Local Girl Will Be Chosen for Casa Manana Trial

Miss Eastland will compete in a contest for Casa Manana. The contest will be held on Tuesday afternoon, June 13, in connection with the regular program at the Eastland Theater. It was announced today by Pleas Moore, manager of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce, after a conference with Brann Garner, Arcadia manager, and Boyce House, Casa Manana director of publicity. "Miss Eastland" will be chosen a contest in Eastland, tentatively being for the event to be held at the Counciller Theater Friday afternoon, June 16, according to H. J. Tanner, Eastland chamber of Commerce secretary, who conferred with House and will work out complete plans with manager Cecil Barham of the Ly-and-Cannelle. Any girl wishing to take part in the contest should turn in her name at the theater box office. An important feature of the contest is that the local contestant—even if she does not receive the honor of being Texas sweetheart No. 1—will be offered a place in the cast of Casa Manana and so the winner of the contest and the winner of Eastland contest will have an opportunity to launch on a stage career in the finest show that can be seen between the two Worlds this summer. There will also be a "Miss C" who will be chosen in a contest at the Palace in that city on the afternoon of Friday, June 16. Casa Manana opens its fourth season on July 21 and will run through Labor Day. The show—consisting of seven highest-type acts and a famous dance band—will change each two weeks.

Attorney General Would Abandon Alcatraz Prison

By United Press
WASHINGTON, June 7.—Attorney General Frank Murphy today termed Alcatraz Prison "a place of horror" and proposed the transfer of criminals from the "Rock" in San Francisco Bay to a new security penitentiary, to be located in some isolated part of the country. "It is a great injustice to San Francisco to have that place of horror on the doorstep of the city," Murphy said at a press conference. "The whole institution is conducive to psychology that builds up a sinister and vicious attitude among prisoners." Murphy said no definite action was likely for two or three years, but that he had ordered justice department officials to study the situation.

Frank Norfleet Is Still Following Favorite Vocation

HALE CENTER, Texas. — J. Frank Norfleet, Hale Center rancher, who in 1919 traveled all over the nation chasing and capturing six swindlers who mulcted him out of $80,000, is still busy at his favorite work—thief catching. The smallish, white-mustached rancher, who won national fame in 1919 when he tracked down the men who gyped him in a land deal, now is 78—but he's still hale, hearty and active. He still carries with him his constant companion—a .38 Colt "thum buster" on a 45 frame. Norfleet isn't affiliated with any state or national law enforcement agency, but since he made his personal catch, he has found plenty to do as a sort of private detective running down swindlers for others. And he has been lucky. He can look back on 93 arrests, and 87 of the persons he has caught have been tried and convicted. Norfleet still likes to recall his famous job of tracking down the six men who beat him out of his money and started him on his sleuthing career. He traced them doggedly. Two were captured in California, one was bagged in Montreal, a fourth was run to the ground in Atlanta, and a fifth captured in Florida. Of the sixth, he merely says that he was found in Florida, too, "but the 'rators got him." The veteran rancher doesn't say just what he is working on now, but he leaves the impression that it won't be long before he adds another mark to his string of captured thieves and swindlers.

By United Press
AUSTIN, June 7.—Rep. E. H. Thornton, Jr., of Galveston, announced today that the sales and natural resource tax constitutional amendment to finance social security will be brought up tomorrow for a final vote in the Texas House of Representatives. One hundred affirmative votes will be needed to submit the proposition to the voters. The resolution, already passed by the senate, has received 89 favorable votes in one house test and members opposing it, despite Gov. O'Daniel's criticism, were confident it would not receive the 100 votes tomorrow. Action on the resolution is expected to result in adoption of a sine die adjournment resolution and bring to an end, probably next week, the session that already has set a record of 149 days.

Game Commission Studying Squirrels And Their Habits

AUSTIN, Tex.—Do squirrels build homes and become settlers, or are they Nomads? The Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission through two squirrel trapping projects recently gotten under way, is attempting to answer that question. Many of the policies of the game department concerning control, restocking, and recommendations for helpful laws concerning the open seasons on the little nut-eaters hinge upon the findings of the regional game managers in charge of the projects. Will J. Tucker, executive secretary of the game department, announced today. "Co-operating with the National Park Service, Texas Parks Board and the CCC, Dr. A. J. Nicholson, game manager of region 4, is conducting a squirrel trapping project in Bastrop State Park near Bastrop and Dan W. Lay, region 1 game manager, has one under way in Tyrrell Park near Beaumont.

By trapping squirrels time and again and marking them with tags, the department biologists hope to ascertain whether squirrels set up housekeeping on one home range and remain there or whether they migrate and to what extent they move. If it is proved they do travel, data on the animals' breeding habits can also be obtained without killing them. It can also be determined whether the fox, erroneously called red squirrels, drive the gray, or cat squirrel out of certain areas. "Too, the game managers hope to work out an excellent method of trapping squirrels, something that has never been accomplished in the future the game department will be able to trap squirrels in over-populated areas and restock wooded sections of the state that have been badly over-shot. With the information at hand concerning possible migrations of squirrels, the game department can make proper recommendations for squirrel seasons in the various counties.

While it is not generally known, Texas has three species of game squirrels. The Texas fox squirrel inhabits central and south central Texas. The southern fox squirrel lives mostly in the pine belt of East Texas and is larger than his central Texas cousin. The gray cat squirrel is found largely along streams in the pine belt.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE READY TO SIGN PACT

By United Press
LONDON, June 7.—Great Britain and France are ready to give Russia full military support in the event of any act of aggression which would involve her in war, with any European power, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told the house of commons today. He said the agreement would not be confined to an actual attack on Russian Territory, thus intimating that an attack through the Baltic States would bring the agreement into effect. Chamberlain appeared to hope that the above stipulation would sidestep the reluctance of the Baltic States to accept a guarantee against aggression. Chamberlain said Britain and Russia are in "general agreement" on the main object to be attained.

Mexican Pilot Is Killed In Crash At Washington

By United Press
WASHINGTON, June 7.—Francisco Sarabia "Mexico's Lindbergh," who recently established a speed record for a non-stop flight from Mexico City to New York, was killed today when his speed plane crashed in the Potomac river. Sarabia had taken off from Bolling Field, the U. S. Army air field, at 4:30 a. m. CST for a return non-stop flight to Mexico. The motor failed suddenly about a mile from the field, after the plane had gained an altitude of about 50 feet. It fell into the river about 200 feet off shore. The flier was trapped in the plane's cockpit and was believed to have drowned.

Filibuster Leader Does Not Favor Filibuster Rule

By United Press
AUSTIN, Texas.—Sen. Weaver Moore of Houston, who conducted the record-breaking filibuster against the "fair trade" bill before the Texas Senate does not favor filibusters. "But like a ball player who may not like a certain rule of the game, he plays the game according to the rules. The rules permitted a filibuster so he utilized it. There are several angles to the filibuster question. To those who utilize it, the method is a last resort to kill something that they consider harmful. The time to kill a snake is when you have the hoe in your hand" is an expression frequently used in the Texas Senate. Practically whenever a majority want deep down in their hearts to end a filibuster they can do so. No one can speak indefinitely on a topic without wandering from the point at issue. Then a point of order can stop him. Repeated warning of not keeping on the topic renders a member liable to an order to stop. Preceding officers, naturally, are loathe to use that authority. But a majority can appeal from the presiding officer's ruling at any time.

Gate Rate Appeal Is Denied By Court

By United Press
AUSTIN, June 7.—The third court of civil appeals today overruled motions of the Lone Star Gas Company for a re-hearing of the court's ruling that the Texas Railroad Commission was justified in ordering a "gate rate" reduction from 40 cents to 32 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. The company has 30 days in which to seek a writ of error for a review by the Texas Supreme Court.

Ludlow Proposal Merit, Demerits to Be Argued Friday

A three-way discussion of the discussion of the proposed Ludlow amendment, which would give citizens the right on whether the U. S. should enter war, will be conducted Friday night of this week at 8:15 in the First Methodist Church at Eastland. Harry Taylor will represent the case of the present policy wherein congress declares war for the people. Rev. P. W. Walker will speak in favor of the proposal, and V. T. ## Flatwood, Kokomo Eoys Try for Team

Aspirants to a place on the county 4-H crops judging team at Flatwood and Kokomo were given a "try-out" Monday, Assistant County Agent Sam Rosenberg reported Tuesday. The Flatwood aspirants practiced at Flatwood and the Kokomo youths in the afternoon at Kokomo. Members of the team, as well as other 4-H teams to compete in state-wide events in July at the 4-H short course in College Station, will be selected in mid-June.

Voters Do Not Like 120 Day Sessions But Legislators Do

AUSTIN, Texas.—Overwhelming repeal probably would meet the constitutional amendment under which 120-day sessions of the Legislature were substituted for 90-day sessions, if the proposal were to be voted upon again by the people. But the voters will never get the chance to express themselves on the question. It takes two-thirds of the membership of both House and Senate to re-submit the proposal, and too many members like the long sessions.

KING, QUEEN TO ARRIVE IN U. S. TONIGHT

By United Press
LONDON, Ont., June 7.—King George and Queen Elizabeth complete 6,000 miles of travel in Canada today, and enter the United States over the International Bridge at Niagara Falls at 10:30 EDT tonight, to receive the first cheers which the United States has ever given a reigning British monarch and to be guarded for the first time by U. S. militiamen. The royal train left here at 11 a. m. EDT to cross the southern tip of Ontario and end the first phase of the American tour at the Canadian side of Niagara Falls this evening. Promptly at 10:30 it will start across the bridge and five minutes later the first reigning British monarch will have set foot on the soil of the former colony that successfully revolted 163 years ago. There will be four days of ceremonies in the United States, starting at Niagara Falls, N. Y., where Secretary of State Cordell Hull and a party of American and British embassy officials will pay the first official welcome. The incidents of the past two days, the shooting near the Duchess of Kent in London and the arrest of Sean Russell, Irish Republican Army leader, at Detroit, have resulted in extraordinary safeguards for the royal couple in Ontario and these precautions will be increased in the United States. The famous "unguarded frontier" at Niagara Falls will be united with the bayonets of United States National Guardsmen. Thousands of state, county and city police will patrol the railroad.

Monnoris Saving Jail of Martyrs

By United Press
SALT LAKE CITY.—General authorities of the Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) church on June 27 will dedicate a restored model of the old jail at Carthage, Ill., where 95 years ago the church founder—Joseph Smith—and his brother, Hyrum, were killed by a mob. The jail was in ruins when it was acquired by the church several years ago but the structure has been restored to its original condition through cooperation of the Illinois State Historical Society and the Illinois state building commission. The dedication ceremonies will be directed by Leo J. Muir, president of the Church's northern states mission. In a report to Salt Lake City officials of the church, Muir said the restoration has been completed from the last detail, including iron bolts in the cell block, which has stone walls 2 feet thick. Muir also reported that a group of Illinois citizens, led by Lane K. Newberry, artist, is trying to raise funds to purchase a lot of Nauvoo, Ill., where the first Mormon temple was built by Joseph shortly before he was killed. If the purchase is consummated, the lot will be presented to the church, which then would reconstruct the old temple. The Smith brothers were stoned to death by a mob on June 27, 1844, after they had been arrested because of their religious activities. After Joseph Smith's death, Brigham Young assumed the church presidency and led a group of Mormons across the plains to Utah, arriving at the present site of Salt Lake City in July 1847.

He was employed at the machine shops at the college by appointment for the past three years. Davis specialized also in military science and is a commissioned officer in the engineer's corp and will report to Randolph Field in San Antonio on July 1.

Rebuilding Our Roads

If there is one thing on which the United States likes to pride itself, it is our magnificent system of hard roads. It is perfectly proper that we should do so. There is no question that the United States has more and better roads than any other country in the world.

But it is one thing to congratulate oneself on past achievements, and another to turn smug, relax, and fall behind. And that is what we are in danger of doing in the matter of our roads.

It has been estimated, for instance, that 97 per cent of the surfaced highway now laid down is of the two-lane, 20-foot variety which is after all nothing but a horse-and-buggy road surfaced. It is not a motor road at all.

The American Association of State Highway Officials studied the matter in 1937 and concluded that there were then about 4704 miles of three-lane, 3082 miles of four-lane, and 221 miles of six-lane pavement. In other words, in 1937 there were only about 8000 miles of multiple-lane highways in the country.

Only such highways can really be considered motor roads in the modern sense. And of the 3303 miles of four and six-lane width highways, only 604 miles were divided so that traffic passing in opposite directions was divided by a raised parkway or center strip.

How much we have progressed beyond that since 1937 is not definitely known, but not much. And yet no one can consider a surfaced road really a motor road or modern highway unless it is at least four lanes, and divided in the center by such a parkway as to make interference almost impossible between traffic passing in opposite directions.

Germany has made progress in this field which might well be studied. Everyone who has driven its new motor roads, with two-level crossings, banked grades, divided lanes, lack of intersections, and general design for a motor age rather than a mere surfaced horse-and-buggy road, comments enthusiastically on the progress that has been made.

Germany, coming into the motor age 20 years after the United States, knows better than we did what needs must be met in modern highways. Starting now, practically from scratch, and with military needs constantly in mind, she has gone ahead with a road system which, as far as it goes, is perhaps the most modern in the world.

Our job is there. It is one more answer to those who say, "America is all built—there is nothing left to do."

Because its last convention was held in 1909, a laundry union dispensed with minutes of the last meeting as they resumed the conclave practice in Denver. None of the members could remember those corrections they had been saving up.

Master Map 7 by 5 Feet Traces the U.S. Geographic History

WASHINGTON—On a sheet of paper 7 feet long and 5 feet wide the Interior Department has traced the geographic history of the United States.

It is the official map of the United States and possessions—the master map from which all others, to be accurate, must be taken.

Etched with needlepoint into the copper engraving plates of the Geological survey are the maps and charts compiled over a period of more than 150 years. The statistics of elevation and land contours, gathered by an army of government surveyors since 1785 when Congress under the Articles of Confederation adopted the "rectangular" system of mapping, are incorporated into the detailed drawings.

Thousands of cities and towns are located accurately. Outlines of every county are shown. Every national park, forest preserve and Indian reservation is clearly indicated. Even beyond that, the westward expansion of the country is revealed in the outlines of each acquisition of territory from the Louisiana Purchase of 1803 onward.

Whims of nature—changes in topography since surveyors first dragged rod and chain through dense forests and over burning deserts—have been recorded. For instance, East Timballer Island in the Gulf of Mexico near New Orleans has taken a jaunt of about 2½ miles in the 100 years since it was discovered. The new map relocates it in its proper position.

The Missouri river near Bismark, N. D., has eaten away its banks enough to change its course, making it necessary to remap the river channel.

The general land office, official "father" of the map and custodian of the charts covering more than 1,880,000,000 acres of public land, is required by Congress to remake the map of the United States every two years. Nine tenths of the output will be placed at the disposal of members of the congress. Others will be sold at the government printing office.

DATE WITH DANGER
CHAPTER XXIV
Faye Lippinger
"Dear fellow, you're talking me up for nothing!"

BY HELEN WORDEN
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.
Ladd accused Mary French of the murder of Duke Martin. She was arrested for the murder. The managing editor of the Gazette waited impatiently in the basement, while the presses of the paper rolled off the two copies. "Here you are, fellows," he called out excitedly, as he handed a copy to each one of the two office boys. Before they had left the room the presses were repeating the giant presses and the real edition was being rolled. At half-past one, a small boy entered in the 900 block on Fifth avenue. "Extra, Extra," he called. "Society editor held in racketeer's killing." His voice grew louder as he passed 919. "Extra, extra," he yelled. "Mary Franklin, society editor of the Gazette, held for the murder of Duke Martin." The door of 919 opened and Clem Shirley ran wildly down the steps. "I want a copy of that paper," she cried. On Murray Hill, in front of the John Burden house, the same scene was being enacted. "Extra, extra," cried a small boy in front of 119 East 37th street. "Mary Franklin, society editor of the Gazette, held for the murder of Duke Martin." The door of 119 was flung violently open and Jack Burden raced down the steps, two at a time. "Here's a half dollar for your paper," he cried. He was still standing on the front steps reading it when the boy hurried off. That same second, Mary was facing the commissioner. "There are certain aspects of Duke Martin's death which we feel you can explain, Miss Franklin," Fenelon said. He pulled up a chair for her and gave Chase a nod of dismissal. "Now tell me exactly what you know, I understand you were the last person in Duke Martin's apartment." "There's no proof of that," Fenelon offered Mary a cigaret. "Ah, but there is, Mr. Rogers, of your paper, tells me he recognized your voice when you phoned to tip off the Gazette." She blew a cloud of smoke through her nostrils. "I have nothing to say." She was on her own ground in this situation, but in the reverse role. She knew all the answers. While she was parrying another question of Fenelon's, the door opened and Ladd rushed in. Mary jumped up. "You've brought all this on me. I hate you," she cried. (To Be Concluded)

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Two kinds of reaction to the new labors of the Dies committee are to be had from New Dealers here. The left-wingers are frankly uneasy. Their attitude is that the Ethiopian hasn't changed his skin, and that he is still lurking in the woodpile; that Dies is still "Garner's man"; that he still dislikes organized labor, and that the current exposure of the Jew-baiting reactionaries is simply a build-up to make the committee look good when, presently, it returns to the radicals; except to say that the left-wingers, it will be long. Among the slightly-left-of-center New Dealers, on the other hand, there is no worry at all. The present probe is looked on as useful, in itself; and if the Dies committee gets after the radicals again and does a more effective job on them than it ever did before, the liberal-but-not-red crowd won't shed any tears at all. As a matter of fact, there are these two groups in the New Deal. It's hard to define them very accurately, except to say that the one is pretty much left-wing while the other is—well, liberal. And some of the liberals are beginning to get a trifle fed up with the left-wingers. One of them remarked the other day that if the Dies committee makes some of the left-wing crowd run for cover it will be doing Roosevelt a service. Speaking of the navy; every submarine disaster seems to bring all of the country's crank inventors to the fore, incessantly. The submarine Squid was sent down late in the afternoon; immediately the Navy Department phones started to ring, and they rang all night. A couple of officers in the operations section had to stay up all night to answer them. One white-bearded gentleman came down to the navy yard in person, with a couple of metal shackles in his hand; he wanted the navy to make two just like them, only big, hook one onto each end of the screw cap, and then haul it to the surface. The navy tries to be nice to all of these people. In the first place, they are American citizens, well-intentioned, who deserve a decent hearing. In the second place, they are voters, and the navy's fate is forever in the voters' hands. And, lastly, there's always an outside chance that one of these gentlemen will actually have an idea that can be used although it has never happened yet. When King George visits the Washington navy yard he will get all of the honors the book of regulations prescribes—but he'll get them in the wrong order. The U. S. Navy doesn't have much experience with kings, but when it meets them it gives them the same honors that the President of the United States gets. That is to say that the visitor is "piped over the side" to the burbling trill of a bosun's whistle, while eight sideboys stand by. Reaching the deck, the visitor faces a guard of honor which snaps to present arms, and a band which gives vent to four flourishes, four ruffles, and then plays the national anthem. All hands not otherwise occupied break out in their most formal salute, and when the anthem ceases the guns start banging out a 21-gun salute. King George and Queen Elizabeth will get all of this at the navy yard here, but the order has been shuffled a bit. As they come through the gate at the navy yard entrance—as they will, on June 9, to cruise down to Mt. Vernon on the presidential yacht Potomac—the 21-gun salute will begin. The roadway leading from the gate to the dock will be lined with blue-jackets and marines, at attention. The honor guard of marines will be drawn up on the dock, instead of on the deck, because the U. S. S. Potomac just isn't big enough for them. Similarly, the band will produce the flourishes, ruffles and national anthem on the dock instead of aboard the ship. Then, last instead of first, the sideboys will appear and the royal guests will be piped over the side.

Industry Has Passed A Crisis
By United Press
STIN, Texas—The oil industry appears to have passed another crisis without a hitch. But, like Europe, the industry knows when there will be another crisis to face. Gov. Richard Leche of Louisiana replied to Sadler's threat that all Sadler had to do was to get his fellow commissioners to agree with him. Governor Leche was only 50 per cent correct in that statement. All Sadler needs is to get one of the other two commissioners to agree with him. A majority vote rules in the Texas commission. Leche threatened an "encirclement" to block Texas oil from markets if an oil war should start. The Texas commissioners are not worried about encirclement. The reason for the sudden order of May 29, taking two more Saturday shut-downs from June's production schedule, was due to
