Garner's Record Shows He Favors Balanced Budget

Editor's Note: This is an "interview with the record" of Vice President John N. Garner. Despite the attention drawn to him as a reputed fiscal maker for anti-new deal democrats and a presidential possibility, Garner refuses to grant interviews. He has kept a vow of silence since 1933, except for one speech in 1936. But he does invite persistent questioners to consult his record; tell them it represents his general views. A study of the record therefore is of interest, although it contains no recent statements.

By ALLEN C. DIBBLE
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, May 2.—Vice President John Nance Garner, on the basis of avowals that he stands on his record, feels that the unbalanced budget is "the master element of our trouble," which can be solved only by re-trenchment of government expenditures and adequate taxation.

This theory clashes sharply with that of new dealers who feel that the government must assume the role of spender-lender, regardless of deficits, when private capital cannot be attracted to business and industrial enterprises.

"It is the business of government to maintain some measure of relation between receipts and expenditures of government; to adjust taxes to the requirements of the treasury; to curtail expenditures to bring them within income," Garner said. (Letter of acceptance, August 23, 1932).

The vice president believes that "the paramount duty" of congress is to "sustain the financial integrity of the republic" through a balanced budget.

This view was expressed (floor speech March 29, 1932) concerning the possibility that a sales tax would have to be levied because other taxes had reached the saturation point.

U. S. BEHIND IN RESEARCH ON AIR DEFENSES

By United Press
LANGLEY FIELD, Va., May 2.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh predicted today that unless the United States begins immediate expansion of aviation research facilities, it will be unable to catch up, in five years, with the European powers.

Lindbergh made the statement privately to government officials and aeronautical experts with whom he dined aboard a Potomac river steamer, enroute from Washington to Langley Field.

He was one of a party of 400 that witnessed a national advisory committee for aeronautics display of new devices making possible aircraft speeds never before attained.

Lindbergh, a member of the NCA, declined to discuss any subject with the press. It was learned, however, that he told the group of officials last night that five years ago the United States led the world in aviation research and had been outstripped only in the last few years.

He placed Germany at the top of the list in research, and said that Great Britain was second, with Italy and France tied for third. Soviet Russia, he indicated, was not an important factor in aeronautical research.

Clean-up Campaign Workers Thanked By Lee Dockery

Lee Dockery, general chairman of the recent clean-up campaign held in Ranger, has written letters to the committees which served during this campaign, thanking them for their efforts in making Ranger a cleaner town. In his letters Dockery expressed the belief that the clean-up was the most successful ever held locally.

Plans Are Completed for Oil Belt Safety Conference in Abilene May 4-5

ABILENE, May 2.—With all the details perfected and ironed out for holding the mammoth Oil Belt Safety Conference here on May 4-5, officials yesterday turned their attention to a clamor for admittance from outside the 19-county district.

L. H. Taylor, of Ranger, president of the organization, met with the executive committee in Abilene Monday to draw up a constitution and by-laws designed to make it a permanent safety unit.

The convention will get underway Thursday afternoon with registration at 2 o'clock.

The industrial conference, also opening at 10 a. m. Friday, will be held in the Wooten Hotel Ballroom. Both the chairman and the program will be announced later.

Dictator For War Period Is Predicted

By United Press
WASHINGTON, May 2.—Sen. Hiram W. Johnson, republican, California, demanding that congress remain in session as long as necessary to "keep the United States out of war," told the senate today that this country would have a "dictator if we go to war in an attempt to destroy those two dictators in Europe."

Replying to a proposal by Sen. John Bankhead, democrat, Alabama, to have congress adjourn on June 15, Johnson asserted that the question of war overshadows all other questions confronting congress.

Bankhead proposed to postpone consideration of neutrality legislation and other controversial subjects until 1940.

Slowly We're Getting Up Steam

Given a bare breathing-space between European crises, American business seems in a fair way to get on its feet. Reports for the first quarter show definitely that money is being made, business volume is better than in 1938. Here are a flock of first-quarter business reports noted more or less at random from the pages of financial journals and corporation reports: Retail sales of new cars and trucks in the first 10 days of April are 46 per cent ahead of the same period of 1938...

In fact, the aggregate profits of the first 66 industrial companies reporting for the first quarter of 1939 show combined net income of $41,799,456 as compared with $29,944,931 in 1938, an advance of almost 40 per cent. The motor industry led the way up out of the depression of 1933; today it leads again, and waits only for followers. American Telephone, for instance, has said it will spend $320,000,000 on new plant. The Class 1 railroads have this year put in service almost 1000 more new freight cars than last year.

Gradually the thought is dawning in the United States: the European crisis is a chronic crisis. You might almost say that Europe is now governed by crises. The whole world can't simply sit back and hold its breath just because Europe is having a crisis. Life has to go on, and business has to go on, crisis or no crisis. American business is, we believe, gradually realizing this, and is preparing to dig in and scratch once again. Nobody any longer expects a phenomenal boom this year. But every sign now points to a gradual up-grade that will mark substantial progress beyond the late but not much lamented 1938.

Matter of great concern, says President Roosevelt, is abuse in administration of parole systems. Yeah, chief, and payroll systems, too.

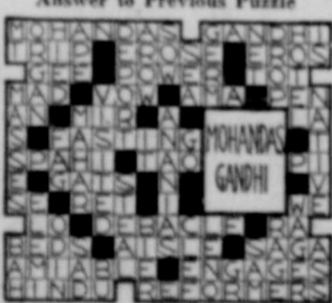

Into the window of a car driven by an Ohio couple flew a duck. Suppose then a game warden popped up from the running board and demanded: "Wherez yer license?"

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON.—When Edwin M. Watson, now one of the White House secretaries and recently sworn in as a brigadier-general, gets down to his desk in the morning, he is apt to find it cluttered with correspondence, to which are attached little memos reading like this: "Pa: See the attorney general about this. F. D. R." "Pa: Tell the senator to go ahead. F. D. R."

again. You must have organization. "If one of us should disagree, do not point your finger at him and say he is not a democrat." President Roosevelt has been critical of the element in the democratic party which has failed to support the new deal program and has urged that they seek a party more consistent with their views. This is Garner's view toward the expansion of governmental activities: (letter of acceptance): "In my opinion, nearly all of our civic troubles are the consequence of government's departures from its legitimate functions. I have ever been of the belief that attempting to enforce morals by law was as unjustifiable an invasion of the field preempted by the churches and schools as putting the government into business is a violation of the nation's industrial and commercial fabric."

the American embassy in Paris, and another four-year hitch at the embassy in Brussels. He is an extravagant admirer of his boss, and he loves his job. "Next to war," he says, "this is the most thrilling experience I've ever had. Every day is an adventure. You never know what will turn up next." The demands of the White House routine don't leave him much time for recreation, but he does manage to get in a round of golf every week-end at the exclusive Burning Tree club, near Washington, with Dave Early, the White House press secretary. To get a measure of daily exercise General Watson walks to the zoo every morning; doesn't look at the animals or feed peanuts to the monkeys, just walks there. As the President's aide, General Watson went on many trips with him, and thus was introduced to the sport of deep sea fishing. He im immensely proud of a sword-fish, he caught off the Cocos Islands. This, properly mounted, he has loaned to a Washington sea-food restaurant. He'll reclaim it when he moves into a house that will have room for it. That, apparently, will take place in about two years. For when President Roosevelt leaves the White House General Watson plans to move to a country place in Virginia and become a gentleman farmer. He has the house all picked out. Incidentally, there is a pretty broad possibility that when that day comes he may go into politics seriously. He has had a pretty good insight into politics during his White House career, and he knows lots of senators and congressmen. It isn't at all unlikely that he might decide to run for office himself after this administration is out. (Copyright, 1939, NEA Service, Inc.)

Old School Tie Is Banned As Import

AUCKLAND, New Zealand.—Wearers of the old school tie in New Zealand will have to get them knitted local, in future due to the new import restrictions under the licensing system introduced by the Dominion's Socialist government. This is one effect of the new restrictions, for ties knitted abroad are on the prohibited list. Young women were equally dismayed by a notice in a big shop here stating that no further supplies of popular hand-worked lingerie could be imported. The restrictions also reduce the imports of safety pins. Canary seed from abroad is banned, and New Zealanders will have to be content with only half the Canadian spaghetti they formerly ate.

Fingerprinting Of All Children Now Urged By Garrison

AUSTIN, Tex.—Colonel Homer Garrison, Jr., state police director, today urged the extension of universal fingerprinting to every child a year old and up. Most of the juvenile prints among the 26,000 non-criminal cards on file at state police headquarters are those of school-age children. "Now we want to carry universal fingerprinting to an entire new group—youngsters of pre-school age down to a year—and we're asking their parents to help us in this big job," the police head said. There is negligible value to fingerprinting babies under a year because it is hard to get a clear impression and the ridges on their fingers, although formed, are not distinct, experts pointed out. Colpel Garrison cited a number of reasons for including young children in universal fingerprinting, which has been endorsed by President Roosevelt. "God forbid we'll have a kidnaping case in Texas, but if we should, fingerprints would be the means of positively identifying the child. And remember that no child is really safe from the mad snatcher, the crank, the pervert." Prints on file at the state identification bureau are likewise valuable for identifying children involved in traffic accidents, drownings and public disasters such as school fires and explosions, theater panics, tornadoes. Many of the victims of a London school disaster two windows ago were identified from school police records, he said. "Even the lost child, from his mother in a hospital and taken to the police station for safekeeping, may be more restored to his distraught mother if there is some quick identification." SERIAL STORY BORDER ADVENTURE

BY OREN ARNOLD

Yesterday Betty has no chance to slip away, but she plus three white sheets on the hillside and signals. The officers see the next morning the sheets are at it up. Barro is gone!

CHAPTER XXIII

WHEN 10 o'clock and then 11 passed and the time slipped sympathically on toward noon, Betty Mary began to realize that she had acted foolishly when she had tied three sheets to scrubby trees hoping rescuers miles away would see them. Surely, if help were coming it would have come long since, she reasoned.

So despair engulfed her, there in the Barro kitchen. She had done more manual labor in the last 14 hours than she had done in a whole year before. She had washed countless pieces of china and silverware after leaving the laundry. She had peeled and chopped onions, had crushed dried peppers that stung her nostrils and eyes, had stirred a great vat of greasy chili that became appetizing as fatigue assailed her.

At 11:40 she stepped to a kitchen window for a breath of fresh air, and saw a bewhiskered old Mexican man drive up in a creaky, lost child, cart pulled by two burros. He stopped near the kitchen and began unloading firewood. One of the police station guards cursed him for no reason whatever, but the burrito man just bowed his head, crossed himself and said nothing. Betty Mary felt sorry for him.

PRESENTLY a dilapidated automobile was mobile chugged up to the kitchen door. Ever vigilant for an escape, Betty Mary went out to see it. In the car, a part of covered truck, was a red bull, the great slabs of meat, still warm from animal heat. The fat cook stepped to the door, "What is this?" he demanded of the driver, belligerently.

"Come," a swarthy, little man whined. "Is the meat ordered from Portes Gomez. Senior Barro order Portes to send meat, because he cannot pay his debt in money."

"Ah!" growled the cook. "Bring me. You muchacha, help him."

This last command was addressed to Betty Mary, who was standing nearby.

Instantly, she recoiled from touching a piece of raw beef weighing half as much as she. But she dared not refuse. The Mexican climbed up under the frayed canvas roof of the truck and turned with a hunk of rib meat to face Betty Mary. He saw at once that no one else was near.

"Pe-s-s-s-st!" he suddenly hissed a low warning, then whispered, "Don't be alarmed, Betty Mary! Are you all right?"

"Oh!" Betty half screamed the exclamation. The man was Hope Kildare!

"Take this meat, woman!" he bawled at her then, in Spanish. "You hear what the cook say! What you think you are, the grand lady, huh?"

He leaned toward her managing to squeeze her wrist as she took the meat from his hands. By sheer force of will then she controlled herself, swallowing hard, and staring at him. But then she took her burden and went inside.

When she came back for more of the beef a quick glance showed Hope that nobody from the house was observing them. Kitchen workers were inside several feet away, and guards loitered out of hearing. Betty and Hope got no more chance to talk for the moment, however, because the bewhiskered old wood hauler shuffled up just then.

"Is there any garbage or old trash and such I can take away, senorita y senor?" he asked of them, in Spanish.

Hope had been gripping Betty Mary's wrist again and felt her response now, a tightening of her own muscles.

"Get the devil out of here and haul your wood, old man!" Hope ordered aloud. Then he whispered to Betty, "It's Sherry! You know?"

"Oh! Oh Sherry! I could—just kiss you!" She was whispering excitedly, about to sob. "You—come! You, and Hope, are such—"

"Yeah, sure. But for Pete's sake—"

She forced herself to enter the kitchen, and spoke aloud in Spanish.

"I will see if you can have the ash. Somebody must haul it away."

SHE asked the cook about it and he told her irritably to do what she pleased with it. A pile of empty packing boxes, papers, bags, cans and general kitchen rubbish had collected out back, but he was too busy, with Luis Barro's greatly increased household with its alien guests, to pay any attention to trash now.

There in broad daylight, the chance of her slipping into the truck unobserved was, of course, slight. Women servants were passing from laundry to the main house, from kitchen to store rooms. Barro's armed guards were naturally observant. Sheridan realized that they had to be extremely clever, and lucky as well. He realized that he and Hope had already been lucky even to reach Betty Mary as easily as they had.

The big officer, well disguised behind his woodcutter outfit and his false beard, led Hope and Betty Mary in quick whispered consultation. They agreed at once; his plan at least offered a possibility.

Hope, the "butcher," therefore got ostentatiously into his truck, started the motor, allowed the machine to slip apparently out of control about 50 yards down the roadway, and crash into a post.

The post cracked. The resultant commotion caused all the guards to gather there for a few minutes, and attracted the eyes of all persons outside. Hope did a lot of Spanish cursing and grumbling, backed his truck off, got out to inspect it and the post, got back behind the steering wheel grumbling anew about his damaged axle and fender.

All told, this little disturbance back of the Barro house took perhaps a quarter of an hour. Fifteen or 20 people had come to look curiously on, some to grin at the butcher's discomfiture. Only the old woodcutter had not come; minding his own business he had thrown off his firewood, reloaded with garbage and trash, and was riding away behind his snail-like burros. He pulled out of the road to go around the butcher's truck, removing his hat respectfully. But nobody noticed him.

When the truck started off again, everyone drifted back to their respective duties. Another quarter hour passed and the cook ordered his staff to make the midday meal. For 30 minutes or more the women and men helpers were bustling with activity.

Some time after 1 o'clock the rush was over, and the kitchen staff itself was allowed to eat. Then it was that the cook relaxed, wiped his forehead and sat down before a heaping plate of food. He paused first a few seconds to eye his staff.

"Come!" he suddenly barked. "That gringo woman—where is she?"

Nobody answered. Nobody knew.

BRUCE CATTON - IN WASHINGTON

850,000 people as certified in need of work relief and awaiting placement on the rolls. What will happen during the next fiscal year is anybody's guess right now, as the whole work relief program is up for drastic overhaul in Congress and far-reaching changes may be made. The President recently said that he would ask an appropriation of $1,500,000,000 for the 1939 fiscal year, however—$250,000,000 less than the tentative budget estimate made in January, and approximately $750,000,000 less than the sum WPA will have spent when the current fiscal year ends. On that basis, WPA Administrator Harrington figured that, during the 1939 fiscal year, WPA would carry an average load of 2,000,000. To get back to the 600,000-odd who will have been dropped by the end of June. Aside from the unemployed, who will have to submit an one form or another of direct relief, the supposition is that these people will eventually be absorbed by private industry. There is a very crude yardstick—possibly quite inaccurate—by which you may figure the speed at which this will happen. Relief workers have recently constituted about 30 per cent of the total "reservoir" of unemployed workers. If, when industry hangs out its "men wanted" signs, they get re-employed at a rate proportionate to their percentage of the total number unemployed, then re-absorption of 100,000 men by private industry would mean the return of 30,000 relief workers to regular jobs. So, if 600,000 relief workers are going to have to find jobs by the end of June— Well, maybe that yardstick isn't accurate.

Killed in Ohio Strike Battle

Shot and killed in Ohio coal field battle was 25-year-old John Abbram, above, of New Philadelphia, O., one of 200 strikers who besieged a mine near Otego.

They've built a fence around the goldfish pond in Garfield park, Chicago. To keep the neighboring college boys away?

Vehicle Relic Of Old West Shown By A Collector

WATERFORD, Cal.—Started almost by accident five years ago, the odd hobby of Pierce A. Miller, a rancher residing near here, is winning fame for him at the San Francisco Golden Gate International Exposition.

In 1934, the nearby city of Modesto staged an oldtimers parade, and issued a call for old wagons, buggies and hearses. The shortage of such vehicles was surprising and it was then that Miller thought casually of making a collection just to have on hand should the occasion to use them ever arise again.

Today Miller is the proud owner of 65 old vehicles dating back to California's colorful gold rush days and even earlier. Purchased at prices ranging from $1 to $100, they now are worth much more because of their scarcity.

Before the exposition opened, several fair officials came to Miller's home and selected five vehicles to be used in a production known as the "Cavalcade of the West" on Treasure Island. Miller's son, Tom, went along to take part in the show. Sometimes he plays the role of an Indian, again a cowboy, and at other times drives the relics he carefully guards for his father.

Selected to appear at the fair were a four-wheeled horse car from Virginia City, Nev., a covered wagon that had a regular run through desolate Death Valley many years ago; a closed cab 80 years old that served as a taxicab in San Francisco long before the disastrous earthquake and fire and was one of the first to appear on the streets of that city; a two-seated carriage from Lodi, unique in the great height of its wheels and seating arrangement and an odd-looking buskboard.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Hagaman left Monday morning to attend the funeral services of his uncle, Mr. Jim Wittington, which were held at Amarillo. They will return home tonight.

Harry Wheelon, Archie Robinson, Chester Rogers, J. F. Byas, Stanley McAnelly, L. M. Carley of Eastland, L. R. Herring, W. H. Bollinger and F. D. Ford left this morning for Tulsa, Oklahoma, to attend the gasoline convention, which convenes there May 1-6.
