The Embarrassing Few

In any large group there are bound to be a certain number of persons who do not know how to behave and who by their every action display their bad manners and lack of breeding.

It was, of course, too much to hope that this would not hold true in Canada and the United States—which together have a population of nearly 150,000,000—when King George and Queen Elizabeth came visiting.

While there were a few untoward incidents during the trip across Canada, they amounted to little compared to the antics of a small group of Washington congressmen who were determined to embarrass the President and used the Capitol as their rostrum.

They first seized upon the detention in Detroit of Sean Russell, Irish Republican Army leader, and threatened to organize a boycott of the congressional reception for Their Majesties. Finally Russell's release was arranged, but not until a bit of unpleasant publicity had resulted.

Then one congressman of Irish descent dispatched a telegram to King George—who at the moment was a guest of this same congressman's government in the White House—reminding him of the rather sizeable British war debt. Following that a suggested royal banquet menu was released by this representative to newspapermen. Calculated to be funny but causing only embarrassment, the menu made various references to Revolutionary War engagements.

Regardless of a person's nationality or political beliefs, such manners as those can be labeled nothing short of rude. The king and queen had been invited here by the head of the United States government and while they were his guests, they were entitled to the same politeness as an invited guest in your home.

Whether Their Majesties were conscious of these embarrassing actions will never be known. They, of course, are too well bred themselves to even hint that they were aware of what was going on.

If they are, however, it is hoped that they will judge Americans by the millions of wellbehaved citizens instead of the handful of bad actors. The king and queen have left in America a good impression. Americans hope that they carry home with them pleasant memories of this nation.

John Roosevelt defines business thus: "A hope and a prayer that you can sell something for more than you pay for it." He omitted the equally important "Get more than you work for."

One building at the New York Fair has a complete miniature model of Chicago. Even to Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, and Alice Faye dashing around in the streets?

Texas Has Vacation Spot That Rival Any To Be Found Anywhere

AUSTIN, Tex.—It doesn't take a trip to the San Francisco Exposition or the New York World's Fair; Colorado or the Ozarks for Texas people this summer to have a place for a vacation.

For lying in the beautiful hill country of Texas are two of the nation's most wonderful artificial lakes.

Take billions of gallons of stored water adapted to all forms of boating and water sport and wherein all the species of fresh water fish in Texas abound, throw in scenery rivaling that of any renowned vacation spot, acres of free camping space, and you have Buchanan and Inks lakes—first born of the Lower Colorado River Authority's chain of lakes on the Colorado river above Austin.

Built for the three-fold purpose of flood control, water conservation and the generation of low cost public power, the lakes of the L. C. R. A. have brought as a valuable by-product to Texas people one of the Southwest's greatest grounds for outdoors recreation and vacationing.

And to make use of all this recreation land, it costs the Texas citizen not one penny. The Authority has ample land about the lakes for free access by the public to the water and for camping.

Around the lakes, too, are, of course, private lands for rental and a series of rapidly increasing camps for the visitor who doesn't want his outing's too much in the rough.

Buchanan and Inks are located near Burnett about 60 miles west of Austin. State highways lead directly to them.

In addition to the nearby state capitol as a drawing attraction to the vacationing family is the Longhorn cavern, just out of Burnett, and other interesting places. Historic San Antonio, too, is within a few miles of the lakes.

Buchanan lake, created by the 140 foot high and nearly two miles long Buchanan dam, stores 1,100,000 acre feet or 359,700,000 gallons of water, running for a length of 32 miles and as wide as eight miles in some places.

Three miles below Buchanan is the smaller, but more placid Inks lake, particularly adapted to boating and to water sports. Lying between beautiful granite covered mountains, Inks lake is formed by a dam 97 feet high and 1,545 feet long. This lake impounds 15,200 acre feet or 4,297,400,000 gallons of water. It is three miles and water sport enthusiasts has spread rapidly.

The early visiting crowds of several hundred have grown to several thousand people, some of them from hundreds of miles away, who crowd weekly to the lakes to enjoy their recreational advantages.

The Authority's representatives at the lakes frequently count as many as 6,000 to 10,000 visitors in a week-end.

But so huge are these lakes, with their 212 miles of shoreline and their vast scenic beauty that even this number of people fails to crowd them.

To join Buchanan and Inks lakes within the next two years are the Authority's mighty Marshall Ford dam, forming Lake Travis; and Tom Miller dam, forming Lake Austin.

When these two lakes are completed, the combined shoreline of the Authority's chain will be more than 500 miles, longer than all the coastline of Texas.

With their completion, predicts Max Starcke, operating manager of the Authority, Texas will boast an area for outdoors vacationing and recreation with more natural advantages than possibly any other in the United States.

"These lakes," Starcke declared, "are built for the use and the benefit of all the people of Texas. While creating a recreational center is not one of the primary functions of the Authority, we do encourage its development as much as possible and we do want all the people of Texas to take advantage of the opportunities the L. C. R. A. lakes offer them.

Conserving water that otherwise would run away rapidly to the sea and turning it to the useful purposes of irrigation and low cost power generation, takes away none of these lakes' beauty and usefulness for recreation of many kinds. It makes them nonetheless sanctuaries for fish and game.

"Each of these things go hand in hand, and with creation of these lakes, and with so many other attractions, scenic, historic and interesting, throughout the state there's no reason why Texas in a very short time can't become the nation's No. 1 vacation and tourist attraction."

West Texas Rancher In Grave Condition

By United Press

KERMIT, June 20.—W. F. Scarborough, 71-year-old West Texas rancher and oil baron, remained in a serious condition today from a bullet wound in his abdomen, and his 51-year-old son, Hollis Scarborough, faced a charge of assault with intent to murder.

The elderly rancher was shot in his ranch home yesterday. Scarborough surrendered to officers soon after the shooting, which occurred shortly after 5 p. m. and son met for the first time for two weeks.

John Scarborough, son of Hollis Scarborough, said he had been the only witness, brought his grandfather to a Kermit hospital.

'THE BEAR WENT OVER THE MOUNTAIN...'

You remember why, don't you? Certainly. It was "to see what he could see."

And it's for just this same beautifully simple reason that thousands of knowing people run through the advertisements in their daily newspaper.

For, it seems, civilized men and women are seldom satisfied with their lot. In this ever-producing age they have an insatiable appetite for something new which may make life brighter. That something may be an electric razor, or new summer clothes . . . a good book, or a ride in a streamlined train.

So they turn the newspaper pages to see what they can see. There they're able to find what it is, why it is, where it is, and how much it is. And the advertisements say, "Come and get it!"
