CHARGE CISCO PRINTER WITH DEATH AT BAIRD

BAIRD, Nov. 22.—Charged with murdering his mother, Mrs. Annie Pretz, 45, Floyd Pretz, 20-year-old Cisco linotype operator, was being held without bond in Callahan county jail here awaiting action of the 42nd district grand jury which reconvened this morning. Pretz was denied bail by Justice of the Peace G. H. Corn after he waived examining trial when arraigned before the justice Monday afternoon. The denial came after County Attorney F. E. Mitchell presented a written confession signed by Pretz in which he allegedly admitted shooting his mother with a .22 caliber rifle. The statement, third obtained since investigation began last Thursday morning, was made to District Attorney J. R. (Bob) Black Sunday afternoon. The district attorney said the first statement was that Mrs. Pretz accidentally shot herself in the kitchen of her home here. That was at the inquest conducted by Justice Corn the morning following her death last Wednesday night. Black said the youth later signed a confession that he shot his mother, but that it was an accident, the gun going off while he was cleaning it. Then the statement presented at Monday afternoon's hearing was made in which Pretz allegedly said the shooting was not accidental. Investigation began after officers examined the bullet wound. Deputy C. R. Nordyke said they could not figure how the woman shot herself behind the right ear with the rifle. Charges against him were prepared Saturday by Mitchell and filed Monday morning. Pretz told officers that he came from Cisco where he was employed by a daily newspaper, to the home of his mother here on the Sunshine Special, arriving about 5:30 p. m. He ate supper with his mother and she had gone to the kitchen sink when the shot was fired. She died before a doctor arrived. Two roomers in the home, Josephine Hensold and Mrs. Gus Hall, heard the shot and were summoned by the youth. They immediately called a physician. Funeral for Mrs. Pretz was held Thursday. Before her marriage she was Annie Currie and was born at Tyler, August 27, 1893. She moved with her family to the Rowden community where she was married to E. C. Pretz, who preceded her in death several years. The Pretz family had lived in Baird about 12 years. Prior to that time they lived on a farm and moved to town when the late Mr. Pretz became engaged in the oil business. Survivors are two sons, Floyd and his older brother, Clarence Pretz, who is in the medical corps of the United States navy and now stationed on Samoa Islands. He was valedictorian of Baird high school in 1933. Floyd Pretz was equally as brilliant, his classmates say, but hardly as serious about studies. He was graduated from Baird high school in the spring of 1936. While in school he made a remarkable record, never having an average lower than 90 in any subject. During his freshman year all average grade of 96 was made, records in the high school here reveal. Young Pretz was especially talented with the English language, having an average of 93 for four years. Following graduation he became an apprentice linotype operator in the local weekly and quickly mastered that work. While only 20 years old, he was a crack operator. Although he was employed in Cisco, Pretz returned here one night a week to set type for the local paper.

THREATS HOLD UP PLANS FOR WORLD PEACE

Europe forgot plans for peace today in a new outburst of threats and counter-threats. Germany, angered by British plans to settle Jewish refugees in pre-war colonies of Germany, now mandates to Great Britain, threatened to recall Herbert Von Dirksen, ambassador to London, although whether such a step would be taken remained uncertain. Italy's press opened a new attack on the United States, arguing that: 1. The wealthy democratic countries detect Jews as much as the totalitarian states and; 2. The United States intends to rule South America economically. In Central Europe a war of words between Germany and Hungary assumed greater importance in the struggle over Rutenia, eastern Czech province, and one of the Nazi avenues for eastward expansion. By radio and newspapers Germany continued warnings against any attempt by Hungary to create a pretext for armed intervention. Hungary, meanwhile, ordered expulsion of Czechs from the territory she occupied after dismemberment of Czechoslovakia. The Czechs ordered confiscation of Hungarian property in its borders. Hungarian dispatches have reported serious disorders and fighting in Rutenia. Germany was so angered by British plans for settling Jewish refugees in former German African possessions, it was believed the Reich would refuse to permit Jews to leave for such destinations. The Nazis appeared certain to prevent refugees from taking funds with them. In Berlin a United States envoy delivered a new note to the German government, asking assurances that recent decrees excluding Jews from business in the Reich would not be applied to American citizens.

Australia Cold To Refugee Aid

SYDNEY, Australia.—The Australian government is taking measures to prevent entrance of large numbers of refugees from Europe into the country. Government officials state that thousands of refugees, in defiance of the immigration laws, are seeking to book passages on vessels visiting Australia in the hope that they will be permitted to settle in the country without obtaining a landing permit. New instructions to federal officials in Australia and in London will require persons with return tickets who are suspected of having intentions to settle in Australia to obtain, in addition, landing permits. Cases where travelers with tourist tickets who have obtained them with the acknowledged purpose of trying, on arrival here, to remain in Australia, are before the department of interior. Although most of the refugees arriving and seeking to book passages are Jews, the government's move was not made on racial or religious grounds. Hon. James McEwan, minister for the interior, explained. He said that in the operation of the system regulating the admission of white aliens, the government did not discriminate as to nationality, race or religion, but considered every application on its merits. Nevertheless, evidence of the stricter control of Jewish immigration is seen in a warning sent to all shipping companies in the commonwealth by the department of the interior.

The captured man was thought Pose was wounded in an exchange of shots near Grand, Jack county, with Detectives H. J. Gob and Ed Smith. The convicts rode away from the farm Thursday on stolen cars. Nix was serving sentences ranging 10 years from Ector and Green counties on charges of robbery. Defense of Democracy Begins at Home

While we are talking about defending American democracy against the rise of the totalitarian states, it would be a fine thing for us to spend a little time pondering over the federal court's ruling in regard to Mayor Hague's rule in Jersey City.

The court's ruling itself is familiar enough. So, unfortunately, is Mayor Hague's habit of bouncing out of town all speakers, organizers or leaders whose ideas don't happen to look American to him.

We make a great mistake if we assume that it takes uniformed storm troops, egomaniac spellbinders and an involved, hysterical ideology to make a dictatorship. A rising dictatorship acquires those things along the way, of course, but it starts with something much simpler.

That something is little more than the idea that society can best protect itself by granting a hearing only to those people or organizations who say what the great majority wants to hear.

But all the rest follows from that. Shut up the unimportant soapboxer, and the next step is to shut up the man who really voices a grievance that deserves to be listened to.

The thing to remember is, democracy dies at the bottom, not at the top. Pressure from outside is not one-tenth as dangerous as decay within.

That is why this business of Mayor Hague and the U. S. court is worth a second glance.

As an individual, Hague is unimportant—just one more of the all-too-familiar municipal bosses of American political history. What matters is the fact that the kind of rule he has stood for is a blow at the very roots of our American system.

But unless we clearly recognize the danger, the court ruling will not do much good. In the long run, our democracy won't be saved by court rulings any more than by battleships and airplanes.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace sticks doggedly to his espousal of a "two-price" system for agricultural products with which poor people are inadequately supplied.

He talks mostly about cotton mattresses, but his mind concentrates on "two-price" milk.

From the beginning of the New Deal there has been vague discussion in AAA and the Department of Agriculture of making milk a "public utility."

Wallace's ideas don't carry him that far, but he does contemplate cheap distribution for families which can't buy at regular prices—plus a larger market for farmers who often peddle their surplus milk for a fourth that price.

It was on Wallace's order that the Department press service significantly mimeographed copies of a Consumers' Guide article on operation of the New York system through which poor families buy milk at 8 cents a quart.

Evidence is indisputable that low income families don't get enough milk and that with each reduction of a cent a quart these families buy more.

The nutritionists say adults should have a pint a day, children nearly a quart. (Including equivalents such as cheese and butter.)

All surveys have shown consumption far below this standard. In one city 50 per cent of the families bought more milk when sales in gallon jugs began to cut the price from 10 to 7 1/2 cents a quart.

In another a 2-cent price cut meant a 14 1/2 per cent increase in consumption by low income families, 11.1 per cent in the intermediate group and 6.2 per cent in the top group. A Boston survey showed half the families on relief buying no milk. When milk was given them the relief families bought just as much milk as before but increased their consumption from 13,000 to 39,000 quarts a day.

SEEKING to define "professional" employees, as required under the wage-hour act, lawyers of the Wages and Hours Division agreed the word was "impossible of definition." Nevertheless, there was the law and it was further agreed that if no definition were made the omission would be equivalent to saying there was no such thing as a "professional."

For protection of employers who hired "professionals," a definition must be made. The job of drafting it was handed to 27-year-old Joe Rauh, brilliant Harvard Law School graduate who served the late Supreme Court Justice Cardozo as secretary.

Rauh protested on grounds of extreme youth but was overruled. (Another lawyer, asked to define "area of production" as required by the act, struggled with it a few days and resigned.)

The result was a four-part "definition" which in effect said a professional was an employee qualified as to knowledge—including something beyond academic education—and doing work not entirely of a routine nature. At a conference of employers and labor representatives called by the Business Advisory Council the employers said this was fine and the labor people said it was "too ambiguous." Rauh and his associates promise further separate definitions for various classes of employees.

27 Shopping Days Till Christmas

LOOKING BACK TO CHRISTMAS 27 YEARS AGO—Mother would have been delighted with a huge ribboned hat or a Fleur de Lis watch for Christmas.

The Montessori teaching method and Synge's play, "The Playboy of the Western World," had everybody all agog. Italy was conquering Tripoli and Chinese rebels were fighting at Hankow.

You would have needed $6000 to buy an Alco Six for Christmas.

DEER SEASON FATAL TO 15 MEN

By United Press PORTLAND, Ore.—Oregon's deer hunting season reached an all time high this year in casualties to hunters. Fifteen were killed.

Business Men Are In Favor of Boy Scout Cabin Plan

The following are some of the expressions, obtained at random throughout the business section of the town, showing the reaction of the business men toward the proposed Boy Scout cabin and the method of obtaining the $1,000 necessary to secure a $7,000 building in The Willows park program.

Colonel Brasher—"I think this is one of the most worthy projects upon which Ranger has become interested in recent years. The Boy Scout work builds character and future lives for generations to come. These boys, who will be the leaders of the future generations, deserve every consideration that can be given them for the future good of the town, the county and the state."

H. C. Wilkerson—"I think the project works in nicely with the park program toward which the city is now working. The building will be a valuable asset to the scouts, to the city of Ranger and to the park."

J. F. Killingsworth—"I think the project is a very worthy one, and I like the method of obtaining money through the sale of miniature cement sacks. Boy Scout work should interest everyone, and I believe that the cooperation of the entire town can be enlisted."

K. E. Ambrose—"The city commission is doing everything it can for labor and I believe this is one of the most constructive plans that has been worked out in some time. The whole project deserves the wholehearted cooperation of everyone in town, and I believe it will meet with ready support of everyone."

SERIAL STORY

LOVERS AWEIGH

BY BETTY WALLACE

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JUDY ALCOTT—admiral's daughter. She faced a choice between two navy suitors.

JUDY saw Jack Hanley almost every night. They played monopoly at the Bell's house.

Then the Campbells returned. And to everyone's incredulous surprise, Marvel leased a house close to the station.

The Navy was soon to be undecieved about Marvel's house. Small it might be, but she was bent on making it perfect.

Judy tried not to be curious, not to want to see Dwight. And then the invitation came. A housewarming. Judy turned it over in her fingers.

Judy thought of the meticulous Navy gradings. The numbers that even in officers of the same rank determined once and forever who stood on whom first on arriving.

at a new station. Who took command in a group, who sat nearest the head of the table, even though all were of the same rank.

Jack's career had not been so cut and dried. His choice of flying, his success in it, removed him from the groove.

Her mother came in and found her still with the card in her fingers. Mrs. Alcott did not comment about the card.

"I expect the new house is very beautiful." "Am curious," Judy admitted.

At that, she might not have gone if Dwight hadn't come to see her one evening. He explained that Marvel was tied up in a beauty salon downtown.

"Yes?" "He floundered. He said at last, 'Marvel—well—she doesn't like me to tell her what to do. She's proud, and she's had so much social experience. But of course, it isn't Navy—she doesn't understand.' His eyes brightened.

"Look here, Judy, I know I've got a colossal nerve, but I wish you'd hint to Marvel that we—well—she—ought to call around—you know what I mean. I'm afraid the brass hats are going to think she's got a healthy courage, asking them to her house first."

Judy said slowly, "I don't see how I can tell Marvel anything. It's her own business. And she—you'll pardon me, Dwight, but—I don't think she likes me very well."

"Nonsense! Of course she likes you! She's headstrong, used to her own way. I guess 'm a blundering ass sometimes and she doesn't want anyone laying down the law to her. If there were some older woman—your mother, maybe."

Judy looked back at him levelly. "Mother would never dream of it, Dwight. I wouldn't ask her." She flushed. He looked uncomfortable.

His brow furrowed. "I hate having her get off on the wrong foot and maybe never fitting in." "That's a matter of temperament, isn't it?" And Marvel's nature was to scintillate. To be the Queen Bee. There were no Queen Bees in the Navy. Just admirals, wives, and by the time they got to be the wife of an admiral, they had learned much hard common sense.

Judy suppressed a smile. "Marvel's not quite the type for recipes and bridge games, Dwight." But then, looking at him, feeling again the ache of loss, she softened. She was a triple-starred, stupid fool, but she couldn't keep herself from saying, "All right, Dwight. I'll do my best. I'll try to talk to her."

Kokomo Club Wins FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS By Blosser

The Kokomo Boys 4-H club near Gorman, is awarded state honors by Extension leaders in the current national 4-H program on social progress. The club's report was compiled by members and their leader, L. R. Higgenbottom, assisted by the county's office.

The club, which has a membership of 14 boys, won on the following record: Members gave their dad a 4-H club banner; together with Kokomo 4-H girls, presented three plays; organized a string band; every member of the club made at least five public appearances during 1938; listened to radio programs of worth; studied phonographic recordings of world music classics; read fine literature; wrote for newspapers; made down payment on a car for a young minister; supervised building by the N. Y. A. of the only 4-H clubhouses in Texas; made got a portable sawmill and club most of the lumber from donated native timber; other materials were paid for by the boys and girls; supervised landscaping of school grounds, painted and repaired the school house and built a new fence around the school grounds; helped cut wood for the Kokomo school and church buildings; assisted in cleaning off an old cemetery; planted seed for peach and pecan trees in land donated by club leader; assisted farmers in tearing down an old store building in Eastland; cut cedar saplings and cured them out for building furniture for clubhouse; held two 4-H picnics and 12 educational trips; two of club's members designated among 100 outstanding 4-H boys in state; every member carried on a worthwhile demonstration.

As state winner the club is given the choice of a $100 radio set or a victrola and selected records worth $100. In the competition with other state-winning clubs for southern sectional honors for trips to the 17th National 4-H Club Congress the award went to an Oklahoma club. National honors were assigned an Oregon group which receives trips to New York, for two members and local leader.

MARSHALL GOLDBERG would play professional next fall for $15,000. And Pittsburgh's All-American "acc" would be worth it, especially in New York, where sport-loving cloak-and-suiters are without an athletic idol. Goldberg would be a wiser, better investment than Whizzer White at the figure. Mad Marshall can do more things on a football field than either Benny Friedman or Harry Korman, the Michigan passers who did so well in Manhattan. The West Virginia lad is built for the money game, too. The trailing Chicago Cardinals would have first shot at Goldberg under the draft rules of the National League, however.

MANY mittens had to wait long for their opportunity. Of Har' Willis and Peter Jackson, for example. Joe Louis is only 12 days younger than John Henry Lewis, but the heavyweight champion did not launch his professional career until three years after the 175-pound leader had been scrapping topknotchers. John Henry has been subjected to much more wear and tear than Joe—a difference that may well be added to Louis' advantage on the scales when they get together at Madison Square Garden, Jan. 27.

Lewis undoubtedly has shipped, and never was a puncher. On the other hand, Louis never was as terrific as he was last summer, when he stiffened showman Max Schmeling with his first flurry of punches. Louis is running some risk, of course—and indoors, where he can't possibly get all the money a defeated heavyweight ruler is entitled to Louis has all the boxing answers. But Louis' handlers figure that the Brown Bomber, one of the hardest and fastest punching big fellows who ever had gloves laced on his hands, ought to be able to toe Lewis, who the slow moving and thinking Isidore Gostanaga had on the deck and in a bad way in Detroit not so long ago.

HOW would they weight Seabiscuit and War Admiral now in a handicap? "Seabiscuit gave Ligarotti 15 pounds and defeated him a nose," replies William P. Kyne, California racing magnate, "so he certainly should carry 15 pounds more than War Admiral now that he has beaten him by four lengths." But Seabiscuit and War Admiral probably will not meet in a handicap, and Trainer Tom Smith would scratch the Biscuit as fast as the son of Hard Tack can run if asked to give Man of War's kid 15 pounds. Ed Soule, presiding steward at southern California's Hollywood Park and one of America's foremost turf authorities, believes Seabiscuit is faster than War Admiral, and "would have won the match race at Fimlico regardless of mistakes which he contends both jockeys made." He says George Woolf's error was in whipping Seabiscuit at the break, explaining that the Charles S. Howard five-year-old surely would have gone one second faster had he been permitted to settle into his stride naturally. Charley Kurtsinger's blunder was in whipping War Admiral on the back stretch and not restraining him until he turned for home.

WASHINGTON LETTER

RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—The Joe Kennedy-for-President-in-1940 movement suffered somewhat from the Munich settlement in Europe.

Kennedy is being made to be some of the onus of his close association with Chamberlain, who is not a popular figure in Washington at the moment. But certain top men at the State Department insist Kennedy did a first-class job reporting London developments during the crisis.

If Kennedy seemed always at Chamberlain's elbow, that was the best place to be, they argue, in a situation in which Chamberlain was certainly the key man. Kennedy was sure England and France were going to war, and the best State Department judgment now is that he was right—up to the time Hitler agreed to a last-minute conference before marching.

Secretary Hull and his aides don't know just what was in the latter part of Chamberlain's speech to Parliament which was interrupted by the Hitler message. But they know enough to be convinced Chamberlain was about to say the next development would be war.

If that view is correct, it refutes the contention that it was "all a frameup" between Hitler and Chamberlain, in which the latter never had any thought of fighting. The semi-official Washington conception now is that Chamberlain was originally willing to sell the Czechs a long way down the river, suddenly became appalled at new and greater demands, and was ready at the end to promise war if Hitler marched.

But in the meantime, until Kennedy gives fresh proof that he has not been taken into camp by Chamberlain or the Tory social set, the Kennedy-in-1940 boom has returned to the moth balls.

TWO BILLION DOLLARS, the amount involved in the program to expand power facilities for national defense, is a lot of money. Nobody knows whether the utilities will actually spend that much. The administration is urging them on with an eye to business recovery as well as defense. Power experts think the utilities would have spent a billion on expansion in the next two years anyway. One reason utilities executives are promising co-operation in the program, which offers low-rate RFC loans, is that otherwise the government might itself establish great power plants in the principal northeastern cities. Utilities want no more PWA subsidies for building public-owned power plants. And they realize that such a program for new publicly-owned plants to expand facilities might have easy sailing in Congress when hatched to obvious necessities of national defense. At the same time, they hope their co-operation will please Mr. Roosevelt and serve as a trading point in other negotiations with the government.
