothing.

"I can't pretend I don't love you," he said earnestly. "It's too much to ask. But I'll never mention it again. We'll dance, and ride, and go to parties just as we used to—and—well—it'll all be the same as it used to be."

It never would be. She knew that. But she did need him, in a curious fashion. As Diane had said, she couldn't stand up to Dwight and Marvel without the solid bulk of Jack Hanley behind her. He was so fine. It was a pity to use his love only for a shield, his deep concern for her only to hide the blow another man had inflicted. She gripped his hand. "You're sweet, Jack. You're the best friend I ever had."

Mrs. Alcott was wordlessly content, pleased to Jack, never so much as asking a leading question of Judy. But the girl knew that her mother was waiting. Waiting for the maneuver to work. For the wild infatuation to die. For Jack to win.

Night after night she said to herself desperately, "Why can't they see? This isn't an infatuation. This is real. This is the biggest thing that can happen to a woman. I see him everywhere I go. I hear his voice, and it comes between me and the voices of other people. It doesn't matter that he's going to marry her. I ought to have pride. I ought to have self-control. But dear God—I can't help it. Oh, Dwight, Dwight!"

And then she would clutch the pillow, feeling the coolness of it against her fevered cheek. The hours would go by so slowly. There would be the tiny sound of the clock on the table beside her and the chimes from the tall clock in the hall. Passing . . . passing . . . But so slowly!

She had a bridge date the day the wedding invitation came. She couldn't get out of it, because a commander's wife was entertaining the girls. A new commander, recently transferred from the East. They had called on her parents first, of course, and then on the officers one by one in order of their rank. As the daughter of the admiral, she had to go this time, if never again.

She stuck Marvel's heavy white envelope, with its exquisitely engraved invitation, into a bureau drawer and slammed the drawer shut. How the eyes of the women would gleam, when she entered the room! By this time, even the new commander's wife would have heard the gossip. She dressed carefully, and when she was finished, she put two spots of rouge high on her cheeks. Mustn't look pale! Mustn't look worried. She'd have to smile at them, ignore the innuendoes, pretend everything was fine. Never before had she hated the demands of navy life. But this afternoon, walking out of her father's house toward her car, she said bitterly, "I despise it all! Even my soul isn't my own! I'd like to chuck it. I'd like to be anonymous, unknown. Oh, if there could only be no more navy, never again, for me!"

It never would be. She knew that. But she did need him, in a curious fashion. As Diane had said, she couldn't stand up to

She waited for him restlessly. It wouldn't be easy. The silence was strained between them, the first few seconds, as they looked at each other. Then he said, "Judy, you're thinner than yesterday. There's something—something gaunt in your cheeks."

She laughed. "You're crazy! Nobody loses weight overnight." "If they don't sleep—" "I slept."

"About as much as I did, I'll bet." "Why couldn't you sleep? You thought you were going to Pensacola—getting away from it all—" "I never wanted to get away from you."

"Listen, Jack," she said steadily. "We talked it out. We decided something. Now you're not going. But what we decided still stands. Can't we be friends—the way we used to be?"

The brown eyes held hers. "I'll do anything you want," he said. "On any terms."

"All I want is that we—we act natural—that I don't keep feeling I— the words that came to her lips were, "That I've knifed you." But of course she couldn't say that, so she said nothing.

"I can't pretend I don't love you," he said earnestly. "It's too much to ask. But I'll never mention it again. We'll dance, and ride, and go to parties just as we used to—and—well—it'll all be the same as it used to be."

It never would be. She knew that. But she did need him, in a curious fashion. As Diane had said, she couldn't stand up to

Letters From Our Readers

The Editor:
You are of course well aware of the loss Texas agriculture is suffering through soil erosion and of water conservation measures. Our disastrous floods, silting reservoirs, and periods of extreme drought would be minimized in the opinion of experts, by sound conservation practices. The Texas A. & M. College Extension Service has been working this problem for more than 25 years. A survey made in 1937 revealed that on 90 per cent of the land and pasture land of Texas there is need for some method of water conservation. Although protective measures have

Kindness a Habit
Just as you now play a piece without the music and do not think what notes you strike, though once you picked them out by slow and patient toil, so if you begin of set purpose, you will learn the law of kindness in utterance so perfectly that it will be second nature to you, and make more music in your life than all the songs, the sweetest voice has ever sung.—F. E. Willard.

The Bee Tree
There was once a big tree near our house where lots of bees lived. One day daddy climbed up into the tree to get a baseball one of the boys had thrown up there and it had fastened between two limbs. Daddy did not know the bees were in the tree and all at once he heard a buzz, buzz, and the bees began to sting him.

Unless the wind has blown the ball down it is still in the tree for everyone is afraid to climb in the tree since they have learned it is the home of angry bees.—Lois Casey, 3rd grade.

The Cow and a Little Boy
Once there was a little boy who was told not to go into a certain field.

One day this little boy went into that field and there was a big cow got after him and chased him across the field. The boy saw a tree and hurriedly climbed into it. When he had time to settle down and look around, he saw to his surprise the cow standing under the tree. The sun began to sink slowly behind a hill, but still the cow did not seem to have any idea of getting away from the tree.

As he began to get dark a bunch of cows came along and seemed to say, "come with us, Mrs. Cow?" "we're going where there is some good grass." The little boy was so happy when this cow joined in the parade and marched away.

When he felt he could safely get out of the field unseen, he gladly did so and it is needless to say he stayed out of this field after that day.—Eudell Griffen, 3rd grade.

A Bird
One day I went to visit my aunt and she had a pretty little yellow canary bird. She kept it in a pretty little blue cage.

A little boy went into the room where she kept the little bird and was playing with it. He opened the little cage door and out flew the little bird through the big door.

ANSWER: With the setting of the sun, desert air loses heat rapidly, due to the fact that dry air lets the heat leak away much faster than does the moist air.

NYA Girls Entertain NYA Boys and Friends Thursday Evening

At 7:30 Thursday evening, a group of twenty NYA boys, accompanied by their director, Mr. Hugh A. Guant, and Mr. Hall Walker, with other guests, Mr. Marley Styner of Fort Worth, Mr. M. T. Griffin, Jr., of Dallas, Mrs. John M. Ghoson, and Mrs. Blanche Marzay, met at the girls' NYA project house, where a pleasant evening was spent with the girls and Mrs. Bragg, their supervisor, as hostesses.

Mr. Walker, who has sponsored this project and worked unceasingly for its success, introduced the visitors and told the girls and boys there would be a similar entertainment each week, with various speakers, among whom would be a dentist, some of the business men of the town, and school officials. He complimented them on their fine conduct and good work and said he wanted each of them to feel at home in Ranger and like the town.

Mr. Styner, an insurance man from Fort Worth was introduced by Mr. Walker. He stressed the point of "how fortunate the boys and girls were to have the NYA project," after which he talked on "credit." He said 95 per cent of business was done on credit and that there were three particular qualifications a person must have in order to obtain and keep a good credit rating, namely: character, capacity and capital. Other elements, which he said, are determination, which is born in us, and courage, which is our heritage. He stressed "character," and said it could be cultivated, and that it controls us. Capacity, he said, is the ability to earn a living. He warned against getting into a quagmire of debt. "Take these three things, character, capacity and capital," Mr. Styner concluded, "and go forward."

Refreshments of cake and cocoa were served by Mrs. Bragg, assisted by the girls.

Music by the girls furnished entertainment for the remainder of the evening.

How To Relieve Misery of Your CHEST COLD

If you are suffering from a miserable chest cold, try this: Massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with warm cloth. VapoRub goes right to work to bring relief—two ways at once. (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Direct to the irritated air-passages with its medicated vapors.

This poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion.

Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Union Service to Be Held Sunday

The annual union Thanksgiving service will be held at the First Methodist church in Ranger Sunday night, with the various churches of the city participating. The service will begin at 7:30 o'clock, with a massed choir from the several churches leading in the singing of familiar hymns.

Rev. G. Alfred Brown, pastor of the First Methodist church and president of the ministerial alliance, will preside. Rev. Charles T. Tay, Jr., pastor of the First Baptist church, will bring the Thanksgiving sermon. Others taking part in the service will include Dr. L. B. Gray, pastor of the First Presbyterian church; Rev. H. B. Johnson, pastor of the First Christian church; Rev. A. G. Pool, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene, and W. T. Walton, superintendent of public schools.

"There are many things that Americans, and particularly Texans, have to be thankful for. And since many of these blessings are directly attributable to the Christian religion, it is very fitting that the churches unite in giving all of the people of our community an opportunity of coming together in a united spirit of Thanksgiving to God, the creator and giver of all good gifts," the announcement of the service states.

Everyone is cordially invited to join in this service.
