Cut In Employment Funds Is Deplored

For months this column has been shouting more or less audibly for a budget slash in federal expenditures in the direction of matching outgo with income. At last a budget slash has come through—and such a slash!

By some hocus-pocus or mix-up the Social Security Board at Washington decrees that the Texas State Employment Service shall not spend more than 10 per cent of current receipts on its current activities.

The announcement is effective this quarter, although the announcement comes after one month is clean gone and another month partly gone. The saving for the whole quarter is retroactive, so to speak, and what has already been spent in accordance with the budget formerly approved must now be deducted from the expenditures for the balance of the three months. It means the discharging of a lot of men, the closing of some parts of the service and so on.

You have to get some idea of how the service works to understand the peculiar results of this "saving." The service does two sorts of work. It takes claims for unemployment compensation and it takes applications for job placement at the same time. The relationship is, of course, that when an unemployed person drawing compensation for being unemployed is given a job, then his dole stops.

The service interviews unemployed people, lists their qualifications and then sends out men to try to sell employers on hiring these people! When somebody is hired in this way that somebody comes of the unemployment dole.

Now the effect of the ruling from Washington is that the force will be so reduced that it will have to quit, to a considerable extent, its efforts at getting jobs for jobless people and spend all its time taking applications of jobless people for the unemployment dole! And this is the economy that the Social Security Board orders put into effect.

Bear in mind that every job found for a jobless person under this service is a bona fide job in which the wages are paid by a private employer and not by the government. Every person so hired means just one person less on relief, on WPA or on the unemployment dole.

In addition to the number of persons placed by this service in commerce and industry in Texas perhaps twice that number of clients are given at least temporary work on Texas farms. Texas farmers who once had to take long trips and haul to their farms cotton pickers, fruit pickers and so on, now are able to get help at current wages through this service. And this is done although agricultural employers pay no unemployment tax to support the service.

The saving that the Social Security Board demands will probably stop the employment service now rendered to agriculture altogether.

Washington means well in all this. In some states, where the industrial population is large, the tax paid in is huge and the cities where jobs abound are close together. 10 per cent of receipts would be more than enough—much more than enough—to carry on this service. But in states where the population is largely rural (with no tax receipts from rural employers), placement of jobless people in jobs calls for more than 10 per cent of what is taken in. You can see that, of course.

You can see that, because you know Texas and Texas people and Texas geography. But Washington can't see it.

And Washington blunders along trying to run everything from the range of a thousand miles or so.

The records show that for the last fiscal year the Texas State Employment Service placed a third of a million persons in jobs. Agricultural jobs filled run to still higher figure and are, of course, in addition. A reasonable conclusion is that from half a million to three quarters of a million job-filling services of this sort will be performed next year, if this cut does not take place.

The cut is 16 per cent. It is estimated that it will curtail service about 66 2-3 per cent, due to the fact that the work of receiving and forwarding claims for unemployment benefits must be handled first of all, and this work will crowd out the other.

It is a curious economy that uses unemployment insurance, so-called, to endow unemployment, rather than to end it. Don't you think so?—Dallas News.

Chairman Named of The Rural Relations Group of the ETCC

LONGVIEW, Texas—F. D. Perkins of McKinney has been named chairman of the rural relations and planning committee of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce.

"This is one of the most important committee assignments in the chamber program of work," Paul T. Sanderson, president of the organization, said. "The committee will bring about a close working relationship between town and country in the interest of community programs looking to mutually bettering conditions for all."

James E. Old of Winnsboro and S. C. Wilson of Huntsville were named committee vice chairmen. Other members are Frank Briggs, Dallas; W. S. Hanley, Tyler; Elmer P. Johnson, Austin; Henry Ross, College Station; L. I. Griffin, Corsicana; Dr. J. M. Travis, Jacksonville; C. B. Barclay, Commerce; N. G. Watts, Naples; H. A. King, Atlanta; John D. Rogers, Navasota; Noble Davis, Henderson; Jack Shelton, College Station; T. O. Richardson, Dallas; Ralph W. Moore, Granger; C. H. Figg, Waxahatchie; Rufus Paschie, Mexia; P. H. Powell, Woodville; and A. E. Hickerson, Conroe.

Would Anybody Have Any Objections?

It Takes Lots and Lots of Food For A&M Dining Room

COLLEGE STATION, Texas—Here's a rough idea of how much food 2885 Aggies consume in one day. They eat approximately 2,000 pounds of potatoes, 190 pounds of butter, 325 loaves of bread, 2700 pounds of meat, 12 cases of eggs, 600 pounds of carrots, or any green vegetables, 9600 hot cakes, 500 pies a meal, 9000 rolls and 9000 biscuits. Ice cream is served every day and around 3200 individual cups are served. When chicken is served usually on Sunday, about 1400 pounds is required. For Thanksgiving dinner, the Cadets will eat around 2000 pounds of turkey. Milk consumed amounts to about 6000 half-pint bottles a day. Milk, ice cream and butter used by the Mess Hall comes from the A. M. College creamery. The A. & M. College mess hall is the largest single unit dining hall in the world. Although only about 2900 eat in the mess hall at the present time, 5000 could be accommodated if the occasion demanded it. The mess hall is striving constantly for economy in the feeding of the students. For example, last year it cost approximately 81 cents a day for a student to eat; this year it is costing the student only 69 cents a day for food, or about 23 cents a meal.

ing will be the largest in the organization's history. He pointed out that wives of members have been invited specifically for the first time, and that extensive plans have been made for their entertainment. The convention will open with a breakfast for directors and officers at 8 a. m., followed by a business meeting at 10 a. m. A luncheon and football game will occupy the afternoon. Lt. Governor-Elect Coke Stevenson of Junction will be principal speaker at the evening banquet. Election of officers and final reports will take place at that session. Speakers at the luncheon will include Gerald C. Mann, attorney general-elect; Co. Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission; C. V. Terrell, retiring railroad commissioner; Lon A. Smith, commission member, and G. A. (Jerry) Sadler, railroad commissioner-elect. Members of the state senate and house of representatives have been invited to attend the luncheon and banquet.

BEAGLE HOUND

English fox-hound in miniature. Solid and big for his inches, true beagle has the long-wearing look of the hound that can last in the chase. One of the oldest breeds in history—close to the original breed of hounds. U.S. standards specify 15 inches maximum height—any true hound color acceptable.

HE'S GIVING HIS NERVES A REST....

AND SO IS HE

The frazzling pace of these fast-moving times doesn't mean a thing in the life of the dog. Although his complex, high-keyed nervous system closely resembles our own, when the dog feels his nerves tire he settles down—relaxes—as the beagle hound above is doing. That is instinctive with the dog. We are not so likely to break nerve tension before it gets our nerves upset. Ambition and determination push us on and on...past the warning stage of nerve strain. Will-power silences the instinct to pause and rest. And yet jittery, ragged nerves are a distinct handicap. Don't let your nerves get that way. Learn to ease the strain occasionally. Let up—light up a Camel! It's such a pleasant way to rest your nerves—a brief recess, mellow with the pleasure of Camel's mildness and ripe, rich taste. Yes, no wonder smokers say Camel's costlier tobaccos are so soothing to the nerves.

SERIAL STORY LOVERS AWEIGH

BY BETTY WALLACE

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JUDY A. LOTT—admiral's daughter. She forced a choice between two navy suitors.

YESTERDAY: At Marvel's wedding, Judy sees the good-looking blond man who had attended her at the restaurant that day.

CHAPTER XIII
"DON'T be a fool!" Jack whispered roughly. His hands closed around her arm, in a vise-like grip.

Judy came to herself with a sick jerk. How could she have made such a fool of herself? Her eyes fastened on the bride, on Dwight, on the face of Commander Hedges, who was the Texarkana's chaplain.

The solemn words of the marriage service rang through the hushed church. "In sickness and in health . . . to love and to cherish . . . for richer for poorer . . . for better for worse . . ."

Dwight was putting the ring on Marvel's finger. "With this token . . ." Judy bit her lip.

And then it was all over. The bride and groom were going up the aisle. Outside, steel flashing in the sunlight, there was an arch of swords. The ushers, standing straight and all, with their swords uplifted.

There was a wedding luncheon at the Coronado Hotel. Judy schooled herself sternly. She must get through it! Dwight was married now. Married. She wanted to cry.

Long dining room was mobbed. There was a lace covered table, and Diane whispering, "It's her own cloth, and her own silver. Isn't it suspicious?" Rows of repousse forks, heavy silver platters. A frosted wedding cake as big as a punchbowl, with a ribboned wedding bell hanging on its side.

Jack whistled. "I said brown, didn't I?" He added, "I'm hungry. She must have imported a chef from New York. There's little I recognize."

But though he brought Judy a plate loaded with dainties, she couldn't eat. People were toasting the bride, pressing around her. Judy thought desperately, "She won't miss me." And yet she'd have to convey her best wishes. She'd have to look at Dwight and say, "I hope you'll be very happy."

Diane and Bill found them, and Diane said, "Boy, this reminds me of the day Bill and I sneaked around the corner and got married!" She laughed. "He took off on a flight about two hours later, didn't you, darling?"

It was not that they hadn't seen weddings before as beautifully managed as this one. It was simply that everything here shrieked of Marvel's millions. There was no homeliness about this wedding—no dear, heartfelt tears, nothing that, except for the wedding bell on the cake, would have distinguished this opulent lunch from a thousand other fashionable lunches.

Bill said reflectively, "When he—id, 'With this ring I thee endow,' I was reminded of the old one about the seaman first who married a millionaire's daughter. Right at that part . . . of the sailors who'd come to the wedding yelled 'There goes that guy's seabag!'"

Diane touched Judy's arm. "Come on, let's get it over with." The four of them—Bill and Jack and Diane and Judy—moved forward among the laughing guests. Judy almost upset a cup of coffee someone carelessly held in an outstretched hand. "Sorry," she mumbled. She glanced up. It was that man again!

The bride's uncle, a stout, ruddy man in a morning coat, was talking to Admiral Alcott. Dwight was standing beside his bride, obviously impatient. Judy's heart sank. He couldn't wait to get her away from the people—to have her alone. The memory of his kisses on her own mouth was bitter.

"But she was the first of the four to say, 'I hope you'll be very happy, Marvel. You were the loveliest bride I ever saw.'"

"Just like a movie wedding," Diane was murmuring. "Darling, it was gorgeous!"

"The best of everything," said Jack, a trifle stiffly. But Bill Bell's laughter boomed out and he cried, "Hey, don't I get to kiss the bride? I thought it was always done."

Marvel's eyes flashed. "Come on," she said, and lifted her face to Bill's.

"Boy!" said Bill. The uncle rocked with laughter. Even Judy's father grinned.

TWO middle-aged women in dark lace, who had sat on the bride's side of the church, came up then. "Well, honey, it was too perfect! Oh, darling, I hope you'll be so happy." "Honey, you're the bride of the century. May you always have the best of everything."

"Thanks, Mrs. Kingsley. Thank you, Mrs. Drake," said Marvel. "This is our chance," Diane whispered to Judy, and they withdrew from the group of people around the bride.

"Are they going away on a honeymoon?" Bill asked. "That boy looked nervous."

"They're going somewhere, no doubt," said Diane. "But Mrs. Lane told me Marvel wanted to go to Honolulu and Dwight couldn't get the leave. Not that it wasn't coming to him, but he told Captain Lane he didn't have the money and would rather have the leave later."

"She's got the money," said Bill matter-of-factly.

"Darling, would you have liked me to take you to Honolulu for our honeymoon?" Diane bantered.

"We did all right," her young husband grinned.

"I shouldn't have thought Campbell'd be proud that way," Jack said.

"That's unkind!" Judy snapped. "Anyhow," Diane concluded, "He wouldn't. He's got sense enough to know how it would look. I can see right now what a happy married life they'll have, with her wanting to splurge and him trying not to be a naval sigilo."

"I sound like a group of old maids—gossiping old maids!" said Judy definitely ending the conversation. But in her heart, she was thinking, "It's true. It's true. He'll never be happy with her."

Pink Bollworm A Serious Threat To South's Cotton

McALLEN, Texas. — Partial economic ruin of the South's cotton industry by pink bollworm is visualized by federal and state entomologists unless effective measures are adopted to curb infestation in Texas and Arizona.

The pink bollworm, which feeds exclusively on cotton bolls, was discovered in the Lower Rio Grande valley only two years ago in cotton gin trash. It had spread from the Big Bend country of Texas.

Extensive precautions were taken to eradicate the pest, but the bollworm attacked growing stalks during the past season in Kleberg, Nueces and San Patricio counties, outside the valley.

South Texas farmers cleared their fields of cotton stalks under supervision of D. M. McEachern, head of the federal-state quarantine office for the valley.

State Entomologist J. M. Del Curto of Austin said that the Rio Grande valley cotton industry "could not stand a 30 per cent increase in the cost of production, cut staple and stained lint — all eventualities of infested areas."

Del Curto pointed out that unless farmers follow federal regulations for cleaning every field of stalks—only breeding places of the pink bollworm—establishment of a "non-cotton zone" might result.

Entomologists say that the bollworm is one of the seven most destructive pests known to agriculture and is one of the most difficult to eradicate because of its life cycle. Seriousness of the threat to southern agriculture is indicated by stern efforts of the government to eradicate the pest.

Sun Bowl Seeking Teams for Contest

EL PASO, Tex.—Officials of the annual Sun Bowl New Year's Day football game have sent out "feelers" to leading teams in the Border Conference, whose champion is host contender in the classic.

No teams have yet been selected for the contest, which is outstanding event of the annual Sun Carnival and draws thousands of visitors to El Paso.

Jack Jago, ticket chairman, said that seat sales for the game already had passed 3,000. Enlargement of the College of Mines stadium will provide a total of 13,500 seats for the 1939 game.

Texas Tech and West Virginia were teams in the 1938 event.

"Family Farmers" to Have a Luncheon

TYLER, Tex.—The family of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Winston of Whitehouse, near here, will be inducted into the "East Texas Family of Master Farmers" in ceremonies here.

Winners of the Master Farmer award will stage a "reunion" luncheon at noon. The Texas Extension Service, East Texas Chamber of Commerce and the 1938 Chamber of Commerce have cooperatively planned the affair.

A demonstration of the Winston "master farm" will be staged during the afternoon, when the public may inspect the plant of the family.

A banquet in the evening will conclude the ceremonies.

In San Francisco, California. They expect to be gone until the first of January.

Nearly 1 1/2 of telephone expenses in Texas goes for wages . . .

Out of more than 23 1/2 million dollars spent by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company to provide telephone service in Texas last year, about 10 million dollars . . . nearly half . . . went for wages. Wages to 9,000 telephone people, who in turn spent most of that money in Texas.

Telephone wages play no small part in keeping the state's business moving. And by assuring telephone users of the services of skilled, efficient people, they play a large part in giving you good telephone service at reasonable cost. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

NOTICE OF HEARING to APPROPRIATE PUBLIC WATERS of the STATE OF TEXAS

Notice is hereby given, to whom concerned, that the CITY OF RANGER, TEXAS, the postoffice address of which is Ranger, Texas, did on the 21st day of October, A. D. 1938, file its application in the office of the Board of Water Engineers for the State of Texas, in which it applies for a permit to appropriate of the unappropriated waters of the State of Texas, from the Russell Creek, a tributary of the Brazos River, in Eastland county, Texas, not to exceed five hundred twenty-five (625) acre-feet of water per annum, for a City Water Supply, said water to be impounded in a reservoir created by the construction of a dam, said dam to be located at a point which bears S. 15° W. a distance of 900 feet from the S. E. corner of the A. Bradley Original Survey on the West bank of the Russell Creek, in Eastland County, Texas, distant in a northerly direction from Ranger, Texas, about four miles.

You are hereby further notified that the said City of Ranger, Texas, proposes to construct a dam, to be of compacted earth 40 feet in height, 1,400 feet in length, having a bottom width of 235 feet, and a top width of 20 feet, thus creating a reservoir having an average width of 1,700 feet, length of impounded water 5,100 feet, average depth of stored water 10 feet, and having a storage capacity of 2,000 acre-feet, and to impound therein and divert therefrom by means of a pumping plant not to exceed 525 acre-feet of water per annum for the purpose of a City Water Supply.

A hearing on the application of the said City of Ranger, Texas, will be held by the Board of Water Engineers for the State of Texas, in the office of the Board at Austin, Texas, on Monday, November 28th, A. D. 1938, beginning at ten o'clock A. M., at which time and place all parties interested may appear and be heard. Such hearing will be continued from time to time, and from place to place, if necessary, until such determination has been made relative to said application as the said Board of Water Engineers may deem right, equitable and proper.

Given under and by virtue of an order of the Board of Water Engineers for the State of Texas, at the office of the said Board at Austin, Texas, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1938.

C. S. CLARK,
A. H. DUNLAP,
JOHN W. FRITCHETT,
Board of Water Engineers.

Attest:
A. W. McDONALD, Secretary.
Oct. 31, Nov. 7-14-21, 1938.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Circumulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Circumulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germs laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Circumulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Circumulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Circumulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)
