Threat of Bombing Cities Is Ace Card of Dictators

Word from overseas has it that the British government hopes for an international agreement to ban the bombing of civilians in wartime. Negotiations for a four-power treaty to that effect are to begin shortly, it is said, with Germany, Italy, France and England as the interested parties.

An agreement like that would be very nice, if it could just be signed and lived up to. Yet one does not need to be an inveterate cynic to suspect that such an agreement is the one thing which the Fascist powers will not grant.

It is common knowledge that the democracies knuckled under to the dictatorships at Munich because they were scared to death of what the German and Italian air forces might do to them. England still has the world's greatest navy, and the French army—despite all that has been said about German re-armament—is still as strong as any in Europe, if not stronger. Yet because they were outclassed in the air, England and France caved in.

And that fact carries its own moral.

While military experts are not yet unanimous about the role of air power in modern warfare, it is pretty generally agreed that—from a strictly military point of view—airplanes cannot win a war, in the old sense, by themselves. They cannot seize and hold territory. They cannot destroy armies. The final decision still belongs to the man on the ground.

So the democracies were not threatened with military defeat, in the old style, at Munich. What they were threatened with was something very different—and infinitely worse: destruction of their great cities, the death of many thousands of women and children, a disorganization of civil life on a terrible scale.

It was this threat that compelled them to back down. They could have won the war; but they could not have won it without suffering losses too frightful to contemplate.

In other words, the threat of bombing civilians was the ace card held by the Fascists. It was the one card which the democracies could not match. Without it, Hitler could not for one minute have overruled his rivals.

It is clear, then, that any international agreement to outlaw the bombing of civilians would (if entered into sincerely and lived up to on all sides) deprive the dictator states of the one big advantage which has enabled them to get their own way.

Does anyone suppose that Hitler and Mussolini would agree to any such thing?

The world today needs few things more desperately than it needs an end to this threat of raining death on defenseless civilians. But to expect those who profit by the use of that threat to give it up meekly and without protest is like expecting the lion and the lamb to lie down together in perfect friendship.

'Boss, I Got a Great New Idea!'

HIGHLAND PARK HAS HARD TIME WINNING FROM BULLDOGS 14-0

The Highland Park Scots of Dallas, who have won all their games, with one exception, by wide margins, got two "lucky" touchdowns to win from the Ranger Bulldogs 14 to 0 at Dallas Friday afternoon. After the game school officials said that it was the second hardest game of the season for the highly-rated Dallas team.

The first Highland touchdown came with only 30 seconds to play in the first half when Hemmingway tossed a long pass from mid-field to Bishop, who snared the pass on the Ranger 28-yard line and scampered over the goal line to score.

In the third quarter, German, Scot end, recovered Boughton's fumble on the Ranger 19 and from there the Highlanders scored again in three plays.

MAVERICKS LOSE LAST GAME OF SEASON, 59-0 IN BROWNWOOD FRIDAY

Game at a Glance: Brownwood 59, Eastland 0. First downs 2, 458 yds. gained rushing 26, 91 yds. passing 0, 5 of 11 passes completed, 0 off 5, 1 missed intercepted by 2, 5 for 55 penalties, 2 for 10, 2 for 77 punts, 7 for 231.

In the final game of the season for both teams, Eastland Mavericks were overwhelmingly defeated 59 to 0 Friday night by Brownwood Lions at Brownwood.

The game left Eastland in the cellar position as finished up with Brownwood with a rating of .500 with a record of two games won, two tied and two lost.

Robins Are Canned For Winter Food In Spite of a Law

GATESVILLE, Tex.—Residents along Owl Creek, in Coryell county, will have to learn that robins—while they may make good eating—must be left alone.

State Game Warden Van A. Harris overheard an Owl Creek dweller say recently that "canned robin sure makes good eating." With an agent from the U. S. biological survey office in Fort Worth, Harris toured the section and found that robins had been used as a winter delicacy for years and that the citizens honestly didn't know that it was against the law to kill the songbirds.

Olden Loses Game To Woodson 25-0

In a game which decided the championship of the lower bracket of the district the Olden Hornets were drubbed by the Woodson Cowboys Friday afternoon to the tune of 25-0.

Outweighed 15 pounds to the man, the lighter Hornets battled the Cowboys on even terms until the end of the third quarter and from that time on it was a slaughter. The Hornets threatened only once and that was in the opening minutes of the first quarter. They reached the 15 yard line the first time they gained possession of the ball.

Twice in the second and twice in the third quarter scores were averted by the Hornet defense within the 15 yard line.

This ends a good season for the Hornets, winning six and losing two. The Hornets outpiled 166 points while giving up 53 points for the season. Friday was the first conference game that an opponent had crossed the Hornet goal line against the first team.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

Monday's Menu: BREAKFAST: Concord grapes, bacon, waffles, honey, coffee, milk. LUNCHEON: Creamed chestnuts on toast, mixed green salad, cranberry tarts, tea, milk.

DINNER: Apple and orange cup, boiled smoked ham tenderloin, prepared mustard, creamed potatoes, Swiss chard, pumpkin pie, cheese, coffee, milk.

After you have made your pies, use any left-over pumpkin in corn bread. Half a cup of mashed cooked or canned pumpkin added to your cornbread batter produces a soft and deliciously moist bread.

Is canned pumpkin as good as the fresh? More and more cooks are using the canned variety and getting highly satisfactory results. The convenience of the canned variety is attractive to kitchenette cooks and women who have very little extra kitchen time. There are many excellent brands on the market.

Rich Pumpkin Pie (1 pie) One tablespoon flour, 1-2 tablespoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon mace, 1-2 teaspoon cloves, 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 cup dark brown sugar, 2 cups cooked or canned pumpkin, 1-4 cup cream, 1-4 cup melted butter, 1-2 cup milk.

Mix flour, seasonings and sugar well together. Add this to pumpkin which has been heated and add melted butter, cream and milk, then add beaten egg yolks and fold in stiffly beaten whites.

Broncos of Santa Clara Reach End of Trail

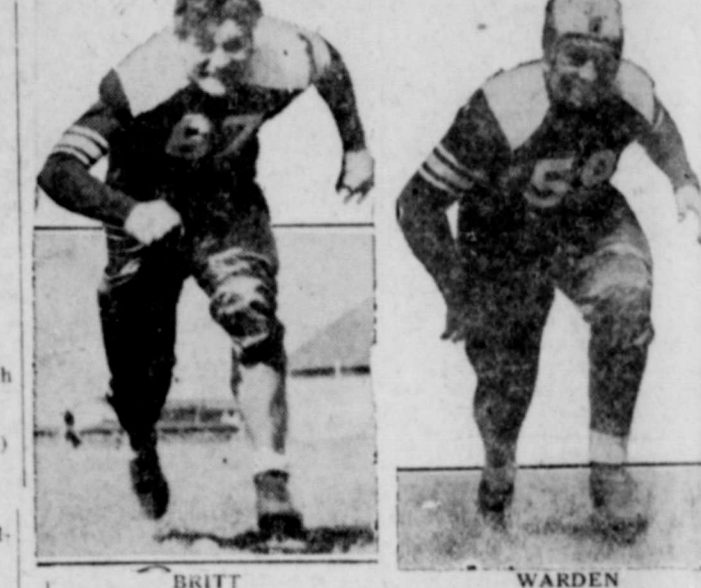

Smashing line play featured St. Mary's 7-0 upset of Santa Clara at San Francisco, where the Broncos were defeated for the first time since 1936. Bruno Pelligrini, No. 23 of Santa Clara, tries to crack through for a gain in scoring territory, but is met by a stone wall in the person of the Gales' Dick Mesak. Spawled on the turf in the foreground after attempting their blocking assignments are three Broncos—Wolf, No. 39; Tinney, No. 31, and Schiechl, No. 32.

Honesty in All Things

Text: Exodus 20:15; Luke 19:1-10, 45, 46

OUR lesson on the eighth Commandment, "Thou shalt not steal," contains a New Testament story which is itself a lesson upon the Commandment.

The Commandment is simple, old and plain. It does not go into any niceties of definition to define what is stealing. It does not consider such questions as the rightfulness of possession, nor whether the thief might not under certain circumstances be more entitled to the things stolen than the man from whom they were taken. We must remember, of course, that these Commandments have their origin and emphasis in a simple and rather primitive society where the conditions of life were not complex and where, if a man stole from his fellow, he took that which was likely to be the direct product of his neighbor's labor and honesty.

Garrett Speaks at Breckenridge Meet

Congressman Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland was a speaker at a meeting of the Breckenridge Lions club Friday.

Whether Zachaeus practiced extortion or not is not clear, but when Jesus came into his life and salvation came to Zachaeus, he dared to look at his own business life and work, and he said, "If I have taken wrongfully anything of any man, I will restore fourfold."

That was what a thief was compelled to restore under the law. Zachaeus said in effect, "If I have taken anything that really does not belong to me, I am a thief, and I want to square my conscience by restoring a thief's portion."

What a revelation would come to the world and what a change if all men similarly met Jesus and faced their lives and their actions upon such a basis of reality! Zachaeus had learned the meaning of the Commandment, "Thou shalt not steal."

Swiss Yodlers To Be Presented Here Tues. Afternoon

A unique concert of native Swiss Music and Yodeling is to be presented in the Ranger high school auditorium Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, according to announcement by W. F. Walton, superintendent of schools.

Three brothers recently arrived in the United States from their native land Lucerne, Switzerland. They are Jesse, Louis, and Fritz Stader. Their mission to this country is to bring to us some of their wholesome Swiss folk music and to acquaint American audiences with the manners and customs of the Alpine people.

These three brothers, jovial ambassadors of good will and smiles, are making their first long tour in the Southwest. They made a short tour during the summer of 1938.

With a beautiful stage background of Alpine scenery, and wearing colorful native Swiss costumes, this charming trio carries you into the heart of their picturesque land.

They are an unusually versatile group of musicians and entertainers. They play such instruments as the bass viol, three accordions, six clarinets, and concertina. Each of the brothers plays two or more instruments, each is an expert yodeler. Solo and harmony yodeling is featured.

High lights of the concert are the brief talks given by Jose describing the unique customs of his native land, and people and also his Swiss dance.

You have never heard real Swiss yodeling until you have heard these boys reproduce the famous Alpine Echo Yodeling Song.

Here are some comments which followed their tour in the Southwest the summer of 1938:

Texas A. & M. College, College Station, Dr. C. H. Winkler, director, summer session where they appeared three times in eight days: "Studer brothers have proven themselves one of the best numbers for summer entertainment that we have ever had."

University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Wm. S. Grosdon, chairman, summer entertainment committee: "In spite of the fact we were competing against the biggest prize fight of the year the Studer brothers held their audience of over two thousand people in our Omega Greek theatre and kept them all entertained and happy."

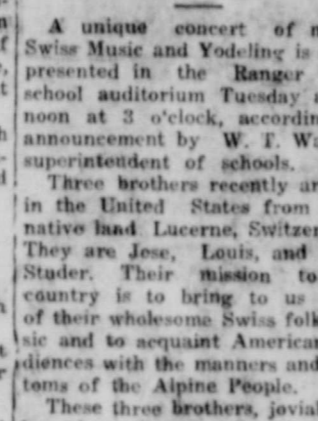

State Teachers College, Hattiesburg, Miss. Dr. J. R. George, president, "They carried their audience with them from the time the curtain was raised until the close of the performance. I can certainly recommend Studer brothers to any institution wanting an outstanding number."

Louisiana State Normal College, Natchitoches, Dr. J. S. Kysor, chairman, Lyceum committee: "They were all we claimed for them and the enjoyment of them by our group was complete. I have never seen more spontaneous and continued applause."

State Teachers College, Livingston, Alabama, Mrs. L. I. McGriff, chairman, Entertainment committee: "I just want you to know that our student body certainly enjoyed the performance given by the Studer brothers. It was refreshing to see so much enthusiasm on the part of the audience as well as the performers."

New Mexico Normal University, Las Vegas, Dr. H. C. Gosard, president: "I am writing to say a word of appreciation for the fine program rendered by the Studer brothers last night."

The doctor, an eminent international authority on folklore and head of modern languages at T. C. U., was accompanied by Mrs. Combs, a native French woman who has just returned from France.

Since Dr. Combs was born and reared in Kentucky, he is acquainted with the Highland people, their language, and their ways. The doctor sang a number of Alghomy mountain folk songs and played his dulcimer, an ancient instrument used by the Hebrews in Biblical times. His instrument is very delicate, and its origin is unknown.

Mrs. Combs visited three classes of the English department in the afternoon. More than two hundred and fifty people heard her discussions of French life and of the life of a French person in America. Of special interest was her comparison of the French and American educational systems.

Former Rockefeller Estate Is Surveyed

CLEVELAND, O.—Forest Hill Park, a recreation area given to the citizens of suburban East Cleveland by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has been opened to the public to permit voters to decide for themselves whether to approve an $88,000 bond issue for the improvement of the plot.

Visitors are told by WPA workmen and foremen that the bond issue is all that is necessary to get a $2,000,000 WPA project under way which will put to work 2,000 men. The project calls for the completion of a lake for skating and boating, for landscaping of the plot, and for the construction of athletic fields and tennis courts.

The bond issue was part of the Rockefeller estate and contains the golf course on which John D. Rockefeller, Sr., played.

First Baptist Has Called Education Director of Church

The First Baptist church extended a call to the Mr. W. Stanton Jones of Dallas, to serve as Educational Director and choir director.

Brother Jones has accepted the call and will begin his service with the church next week. He comes highly recommended as a choir director, having served in that capacity in Dallas with Bethany Temple Baptist church.

His choirs have rendered Christmas and Easter cantatas before some of the largest audiences in Dallas. He has engaged in radio, choir and educational work, and the church feels fortunate in securing his services. He served as soloist in one of the largest churches in Dallas, before entering the field of directing.

At a previous meeting of the group, submitted a list of candidates, and the following officers were elected: president, James Smith; vice president, Lyndall Stringfellow; secretary and treasurer, Geraldine Smith; reporter, Doris Beech; sergeant-at-arms, A. C. Smet.

Thursday morning a committee of officers met and drew up the constitution for the club.

Just knowing the ingredients of an Angel Food Cake does not enable a woman to bake a good one—for the MIXING is so important. Perhaps you have not realized that Prescriptions, unlike recipes, usually give the recipes only, and leave it to the Pharmacist to know how to combine and mix them properly.

With many prescriptions, as with an Angel Food Cake recipe, this knowledge of HOW to combine the ingredients is vital. The Pharmacists at "this store" always know how. They study new drugs, learn how to combine them properly with other drugs. This precaution is your best health protection.

SERIAL STORY

LOVERS AWEIGH

BY BETTY WALLACE
COPYRIGHT, 1938, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JUDY ALCOFF—admin's daughter. She faced a choice between two suitors.
DWIGHT CAMPBELL—ambitious lieutenant. He faced a choice between his wife and Judy.
JACK HANLEY—young sailor. He faced a test of a patient love.
MARVEL—Jack's sister-in-law. She faced the test of being a good sailor.

Yesterday Judy can never quite forget Dwight's memory of him in her life. She hates the demands of navy life.

CHAPTER XII
JUDY ALCOFF didn't want to go to Dwight Campbell's wedding. She shrank from the thought of it equally as much as she had shrank from the very idea of appearing as a bridesmaid. But not to appear would be to confirm, undeniably and forever, that what people were saying about her was true.

The bridge party, that afternoon, had been bad enough. Maybe the others had tried to be kind. They had succeeded only in emphasizing the fact that they were thinking of her as the girl Dwight had liked.

She had lived through the bridge party. Even smiled and laughed and thanked her hostess for a good time. She had lived through the tea that Mrs. Lane, as the wife of Dwight's skipper, could not avoid giving. But every time she remembered those tortured minutes in Mrs. Lane's living room, she clenched her hands.

She and Jack Hanley came in late. Purposely. Judy wanted the room filled with people; with talk and laughter, so that no one would notice her especially. But as it happened, Mrs. Lane was pouring tea when they arrived, and Marvel was sitting in a wing chair, Dwight bending over her solicitously. Mrs. Lane had evidently called some remark to Marvel across the small space between the table and the chair where Marvel sat, because there was a hush in the room—one of those waiting hushes.

And as Dwight smiled down at his fiancée, Jack Hanley and Judy came into the room.

MARVEL balanced her teacup and said coolly, "How are you, Miss Alcott?" She nodded to Jack, who was leading Judy toward their hostess. Then Marvel said, "I really don't know where we'll live, Mrs. Lane. Is it usual to take one of these little houses?"

So Mrs. Lane had asked Marvel where they would live. That question shouldn't have the power to hurt. But it had. The skipper's wife had known it would hurt Judy. Dwight and Marvel—together. Married. A house made it so real, so final. Dwight took Judy's hand and pressed it warmly. "Haven't seen you for a long time, Judy. How have you been?"

"Just fine," she said crisply, turning to Jack. But it had been agony, after that, to see him smiling at Marvel. Whispering to her. Once he took her arm and brought her to Captain Lane's side, and the very expression on his face seemed to shout aloud, "Isn't she wonderful, sir?"

"We must get out of here as soon as we decently can," said Judy hurriedly. Jack answered slowly. "We've just come." He gave her a sandwich. "That's one of those thin breads you always liked. What's your hurry?"

"I'm not in a hurry," she said. "Stand here and take it. Chin up!" he replied. He knew what her hurry was, all right. And he knew, too, that she mustn't be routed; she mustn't turn tail and run.

Nothing had changed since then. She must brazen this out, and the wedding, too.

ON the morning of the day they were to be married, Judy rose early and went to the window. Dwight's wedding day. The sky was deeply blue, already the sun was warming the dew from the grass on the lawn. "I hope he'll be happy!" she said fiercely. "Even if—even if she's the one!"

Judy looked at the dress hanging on the velvet hanger. It was lovely, splashingly colorful print, not too formal for a noon wedding, and yet special enough so that no one might feel Judy hadn't cared what she wore to Dwight's wedding. She and Diane had ransacked the town for it. Diane had said practically, "You'll be able to wear it all through the summer—it's a gorgeous thing. Teas—Sunday afternoons—"

Her narrow patent leather pumps, her pretty new gloves, that were exactly the golden-rust of one of the jungle flowers splashed across the dress. A wide, flat sailor in natural straw completed the costume.

Her father was in full-dress uniform, as the ushers and bridesmaids and other officers would be, too. Driving to the church, she avoided her mother's wise eyes. She said, "You look lovely, Mother." Mrs. Alcott wore a pale cream and lavender print.

Entering the church, murmuring, "Friends of the groom," Judy caught sight of Diane and Bill. Diane was stunning in a scarlet polka dot, the skirt of which repeated the pattern in purple. They had bought their dresses at the same time. Bill, with his Viking blondness, looked very handsome.

And then Jack was at her side. Judy's breath caught in her throat. He sat between her and her mother. He, too, was very good-looking in the dress uniform, his epaulets emphasizing the breadth of his shoulders.

It was a polite, handsome assemblage. Smart hats, pretty women. On the other side of the church, Judy saw the "friends of the bride." They were stunningly dressed. The men in civilian clothes were not the same type as the naval officers, but they looked bland and accustomed to ease.

Lilies were banked at the altar. There were tall ferns, the scent of flowers. Judy closed her gloved hand tightly on her bag. She must stop thinking. She must get through this somehow without giving in to the wild desire to scream.

The organ's sonorous pealing began. Jack whispered, "They're doing it up brown!" and Judy gave him a tiny, grateful smile.

It was then, while the organ played, that Judy saw the man again. The one who had lunched with Marvel. That smooth, dark head; the self-possessed, assured air. The long, thin face—the lips that were set in an almost mocking expression. She had never forgotten the man. The man who so perfectly the sort Marvel would know. There was no doubt about it—it was he.

"But of course," Judy said to herself, "He'd be at her wedding if he's a friend of hers." Yet that had been more than a friendly lunch. She remembered again the way the man's hands had reached for Marvel's.

There was a stir in the church, and people turned their heads. The bride, the bride coming down the aisle, on the arm of her uncle.

Judy said involuntarily, "By God, she looks good!" She did, Judy admitted. Her dress was of exquisite white tulle. It billowed about her like soft, lacy clouds. The shining, burning red of her hair was veiled by a simple length of tulle, crowned by a tiny wreath of orange Blossoms. There was color only in her hair, and in the faintly amazing fact that instead of the traditional white bouquet, Marvel was carrying deep red roses. Rich, heart's blood red.

Judy watched her walk slowly down the aisle. Dwight, his love shining in his eyes, was waiting for her. Judy felt a sob gathering in her throat. Her fingers went to her lips, but before she could stifle it, Jack had heard her moan, "I can't stand it! I can't, I can't!"

Real Estate Body Flays the Patman Chain Store Taxes

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (Special)—Following by only a few days, W. Wright Patman's personal opposition of his "death sentence" chain store tax proposal, delegates to the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, representing 50,000 members from 455 federated bodies, today condemned the measure as one which would "end a widespread disorganization of commercial property use and a consequent dislocation of real estate values."

The association denounced the proposed Patman Act and directed that copies of their strongly worded resolution be sent to members of congress and members of the House Ways and Means Committee, to whom the Patman bill would be referred when introduced.

Delegates to the convention stated that Patman has announced he will re-introduce his Public cordially invited.

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 20.

The Golden Text is: "Ye, in the way of thy judgments, O Lord, have we waited for thee; the desire of our soul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee" (Isaiah 26:8).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "My soul, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from him" (Psalms 62:5).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Soul is the substance, Life, and intelligence of man, which is individualized, but not in matter. Soul can never reflect anything inferior to Spirit. Man is the expression of Soul" (page 477).

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Some of the "economic royalists" have so completely forgotten their traditional role in an election campaign that some people on both sides of the political fence are wondering what the world is coming to.

Without denying that most big business men threw their contribution money behind Republican and conservative Democratic candidates, one may be permitted a lifted eyebrow at the fact that this group failed to contribute a united chorus of shrill cries of alarm. Among those who failed to hit the dolorous tune customary on such occasions were:

Chairman Alfred P. Sloan of General Motors, who in 1936 gave $50,000 to the Republicans and attacked the New Deal vigorously, and more recently predicted that the wage-hour act would bring disaster. Not long before election this year, Mr. Sloan publicly announced General Motors was putting 35,000 men back to work and that prospects looked rather rosy.

Chairman C. E. Groesbeck of the huge Electric Bond & Share Company, chief legal target of the holding company act, who announced a week before election a rapprochement between government and the utility industry which indicated an era of peace and co-operation.

President William Knudsen of General Motors, who announced publicly at the same time a "great improvement" in labor relations, and the expectation that those relations would be increasingly peaceful.

In this same period arch-individualist Henry Ford began informally negotiating with the C. I. O. As a group, the other captains of industry failed to join in any loud clamor against the New Deal.

As to the significance of all this: the best advice is to wait and see.

Certain New Dealers who have been trying to "build a bridge" between industry and government with the aid of a few liberal business men will tell you that it presages a period in which business men will be less hostile to the New Deal than professionally-hostile politicians.

Republican Chairman John Hamilton says the certainty of Republican victories caused business men to improve and is responsible for business men's hosannas.

Another idea: big business men are more conciliatory toward Roosevelt, hoping that compromise on their part will make him more conciliatory toward them, and Roosevelt feels more conciliatory toward business men for the same reason, and because of his conception of national unity in the face of a threatening foreign situation.

And that would be something!

THROUGHOUT the campaign no candidate appears to have equaled the record for sincerity and honesty established by Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska in 1936. Times were tense and a reporter came along to ask him what he thought Lincoln would do if he were alive and still President of the United States.

"I think Lincoln would be just like I am," Norris replied. "He wouldn't know what the hell to do!"

SPORT GLANCES By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK.—Al Hostak rejected a Madison Square Garden match with Freddie Apostoli that might have drawn $100,000.

Instead, his handlers carted tough and cagey old Solly Krieger across the continent.

It was just another instance of fight managers outsmarting themselves.

Hostak's board of strategy obviously picked Krieger for a setup. So did the Seattle customers, for the scrap drew only $16,000.

And Krieger fooled everybody by dealing the 22-year-old Hostak a beating from which he may never recover—hammering the Slav into a hospital . . . winning the world middleweight championship after 13 years of ring effort . . . at the age of 29.

Now Krieger gets the winner of the return Apostoli-Young Corbett III encounter of Nov. 18 at the Garden, Jan. 13, and the survivor will be recognized as the titleholder by even the New York Boxing Commission.

In pasting Hostak, Krieger belted another "another Stanley Ketchel" into the ranks of the ordinary.

KRIEGER long has been a spoiler. He checked the hopes of several aspiring youngsters.

Al Quill and Billy Conn of Pittsburgh, George Black of Milwaukee, Walter Woods, and Harry Balsamo. The latter, a New York subway brakeman, also was "another Stanley Ketchel."

The new champion is most unpredictable in harness . . . looks like a world-beater on occasion . . . but is inclined to be an in-and-outer. He has had about 75 fighta . . . lost about 10. He has never been on the deck.

Krieger was born in Brooklyn March 28, 1911. He played second base, guard in football, an excellent in basketball and soccer while a student at Eastern District High School there.

Solly broke in as an amateur boxer at 16. His father, a tailor, objected, so the youngster performed under the name of Danny Auerbach.

TWO years ago it appeared as though Krieger might reach the top. Conn and Black were repelled and Balsamo dropped like a broken airplane. But Apostoli bested Krieger twice . . . took a decision and was credited with a technical knockout when the Flatbush Fusilier suffered badly cut lip while in front. Krieger launched another winning streak, but was repulsed by Gler Lee at the Garden in May.

Krieger is married and has a 3-year-old son. Outside of the profession he is quiet, unassuming, shy, and likable.

He ran for city council in New York last fall . . . missed out.

Solly Krieger is a politician, but he didn't talk himself into the smashing victory over Al Hostak, who learned about leather from him.

HAVING completely run out of white challengers, there was nothing else for Joe Louis to do but agree to fight John Henry Lewis in his first start of the new year . . . at the Garden, Jan. 27.

The heavyweight champion would have been open to criticism for the first time had he denied a member of his own race the opportunity that was given him.

DRIVE TO GET MONEY FOR A SCOUT CABIN

At an enthusiastic meeting, held in the office of the Chamber of Commerce Saturday morning, ways and means of raising $1,000 for construction of a Boy Scout cabin were outlined, with a drive being planned for the latter part of the week.

Small sacks of cement, as tokens that the wearer has donated $1 to the cabin fund, will be sold by a committee of business men, beginning Wednesday. The drive will last through Saturday of next week.

It was pointed out that a cabin, worth $7,000, would be built, as all needed now was $1,000 with which to purchase cement, doors, windows, roofing and other materials needed.
