LABOR BOARD REBUFFED BY HIGH COURT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The National Labor Relations Board today was rebuffed by the Supreme Court for the second time in two weeks.

The court declined to consider labor board appeal from a fifth circuit court of appeals decision, setting aside a board order handed down in a maritime labor controversy.

Like the Consolidated Edison case last week, in which the court set aside a portion of a board order, today's case involved a controversy between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and American Federation of Labor affiliates.

The labor board action came during a brief court day, at which Chief Justice Hughes, in an opinion which brought dissent by Justices McReynolds and Butler, held that Missouri university could admit a negro student to its law school until other law school facilities are provided for negroes.

Agreed to hear the petition of W. Lane, negro, challenging the constitutionality of Oklahoma's restriction law on grounds that it denies negroes from voting.

Allred Wants His Name to Be Known For Security Work

AUSTIN, Dec. 12.—Gov. Allred revealed today that he wants administration to be known as social security pioneer.

"The past four years might well be termed the pioneer age in social security in Texas," he said, in the first of three farewell statements to the legislature. He is leaving the state to go to New York to study his suggestions before setting here in January.

Old age assistance was the first bill tackled. Allred urged the legislature to provide for "thousands" of needy people who are on the rolls and for increased payments to many who are. He declared it the duty of the legislature to repay $1,000,000 pension money borrowed from Dallas banks.

COTTON CROP QUOTA VOTED IN THE SOUTH

COLLEGE STATION, Dec. 12.—Latest tabulations showed today that 138,946 Texas farmers voted for and 41,401 voted against continuation of the AAA cotton marketing quotas in Saturday's referendum.

The vote in favor of AAA market control was well above the necessary two-thirds majority.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Returns from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's referendum among cotton, rice and tobacco growers, promised, today, to cause a controversy in congress over the new deal crop program.

Cotton growers voted to invoke market control conditions on the 1939 crop by a smaller majority than last year. Tobacco and rice growers rejected quotas on their crops.

Administration officials claimed approval of the cotton quotas indicated support of the new deal farm program. Opponents contended, however, that results showed that farmers were "losing faith" in the program.

SANTA CLAUS WILL BE BACK ON SATURDAY

Word was received from Santa today that he would be back in Ranger Saturday, but the hour of his arrival had been changed from 9 o'clock in the morning to 10:30.

When Santa arrives he will have 100 pounds of candy to distribute to the children of Ranger and the surrounding territory, all being invited to be present for this occasion.

A large crowd is expected to be present for the second appearance of Santa, his trip to Ranger being arranged so that all of the children might visit him before lunch and leave time for their mothers to return home and prepare the noonday meal.

In addition to being present Saturday morning Santa will be back at 2 o'clock and will be on the streets and in the stores of the city all afternoon and throughout most of the evening, in order that all children may have an opportunity to talk with him.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the regular trades day events will be staged, and the two special occasions, Santa and trades day, are expected to bring in even more people than were on the streets last Saturday.

Several merchants today reported that their business was better throughout the day last Saturday than at any time in the past year, and even better than it was at this time last year. Christmas shopping is now underway throughout the city, with many making purchases and even more making selections of gifts they will purchase later in the week.

All children in this part of the country have been invited to Ranger, with their parents, next Saturday to see Santa and to visit the stores to see the wide selection of gifts available.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 12.—Outlook for a better oil year in 1939 was pictured today by Joseph Pogue, economist from New York, at today's oil proration hearing of the Texas Railroad Commission.

He advised, however, because of condition of stocks, particularly gasoline stocks, the national output should not be increased before the second quarter of 1939.

Pogue was first of many experts called here for a "showdown" on the oil situation.

Memphisite Says Weatherford and Ranger Road Good

Following is copy of a letter praising the Highway 80 short route between Ranger and Weatherford, printed recently in a Fort Worth paper:

"Editor Star-Telegram: My hat is off to the contractor who built that stretch of new road from Ranger to Weatherford, Texas; also to the county and state highway commissioners who authorized and paid for it. May their tribe increase and populate the earth mightily. What a contrast in driving over this road with its smooth glass-like finish and the ever zoom of your car every 60 feet on other hard-surfaced roads, giving you the sensation of riding in a light boat over the ocean's waves. During a trip of more than 14,000 miles that is the finest piece of road encountered; there is not a jolt in the whole of the 50-mile stretch that driving over a lead pencil would give you. Wherever possible all motorists should go over this road. They will all find a new sensation in driving; a new delight in the knowledge that such a road is possible in all states. J. D. PEACOCK."

AT WICHITA FALLS Deputy Sheriffs A. D. Carroll and L. A. White conveyed a mental patient Monday to the state hospital at Wichita Falls.

GERMAN VIEW UPON DEMANDS STILL SOUGHT

PARIS, France, Dec. 12.—Speculation arose today over the possibility that German support for Italy's campaign against France was materializing, as a result of a Berlin press demand for international control of the Suez canal.

During more than a week of fascist demonstrations for annexation of French Tunisia and Corsica, one of the most encouraging factors from the French viewpoint was the silence of Adolf Hitler.

ROME, Italy, Dec. 12.—A second point was added to unofficial Italian demands against France today, when the authoritative Journal of Italy declared that the status of the French port of Djibouti, gateway to Italian Ethiopia, must be re-examined.

Previously the newspaper, which usually speaks for Premier Mussolini, had demanded an Italian share in control of the Suez canal.

LONDON, England, Dec. 12.—Britain has no specific agreement to assist France militarily if she is attacked, Prime Minister Chamberlain declared today, in the House of Commons.

Democracy Not Inefficient as Its Critics Maintain

The commonest excuse for a dictatorship is that it gets things done. Democracy is fine in theory, say the totalitarians, but it is inefficient. It substitutes talk for action, and it just can't function properly in a complex and problem-laden world like the present.

So it is a pretty good idea to look at the record now and then and see how things do get done in a democracy. It just happens that democracy's actual record of achievement is nothing to be ashamed of; it also happens that this habit of talking everything over at great length is an essential part of the machinery by which things get done.

A recent bulletin from the Maternity Center Association of New York points out that our American democracy has been quietly but steadily solving one of its most difficult and pressing problems—the needless waste of life of mothers and children in childbirth.

For two decades or more the maternity death rate in America remained at a shockingly high level. The science of obstetrics was making rapid strides, but America's maternal death rate was the highest in the civilized world. For one reason and another, mothers simply weren't getting the care they needed.

People began calling attention to this. Newspaper and magazine articles were written, public health authorities made speeches—the democracy, in other words, began to talk. But there is one thing the critics of democracy forget to mention when they denounce this habit of talking: sooner or later, the talk has an effect. People listen to it and are stirred to action. And so it was in this case.

The medical profession studied the problem. It found that a part of the blame was its own. Poor medical training was responsible for some of these deaths; poorly managed and poorly equipped hospitals were responsible for others; shortcomings on the part of individual doctors and nurses were responsible for still others.

So the profession went to work to remedy matters. County medical societies offered special training for doctors doing obstetrics. Steps to improve the teaching of this science in the medical schools were taken. New maternity clinics were opened. The care given mothers in hospitals was improved.

What has been the result? The bulletin from the Maternity Center Association gives the answer:

"The maternity death rate is no longer stagnant. It is falling steadily, and in many states is falling rapidly. In New Jersey and Rhode Island, where this co-operation and self-criticism has reached its peak, the maternal death rate is far below the national rate."

This problem was extremely complex and involved; the last sort of problem, one would say, that a democracy could hope to handle successfully. Yet it is being solved, and the job is being done in the typical democratic manner—through self-criticism and co-operation. For democracy is not, after all, quite as inefficient and slipshod as its critics like to maintain.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

NEA Service Staff Writer

SNACKING is a cold weather sport, and a snack with character is in order late at night when the spirit of hospitality gets hungry. Snacks, although simple, should be vivacious, never dull. That's the way Kitty Carlisle feels about it—and this screen star has a few practical hints on the general subject of snacking. Here they are:

Use a narrow loaf of French bread, about a yard long, split it lengthwise, butter it and then string along each half, in the more or less concave center, hot broiled sausages, linked together. It's then cut, diagonally, in large "hunks." Serve it with Hot Dog Sauce.

To make this sauce, fry a little Hamburg steak in beef suet with garlic, dust with flour, add stock or water and cook until slightly thickened. Season with chili powder, salt and paprika to taste. Sounds like good eating after an outdoor skating party.

Shrimp Horseradish Spread

One-half pound fresh cooked shrimp, 1-2 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon pickled horseradish, salt to taste, 1-2 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon whipped cream, paprika.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Grapefruit, hot whole cereal, toasted cornmeal muffins, jelly, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: French bread with link sausages, hot dog sauce, fruit bowl, tea, milk. DINNER: Beef liver with onions, mashed potatoes, casserole tomatoes and green peppers, endive salad, apple brown Betty, coffee, milk.

Slice cooked shrimp, put through grinder. Mix with horseradish and all the other ingredients. Spread on sandwiches or else serve in bowl with buttered slices of assorted breads.

Anchovy Rye Squares

(6 portions) Six cloves garlic boiled, 2 anchovy filets, 6 capers mashed, 1 tablespoon olive oil, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, paprika, 6 slices of hard cooked egg, 6 buttered rye bread squares.

Chop garlic and anchovies, then mash to paste with capers. Moisten with olive oil and lemon juice. Spread on rye squares and top each with slice of egg. Dust with paprika.

The Ranger students include: Miss Rose Nancy Martin, Garland Montgomery and Wilbur M. Mix.

Miss Martin, daughter of D. A. Martin, is a sophomore and is majoring in business administration. She is a member of the Leti club. Mix is a ministerial student. He preaches at Garland.

Montgomery, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Montgomery, is a business administration major and a member of the Horned Frog band.

Fort Worth Seeking Municipal Plants

By United Press

FORT WORTH, Texas.—Petitions seeking a vote on the question of municipal ownership of gas and electric systems were being checked today by City Manager Edgar S. Birdsong.

Karl Crowley, former solicitor general for the U. S. Post Office Department, and a unsuccessful candidate for governor last summer, presented to the city council a petition, bearing 11,861 names, asking an election on the city-owned electric system question.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS - By Bloss

Claude Spratling, another citizen, furnished a similar petition, asking for a vote on the question of municipal gas ownership. If the signers are found to be qualified voters, the council has no alternative but to call an election. Crowley said that the supporters of municipal electric service hope that $5,000,000 in bonds can be issued to pay for a distribution system, with the power furnished from hydro-electric of the Colorado River. Plans from dams near Austin. An arrangement, he said, would a $1,600,000 annual saving, as if the same amount of is consumed as now.

CASE OF CHARACTERS
SALLY BLAIR—heroine. She had everything that popularity could wish for, except...

Illustration by Henry G. Schlenker.

"Don't you know? That's Reynolds. He's out for the Olympics. He has no time for us."

There was really no doubt as to who would be chosen Queen of the Ice Carnival. All bets were on Sally Blair. Sally was the prettiest, the most popular girl to be invited to the winter festival.

It was no small feather in Sally's pretty cap to have been invited by Corey, either. Corey was president of his senior class, best fraternity on the campus, key-man. He was the only son of Peterson Porter, the steel magnate, no mean accomplishment in itself.

They made a handsome couple, Sally and Corey, swinging along, hand in hand, toward the practice hill where contestants would be getting in trim for the big meet the next day.

"Remember," Corey said, "you're my girl this week-end, Sally. Anyone who tried to break it up had just better watch his back." His look was so fierce, so menacing that Sally laughed.

"I guess no one will dare try," she said. "That is if he values his neck." But she knew that Corey would find plenty of competition. Wherever she went Sally always held court.

ROUNDING the bend they came upon a dazzlingly beautiful sight, wind-rippled snow, sparkling with myriad tiny diamonds, dark sentinels of pines marching up the mountain sides, a blue, blue sky spread like a canopy overhead, and crowds and crowds of brightly-costumed people.

"Isn't it lovely?" Sally exclaimed, and then, "Oh, Corey—look at that!" She caught his arm, standing breathless, watching a dark figure poised high above their heads, a figure that voraged now with one swift graceful forward movement, poised for the gelandensprung, or jump, rose like a bird silhouetted against the sky, then skimmed down the trail of the steep slope, a cloud of snow billowing behind, to come to a smooth, perfect stop with an elaborately executed "Christie."

"That was worth looking at," Corey admitted. "Perfect co-ordination and judgment, marvelous tempo and control."

"Who is he?" Sally demanded, still wide-eyed and breathless. Never had she seen anything to equal that performance in sheer grace and beauty.

"I'll make it, too, if he keeps up that form. He'll probably walk away with most of the honors tomorrow. At least, as one of his fraternity brothers, I can say he's just better, since we're backing him to stack up points for dear old Dartmouth."

"I'd like to meet him," Sally said. It suddenly seemed imperative that she should meet this young man. He was the center of a noisy, enthusiastic crowd as Sally and Corey drew near.

COREY glanced at her, sideways; his blue eyes narrowed. "That wouldn't do you any good," he informed her, crisply. "Reynolds hasn't any time for women. Not even one as de-lovely and desirable as you, my sweet. Especially one of your kind, I might add."

"Are you afraid you couldn't wring his neck?" Sally laughed at him. "What do you mean by one of my kind? I can't say I exactly relish that!"

There was not time for Corey to answer this, even with one of his ever-ready wise-cracks. Several of the young people, gathered about Dan Reynolds, recognized Sally and Corey and called out to them.

"Hi, there!" "Alley-oop! It's about time you joined us!" "Here comes the Queen, everybody! Make way! Let's have a royal welcome!"

Three long loud cheers rang out from lusty young throats as Sally responded with a mocking bow, flashing her smiles to the right and left. However, her dark eyes did not leave the figure of the tall, bare-headed boy, remaining silent and apart.

He, alone, had not raised his voice in welcome. "Isn't someone going to introduce us?" Sally inquired. Her smile was just for him now. The Queen singling out a humble subject, bestowing a special favor. She would show Corey that he was mistaken. Sally had yet to meet the young man who would not mean to divulge them. "Maybe Sally's satisfied just to be Queen this year," Pudge Reynolds came gallantly to her rescue. Sally might not be able to see him for dust, which was no small wonder with Corey paying her such open homage, but Pudge wouldn't give up hope until the last gun. What'd you mean not-see-enough? You're plenty super when it comes to any sport, my love."

"Don't you wish she were your love?" Corey taunted, winking broadly. He pulled his chair a bit closer to Sally's, bent his fair head nearer her dark eyes. "You're just for your thoughts," he murmured, just for Sally's ears. "Why don't you keep your mind on your work—which is me—why this life-is-real, life-is-earnest attitude, my sweet?"

"Corey wants to ask you if you'll give me a lesson in skiing tomorrow morning," Sally put in.

"Just what is the big idea?" Corey asked, after the applause that they were met, and very grave, as well—met hers squarely.

had died down and they had taken a breathless bow before they wandered back toward their table again. "Why aren't you entering the women's events, Sally?" He had expected Sally to come off with top honors, as she had last year. Incidentally, as his girl, he felt she owed it to him. Just as now he felt she owed him an explanation for not entering.

"I told you, I'm not good enough," Sally answered lightly. The color in her cheeks deepened, her heartbeat quickened. Not because she still was breathless from the dance, but because—at last—her bright roving glance had been rewarded. In a far corner, all by himself, his attention completely absorbed in the task of waxing his skis with infinite patience and loving care, sat the person she had been searching for. Apparently he had not even taken time out to observe Sally and Corey's exhibition. Apparently he did not know they were on earth.

"This way!" Sally tugged at Corey's sweater sleeve. She gave him a knowing look. "Remember our 'cheek,' Corey? Be a good boy and keep quiet. And watch the fun."

SHE walked straight over to that corner, Corey following, his handsome face a bit puzzled, a bit sulky.

"Greetings!" Sally said in her calm, clear voice. She tossed back her dark curls; her eyes held their bright, dangerous look. "We know we're interrupting. A thousand pardons for that. But Corey wants to ask a favor, as one brother to another. Isn't that right, Corey, my lad?" She threw him a laughing look that bound him in intimate understanding.

Corey prided himself on being a good sport. She knew she could rely on him not to let her down. Dan looked up reluctantly, running one hand absently, in a sort of caress, down the smoothly-polished ski. He said, "Hello," none too cordially. His eyes—Sally had taken note before "Don't bother to get up," Sally said quickly, significantly. Usually men could not get to their feet swiftly enough when Sally stood before them. She wondered if he was being rude purposely, or if he did not know any better.

"The slow push that crept up the high planes of his dark cheekbones answered this. He knew better, all right. For some reason he was determined to snub Sally. His gray eyes still were direct. "I wasn't going to," he answered. "I couldn't risk dropping these." He nodded toward the skis balanced across his knees. "What can I do for you, Corey?" His tone held the tinge of politeness due an upper-classman.

"Corey wants to ask you if you'll give me a lesson in skiing tomorrow morning," Sally put in before her escort could say anything. She slipped an arm through Corey's, gave him a little warning pressure. "Corey says he knows you could teach me better than anyone else. I'll meet you at whatever time you name."

The gray eyes never wavered. If he was taken by surprise, if he wanted to refuse, but felt he could not, Dan Reynolds did not give any sign. "Make it six o'clock," he said. "That's the only possible time I could manage."

"Six o'clock—in the morning!" Sally gasped.

Dan nodded. Briefly, decisively. He bent his head over his skis again, dipped the rag in the wax. "Serves you right!" Corey's sulksiness vanished. He took Sally's arm to lead her back where she belonged. "I can picture you rising at that unlovely hour to win any dare, my sweet! I suppose that's what you're up to. You're usually up to something. But—and this time I'll lay odds you ask for—you might as well give up before you commence."

"I'll name them," Sally agreed. "And match them with any you care to mention."

She wished she felt as confident as she sounded!

HERBERT GRIN CRISLER of Michigan is the coach of the year.

Rated behind him on 1938 performances and in the order named are Bill Kern of Carnegie Tech, Elmer Layden of Notre Dame, Harry Stuhldreher of Wisconsin, Tom Stidham of Oklahoma, Don Faurot of Missouri, Richard Harlow of Harvard, and Howard Harding Jones of Southern California.

Although he inherited sophomore backs of rare speed and versatility and a veteran line, Fritz Crisler in his first fall at Michigan erased the defeatist habits of four years.

The old Chicago man left no room for doubt as to the potential abilities of his squad, achieved blocking and tackling reminiscent of another era and restored pose and self-confidence by the simple formula of hard work, and launched a program of offensive emphasis probably unparalleled in Wolverine history.

A missed point after touchdown in the Minneapolis match was all that separated Michigan and its new coach from an undefeated campaign and the Western Conference championship.

KERN in his second season at Carnegie Tech, and with a young club of which little was expected, beat Holy Cross and Pittsburgh, real powers which had not been repulsed for more than two years. The Tartans suffered their only loss after more than holding their own with Notre Dame until after when Referee Johnny Mitchell lost track of the downs to give the Irish the ball in the final period. Layden guided a young Notre Dame club back to the dizzy football heights the South Bend institution enjoyed under the immortal Knute Rockne.

Stuhldreher in his third season took Wisconsin to the very threshold of its first Big Ten championship in 26 years.

Stidham swept Oklahoma to its first Big Six championship in history. The unbeaten Sooners' average net gain nearly quadrupled that of their combined rivals. They are the nation's ranking team defensively, having been scored on only twice in eight engagements.

ONE-SIXTEENTH Creek Indian and the rest Irish, Stidham is a native Oklahoman, having been born at Checotah, in old Creek nation. He was the 220-pound running mate at tackle of Hugs Tim Roebuck under Dick Haney at Haskell.

Faurot made Missouri a goal-scoring machine for the first time in more than a decade. Harvard after a dismal start brought the Crimson to a glorious finish. Howard Jones restored much of Southern California's lost prestige . . . got back in the league with both feet at a time when not a few experts had an idea that the old Yale Blue had lost his grip.

No story about coaches would be complete without mention of Wallace Wade of Duke. Major Robert Reese Neyland of Tennessee, Dutch Meyer of Texas, Christian Dr. Sutherland of Pittsburgh, Bernie Bierman of Minnesota, and Frank Thomas of Alabama, but football men long since have grown accustomed to superlatives seasons by these masters.

NEW YORK—We are beginning to observe phenomena in the general economic situation not unlike those which appeared in the latter part of 1936.

First of all, production has been increasing with reasonable speed, employment has been increasing. This occurred all through 1936, striking finally a sort of accelerating spark which sent it into high gear.

This has not occurred now by any means. Whether it will or not is beside the point for the moment. The moment this 1936 condition began to manifest itself the cry went up that we were enjoying real recovery and with this went a demand for tapering off of government expenditures. The administration responded to this demand and thereafter all through the latter half of 1936 and the early part of 1937 expenditures were cut.

Meantime prices rose, thus adding to the depressive influences and 1937 moved swiftly into a tail spin of impressive proportions.

Now as production has increased and as employment has expanded, the same talk about recovery has spread around and the same demand for curtailing government expenditures has begun. Again the President responds and, if we are to believe the stories from Washington, expenditures for relief are to be cut drastically.

Of course there is the feeling that these reductions are to be accompanied by increased expenditures for armaments. But the money for the armaments is not yet available and when it is it will take some time to put it effectively to work.

Now if this curtailment of government expenditures takes place there is no doubt that the mild recovery movement will very quickly be checked and that we will go into the same kind of a tail spin we saw in 1937. It may, indeed, be more serious. For now there is a depressive influence which did not exist before. Then the government was raising funds by loans from the banks. This was 100 per cent inflationary. But now the government is getting its funds partly from the banks but partly from loans of tax money.

"Loans of tax money" may sound strange. It is strange. It is one of the strangest of public finance oddities. The government imposes a heavy tax on pay rolls and employers for social security. It then "borrows" this tax money and issues bonds for it. Seemingly it is spending money obtained by loans but it is actually spending money obtained by taxes. This will run into many hundreds of millions this year and even more next year.

The time to think about the coming economic effects of government action is now, before that action is taken, and when the effects lie in the future. The time to perceive that the plan to cut quickly the extent of WPA funds is going to send us into a reverse movement is now. If the government wants to listen to business and reduce relief payments then it must not merely reduce relief payments but must accompany this action with a whole series of other arrangements which will tend to adjust the national economy to change.

Football Was Not A Big Business In Texas 25 Years Ago

AUSTIN—In these days of football on a magnificent scale, it is startling to look at newspaper files of less than a quarter of a century ago.

The Houston Post on March 17, 1914, carried a financial statement of the University of Texas Athletic Council. It noted football receipts of $19,050. The association spent $16,721—less than it now pays for one athletic official.

But then, there was no Memorial stadium in which to put the 30,000 and 40,000 fans modern football draws for single games.

Locked In Booth, He Doesn't Know Where

FORT WORTH, Texas — Roy Jones, Chico, Cal., truck driver, spent a busy and uneasy hour. He stopped at a grocery to make a telephone call and was locked inside when the owner closed for the night.

After a few minutes meditation, Jones called the police department. The police couldn't tell where Jones was and neither could he. The call finally was traced back through the telephone exchange and the grocery owner notified.
