Sharper Perhaps, Than Swords

Hitler's long-predicted troubles in occupied Czechoslovakia seem to have begun.

Despite a few violent outbreaks in which policemen have been killed, most of this developing Czech resistance seems to be of the passive kind.

And that is very interesting, because it is barely possible that this is the most effective kind of resistance. The Czechs were persuaded, by British-French arguments and by circumstances, not to fight for their country's independence. Whether that was a wise decision or not is hard to decide finally at this time. But the fact that military resistance was not made does not mean, apparently that the Czechs will not resist at all the Germanization for which Hitler believes them destined.

Here are some of the little things that are happening in Czechoslovakia, gathered together from many dispatches from that area:

In cafes and shops, clerks and waiters stand blankly when German soldiers or Brownshirts order anything. They pretend not to understand.

Many German patrons of such places have been victims of a sudden clumsiness of waiters who spilled hot soup over their uniforms.

If the soup is not spilled, it may come to the table so loaded with pepper that the Nazis choke, or perhaps a bent pin is found at the bottom of the bowl—all a regrettable accident, of course, but irritating none the less.

A Czech mayor, receiving a bill from the German authorities for food furnished the poor in the early days of the occupation, sent back a prompt bill for iron railings removed from barrack walls.

In Pilsen, acid was thrown on a detachment of passing German troops, injuring no one, but staining the uniforms and causing embarrassment to the Germans. More than 100 were arrested.

On Eduard Benes' birthday, buttonhole rosettes flowered throughout the Czech territory, mute evidence that the republic is not forgotten. Statues of Czech heroes have been prominently decked with flowers.

All these things can be very irritating indeed to an army of occupation. The evident intention is to goad the Germans into frankly taking over Czechoslovakia as part of the Reich. This, or harsh measures of suppression, would further alienate foreign opinion. Many Czechs probably figure that, having lost their independence anyway, they might as well go all the way, since Czechoslovakia as an integral part of Germany will be a greater handicap than Czechoslovakia as a "protectorate."

This sort of silent, stubborn, non-violent but exceedingly irritating attitude may in the long run prove a more effective defense of the Czech republic than its army could have been.

GEORGE H. JEWELL BOOSTS SOUTHERN SELECT HERE

Good Will Tour To Offer Opportunity For Big Vacation

At last the time has come to take that coveted vacation. A timely suggestion is to go to New York and see the great New York World's Fair, join the "Texas Ambassador's Good Will Tour," which leaves Texas August 1.

with a full hour spent in the home of George Washington. And then to New York where special honors will be given the Ambassador party by the New York World's Fair officials.

The sixth day the party will go to the famous Rockefeller Church on Riverside Drive. In the evening a tour of the city will be made which will take in the Bowers and Greenwich Village, also Chinatown, and up through Broadway's famed and sparkling theatre district to Harlem, the renowned negro center.

The circus "Big Top" is air conditioned this summer. Next we suggest ventilation of the agerite tent.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON — A far-reaching movement to tie the C. I. O. and the Townsend old-age pension group together into one enormous pressure organization that would fight for "progressive" social and labor legislation, as well as for higher old-age benefits, is quietly getting under way here.

What C. I. O. strategists have in mind is the idea that the "60 for 60" idea comes close enough to the Townsend idea to be acceptable to the organized old people. (A number of letters have already been received from Townsendites, incidentally, expressing vast enthusiasm for the plan.)

PARIS appeared. She had paused to select a particularly fetching negligee and to her hair a bit. She was looking her best.

"Why isn't this nice?" she said. "Just a little family party out here in the hall. Have I missed anything?"

J. Pemberton wheeled on her. "Do you know anything about horns?"

"Horns?" Barbara cogitated. "They're those little black things that fly around and sting you, aren't they? No, I . . ."

"Stop this nonsense!" bawled J. Pemberton exasperated. His face began to glow with a whole "This—this imbecile here . . ."

"Ron, dear," said Barbara irreverently, "your face is a sight."

The entire lack of sympathy accorded him was getting too much for Ronald. He exploded.

"Do you want to be a hornet's nest?" if you'd put it in a hornet's nest."

"Oh, did you do that? How careless, Ronald!"

Mrs. Ganning had withdrawn. She returned now with a bottle of witchhazel and some cotton and began to dab at Ronald's face in an abstract manner. There was a momentary silence, broken only by grunts from the afflicted twin.

"Well," said Barbara easily, "we're all here now. All but Wilfrid."

A sudden howl sounded from afar. It began as a low sweeping bay and then swelled to an agonized and prolonged scream. Upon the group in the hall, its effect was electric. As if by common consent they rose a foot in the air, then settled down again.

"God in Heaven!" exclaimed J. Pemberton Ganning. "What on earth was that?"

From the region of the stairs there came a tumult. Someone was ascending and ascending rapidly. A breathless hush fell over the congregation. Then Wilfrid burst into view, running as if all the fiends of Satan were breathing down the back of his pajamas. His eyes were wide, his hair disheveled, and in his right hand he carried a banjo which he brandished before him.

"I was wrong," said Barbara calmly. "Wilfrid is here."

MR. WILFRID PEYTON, wrapped in a blanket on the floor of the museum, never knew how long he slept. He was awakened by a heavy scraping sound as of some bulky object dragging itself across the floor. For a moment he lay with his eyes closed, still bewildering his senses. He opened his eyes. Above him loomed a great dark shape, an indistinct towering mass that seemed to creep slowly nearer.

Wilfrid sat bolt upright, the hair rising on his head and cold perspiration oozing from every pore in his body. He opened his mouth but no sound came, save a strangled and ineffectual gurgle. And then something occurred that gave him back his vocal powers. The top of the dark shape lighted suddenly, hideously. And Wilfrid, nerveless and chattering, saw bending over him in the darkness a horrible face whose eyes were deathlike hollows and whose long jaw widened in a terrible, gloating grin over snaggy, uneven teeth.

The howl that escaped Mr. Wilfrid Peyton would have been audible over the hosts of Bedlam. For one awful second he remained rooted to the floor. Then, fear stabbing his limbs to action, he scrambled to his feet. As he did so, his hand came in contact with something hard. It was the handle of his banjo and he seized it gratefully. Leaping up, he swung the banjo furiously at that grinning thing. There was a splintering crash and the lights went out suddenly, leaving the museum in pitch blackness. And Wilfrid departed from that place, bowing over an imprudent skeleton that happened to be lurking in the region of the doorway.

He gained the stairs without mishap, charged the door and came to anchor before the group in the upper hall, where he collapsed against the wall like a pricked balloon, spent, panting, and still clutching the banjo.

J. Pemberton Ganning raised his hands on high. He was sorely tried.

"Lord Almighty," he ejaculated. "Will somebody, just one person, have the goodness to tell me what is going on in this house?"

Nobody spoke. Wilfrid panted. Ronald groaned. J. Pemberton's voice rose in a dull roar.

"Boy," he boomed, addressing the hapless Wilfrid. "Will you tell me why you came thundering up these stairs shrieking loud enough to wake the dead? In God's name . . ."

"Pemberton," interrupted Mrs. Ganning, dabbing haphazardly at Ronald with witch-hazel soaked cotton, "mind your language, dear."

He wheeled upon her. "Language? To devil with the swimming pool and dangled their feet in the limpid, sun-streaked water.

"Darling," said Royalty Augustus Herring, "in sea-going attire you look even prettier than when dressed for land traffic. And I didn't believe that possible. How about one of those long, devoted, and potent kisses of yours?"

Babs pulled off her bathing cap and shook out her short black hair. "No. Not even a little one until you tell me how you did it."

"It's a long explanation," said Roy, "fraught with scientific references. Won't it keep till later? I'd rather talk about you."

"Well, keep this in mind. The dinosaur stands on a movable platform. All I had to do was push. And then, well, I put my flashlight in the thing's head. You know how hollow it is. And the effect was swell. Sort of like Dracula."

"But how . . ."

"Take it easy!" Roy's arm came around her. "Just get comfortable and I shall tell all. Comfortable now?"

"And that's that," he wound up, some time later. "But I shudder to think what would have happened if anything had gone wrong."

"Shall I tell you?" asked Barbara, rubbing her head against his chin.

"Yes, you little devil. Making me scheme like that."

"Well, I'd have told Ronald and Wilfrid to go and roll hoops."

"You would? Well, why didn't you do it in the first place?"

"Oh!" She smiled up at him. "I wanted to make you perform, that's all."

"Well, I'd have told Ronald and Wilfrid to go and roll hoops."

"Yes, mine. Do you know what seals do, Roy?"

"Sure. Chase fish."

"I'm a fish," cried Barbara, and tumbled into the pool.

Wilfrid simultaneously and then stopped, each disconcerted by the other.

Mrs. Ganning stifled a yawn. "Why, Pemberton, we can't do that. After all, I was at school with their mother."

"I don't give a rap," said J. Pemberton, bending a terrific glare upon her. "If you were at school with their entire family tree, I've said my say and I stick to it. They leave first thing in the morning." He swung on his heel. "I'm going to bed. And everyone else who isn't a blasted fool will do likewise."

THEY sat on the edge of the swimming pool and dangled their feet in the limpid, sun-streaked water.

HAPPY CLUES FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE!

Many of those painful, nagging, tired backache people blame on pills of opium are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day of about 3 pints of waste.

Prepared or messy passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 million of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter starts to pile up. These poisons may start nagging backache, rheumatic pain, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 41 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 million of kidney tubes flush out poisons.

SCOUT NEWS
BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA
CAMP BILLY GIBBONS

Scouting are urged to come to camp one or both Sundays. The camp dates are: July 12 thru 19 and July 20 thru 27.

A mess hall is under construction at Camp Billy Gibbons, camp for Boy Scouts of the Comanche Trail Council. A crew has been working at the camp the past two weeks, and Monday, June 26, the number of men and boys on the job was increased to twenty-two. A crew of this size or larger will be kept at work as long as they are needed to complete the structure in the shortest length of time possible.

The mess hall is being constructed of native stone in flagstone design. The dimensions of the building are forty feet by eighty feet. Thirty-two new tables for the hall are being made, each one having a seating capacity of eight people. These tables are larger than the ones used in the old mess hall, but due to the size of the new building there will be plenty of space for this number.

The structure, when completed, will be one for all Scouts, Scouters and friends of Scouting to be justly proud of and will add much to the efficiency of carrying out the campaign program each year.

Baron Smiths, who is an Eagle Scout and registered Scouter, will have charge of the Waterfront program this year. Mr. Smith came up through Scouting in this council and is engaged in the teaching profession. He will finish teaching in a summer school in Colorado, Texas, only a few days before he begins his work at Camp Billy Gibbons. Mr. Smith is one of the best swimming instructors in this part of the state.

The camp is located in the hill country on the Gibbons' 45,000 acre ranch 15 miles south of Richmond Springs, at the mouth of Brady Creek, on the San Saba river.
