The reduction of workers in the district of Fort Worth is effective Friday night. All over the nation, 200,000 workers are being released from rolls because of orders resulting from new legislation.

Dickinson stated that a company sanitation project in Callahan county is being closed down that a road project in the district now being completed will not be replaced by another.

France Forbids Munitions Plants To Be Shut Down

PARIS, July 8.—The government, acting under emergency powers, granted by parliament, today forbade any war materials factory to interrupt or diminish its production schedule during July, August and September.

Government leaders had intimated, in guarded statements, that the country's defense production was now rapidly approaching peak levels. Airplane production has been satisfactory that after reinforcing the home fleet, defense authorities have been able to strengthen the air force in North Africa.

Today's decree was intended to insure that the normal vacation season did not interfere with production in any class of defense.

LABOR UNION STILL PROTESTS ON WPA WAGES

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The American Federation of Labor and the Works Projects Administration, locked in controversy over termination of prevailing wage policies on WPA projects, today called a general conference for next week to study a nationwide series of relief strikes affecting more than 150,000 workers.

WPA Commissioner F. C. Harrington ordered state relief administrators to confer with him in Chicago Wednesday and Thursday, for review of all new policies incorporated by congress in the $1,735,000,000 relief bill for 1940.

The conference, while not called expressly as a result of the WPA work stoppages, will review the controversy over substitution of security wages for prevailing wage rates.

President William Green of the A. F. L., whose building trades units are leading the battle for restoration of prevailing wages, summoned presidents of all national and international A. F. L. unions to meet here Wednesday to take up the strike situation.

The Rev. Curry, now serving his first year at Meadowbrook, is well known in this city, having preceded the Rev. Ray A. Langston as presiding elder of the Cicero Methodist district. Rev. Curry and his family went to Cicero in 1934, served his four years, and last fall took up duties at Meadowbrook. Edwin and Mildred, son and daughter, are graduates of Cicero high school.

Eight classes of dairy cattle, including four Jersey and four Holstein, were judged. The youths were scheduled to return Saturday.

NO RELIEF FOR TEXANS SEEN BY FORECASTER

Cooling breezes and scattered thunderstorms brought temporary relief from the summer's scorching heat wave to mid-western states today, but with the prospect of soaring temperatures in another 36 to 48 hours.

There was no immediate relief in sight for the South, Southwest and East, sweltering under temperatures in the 90's and above.

New England, where 30 deaths from drownings and prostrations have been attributed to a four-day heat wave, expected relief in local thunderstorms by Sunday night.

The weatherman signed a death warrant for many week-end excursions in Texas when he predicted that the current record heat would continue through Sunday.

All the state, except the Panhandle, and parts of the far western plains, he said, will suffer temperatures at least as high as those of Friday and Saturday.

Slightly lowered temperatures will maintain in far West Texas, Sunday, also, it was forecast.

Records fell all over the state Saturday. Austin, with 105 degrees, Fort Worth with 104 and Dallas with 103, reported new records for the season and for the day of the year.

Scattered showers forecast for the upper Gulf coast Sunday may mean temporary relief in that area.

Muleshoe, on the western edge of the high plains, revealed a temperature of 58 degrees early Saturday as freakish conditions forced the mercury down from a Friday afternoon high of 102.

The summer "blizzard" also gave more comfortable temperatures to Lubbock, Plainview, Fort Stockton and other West Texas cities.

One death was reported in Texas. A negro died of sun stroke at Beaumont.

Ranger Masons To Confer A Masters Degree On Tuesday

Ranger Masons are planning for a large crowd Tuesday night at the temple on Rusk and Elm Streets when a Master Mason's degree will be conferred on one of the city's popular young men.

The new officers recently installed have several programs in the making from time to time which will be announced later.

One of the outstanding programs that is being worked out is the birthday celebration some time in the late fall.

All Masons in the vicinity of Ranger are invited and all members of the local body are urged to attend according to the announcement yesterday.

Lee O'Daniel today announced he had signed the road bond assumption bill, passed by the recent session of the Texas Legislature, under which the state will pay off more than $150,000,000 outstanding road debts of county and road districts and distribute to counties any surplus in a road bond fund.

England "Raided" By Air Fleet In Test Blackout

LONDON, July 8.—One third of England was "raided" tonight, by Royal Air Force planes in the greatest blackout by the British forces.

Fifteen counties of Southwest England, comprising about 16,000 square miles were in darkness from 11 p. m. until early Sunday morning, while, for the first time since the World War, lights along the Sussex and Kentish coastlines were extinguished.

The blackout came as the English read the statements of two key speakers who declared the country's anti-aircraft organization could now repel any fleet which an enemy could send.

The speakers were W. L. Wrixton, chairman of the river committee of the Port of London Authority, and Air Vice Marshal T. L. Leigh-Mallory.

Eastland To Note Gorman Festival

JOHN HART, FORMERLY OF COUNTY, CHIEF

Quarters To Open Shortly In Exchange Building At Eastland

Re-establishment of a field office of the Railroad Commission at Eastland was assured Saturday in messages received by Eastland officials from Railroad Commissioners E. O. Thompson and Chairman Lon A. Smith.

The assurance that the office would be re-established followed conferences and correspondence between the commissioners and city officials.

John Hart, a deputy supervisor at Midland now, former Eastland County sheriff, will be transferred to be in charge of the office at Eastland. He will arrive shortly. Offices will be maintained on the fifth floor of the Exchange Bank Building.

Hart is well known in the county as he was a long time resident of this section previously.

The field office at Eastland was discontinued January 15 of this year.

In the future oil operators of this and adjacent counties may handle their business with the commission office at Eastland instead of Abilene, where much of the business was transacted since Jan. 15.

Officials expressed gratification over re-establishment of the field office and said that it fulfills a great need of oil operators in this section.

The cooperative attitude of the Railroad Commission, especially Commissioners Smith and Thompson, was praised.

The Contrast Again

The complete contrast between the European way and the American way is evident once again in the news from Slovakia that the government has abolished coeducation in the high schools and is urging that the girls marry instead of taking up careers.

This is indeed turning the clock back. We in America believe that a woman should be educated, so that as a free human being she may have a choice of the kind of life she wishes to lead.

But Slovakia is now under German "protection." That means that the German idea dominates there. Just as Germany exported racial consciousness to Italy, and anti-Semitism to Czechoslovakia, so it now exports to Slovakia its medieval ideas on the position of women.

At about the time this news came out, Mrs. Paul Henry, national organizer of Pro America, Republican women's organization, was giving an interview. And what she said, without any attempt to comment on the Slovakian situation, makes nevertheless a perfect comment on it from the American point of view.

"Women's place is no longer exclusively in the home," she said. "The only way a woman can protect her home is by building a firm foundation outside of it in civic, community, and church affairs."

And there you have it. These homes, to which Slovakian women are supposed to devote themselves so early and so exclusively, are subject to the kind of world in which they have their being. It is idle for such women to build such homes, only to see them torn asunder by forces in which they have had no voice, no influence, forces of which they have not even any knowledge.

Often the world is perplexed to know just which path to choose in its effort to stumble forward on paths of progress. There is just one path which seems to offer no hope at all. That is the path backward to the darkness and unenlightenment up which humanity has for so many centuries been painfully crawling.

More than enough automobiles were operated in the U. S. last year to carry the entire population. And many of them on the bumpers.

A fellow is walking sideways from Colorado to the New York Fair. Maybe he's getting in practice to walk by the free performances in front of the girl shows.

SERIAL STORY

GHOST DETOUR

CHAPTER I

THE two girls were riding at an easy gallop. The breeze flipped a silken scarf out behind Christine's neck, like a knight's banner, and Roselee's blond curls were airy. But the girls didn't care. Nobody could see them; in fact there wasn't another human being within 10 miles of them except for Roselee's family back at the rancho, and the cars that oo-oo-o-o-oo-ed here along the transcontinental highway. They reined in.

Roselee didn't bother to dismount. She just leaned down from the saddle and opened the big rural mail box from Warrior's back. Warrior was huge—the made Roselee look even smaller than she was—but he was servile to her; he stood champing his bits. "Letter from home, Christy," Roselee told her friend. "Here." "Thanks."

"One for me—let's read."

ROSELEE hooked a leg over her saddle horn for comfort. Here was a business envelope but the return address excited her. "Dear Miss Dale: This letter is to inform you that the directors of the Western Metals and Minerals Corporation voted yesterday to accept your offer of $500 cash for the remains of the community once known as Goldcrest, Arizona. Deed to the property, which includes the mining claims and all buildings and other structures thereon, is included herewith, and receipt for your check is attached.

"Some of the directors were frankly curious to know what you, a young woman, expected to do with this so-called ghost town. President Felch was good enough to suggest that you might realize a modest return from prospecting

GAS COMPANY PASSES THIRTIETH MILESTONE

Thirty years ago at Austin, the Secretary of State authorized incorporation of Lone Star Gas Co. for the purpose of producing and transporting natural gas from distant fields to towns and cities miles away. At that time this was considered a hazardous undertaking. Fortunes, business reputations, and even lives were staked on that bet against failure.

The charter for this company was obtained by L. B. Denning, now president of the company, and his associates. They built the first long distance pipe line in Texas, from Petrolia in Clay county to Fort Worth and Dallas, and despite the misgivings of many people the first delivery of gas through this pipe line became an accomplished fact when natural gas was turned into the mains of Fort Worth in February, 1910, and in Dallas two months later.

That was the origin of the Lone Star Gas System which today serves 29,000 homes in Texas and Oklahoma and this year celebrates its thirtieth anniversary. The 126 mile pipe line has increased to 4,700 miles of pipe, and where once there were only 15 to 25 employees, today there are more than 3,000 watching over the gas service.

Mr. Denning, however, can still recall the struggles of the little company during its early years. He remembers particularly the dark days of the World War, when new sources of supply were unobtainable and customers complained each winter about the lack of pressure in their stoves. With pride he recalls the days in 1924 when experiments conducted by company engineers developed a successful method of utilizing gas from oil wells. This, with the company's ceaseless prospecting for new fields, has increased supplies from the single Petrolia field to 46 fields located in the Panhandle, Southern Oklahoma, West Texas and East Texas. Twenty-one compressor stations keep constant watch over the pressures which insure dependable gas service in more than a quarter million Texas and Oklahoma homes.

REHOBOTHAM'S foolish decision was all the more amazing in view of a fact that down in Egypt there was a refugee who had escaped from Israel because of rebellion, and who was ready to seize the opportunity to return and lead a fresh revolt. Rehobotham arrived.

The times were ripe for action. Ten tribes revolted and made Rehobotham their king, and from now on the history of Israel is the history of a divided kingdom—the kingdom of Judah in the south with two tribes adhering to the rule of Rehobotham, and the kingdom of Israel in the north with 10 tribes adhering to the rule of Rehobotham.

But we shall find that the history of the divided kingdom is very much along the line of the history that made the division—bad judgment, lack of regard for justice, betrayal of the rights and liberties of the people, bringing down upon both kings and people the inevitable consequences of wrong courses and misdeeds.

It is not long until we shall see the northern kingdom swept away with the tribes dispersed, to be known afterwards in history as "the lost 10 tribes"—with all manner of speculations concerning them, the most remarkable of which is that which has sought to identify them with the Anglo-Saxons. The southern kingdom, too, we shall find later, in exile, carried off to Babylon in tragic experiences that brought to light much of the spiritual glory of Israel.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON

WASHINGTON.—Few noticed it at the time, but the Social Security amendments, just voted by the House, carry with them the seeds of a great deal of trouble for the not-distant future.

The House put the amendments through by the almost unanimous vote of 361 to 2. It liberalized old age insurance benefits, deferred the tax increase that was due to go into effect next January, and sent the revisions along to the Senate with everybody happy.

But it made practically inevitable a thundering tax increase—a new bulge in the annual deficit—a few years from now.

Old age insurance is financed by a 2 per cent payroll tax, collected half from the employer and half from the employee. This was to have gone to 3 per cent next January. That boost was canceled; the tax is now due to jump to 4 per cent in 1943, 5 per cent in 1946, and 6 per cent in 1949.

Meanwhile, benefit payments were boosted. Payments began next Jan. 1, instead of in 1942, as originally scheduled. Furthermore, benefits are to be based on the beneficiary's average wage rather than his total tax contribution.

Summed up, this means that, during the next 15 years, the government will pay in old age insurance just less than $15,000,000,000, as compared with the $6,500,000,000 it would pay if the law were not amended. But while adding to the outgo, the amendments knock $825,000,000 off the money the government will collect in payroll taxes during 1940, 1941, and 1942.

At the end of 1955, benefit payments will begin to exceed payroll tax collections. Originally the

Ranger Football Field Is Being Prepared For Fall

More than 40 loads of barnyard manure are now being spread over the football field at Bulldog Stadium in Ranger, in an effort to have the best football turf in this part of the country before the playing season opens next fall.

The manure is being spread by hand, to cover the entire field, and water is being applied daily to the field, which is now in better condition than it has been in the three years of its existence.

With constant attention throughout the summer it is believed that the turf will be in perfect condition before the fall football season.

H. C. Wilkinson, school tax assessor-collector, stated Saturday while inspecting the field, that the manure had been secured from several sources, some of it being hauled as far as 10 miles in an effort to secure the best in this part of the country, with all of it being free from grass and weed growth and seeds.

The bath house at the field has been completed, with the exception of connecting plumbing fixtures and lights, and the entire stadium will be in ideal condition for the practice and playing season, Wilkinson stated Saturday.

A Man Who Made a Foolish Choice

Text: I Kings 12:1-5, 12:17, 29

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

ISRAEL, which has given to the world the best of its religion, is the source also of the best of its politics. It is interesting to see the extent to which democracy, which we might regard as a modern thing, roots back into the Old Testament and into the life of the Jewish people.

The first king, Saul, was approved of the people, and future kings had also to have this approval. There are many indications in the Old Testament story that the people were jealous of their rights and liberties. Solomon had had a glorious reign, not much of the glory had been based in heavy burdens upon the people of taxation and enforced labor. Now, when Solomon was gone and his son, Rehobotham, was about to ascend the throne, the unrest and discontent of the people broke out in demands that their burdens should be lessened and that Rehobotham should rule with greater consideration for the welfare of his people.

Rehobotham took counsel of two groups of advisors. When he consulted the older and more mature men, whose judgment was based upon experience, they advised him to yield to the popular demand and to establish his rule in justice and in the confidence of the people. However, younger advisors urged him to assert himself and to make it plain that he was going to rule. Rehobotham foolishly listened to the latter counsel and gave the people a stern reply. He was not even content to say that he would follow the policies of his father, Solomon. But he indicated that he would make his authority and his rule even sterner and more exacting. "My father chastised you with whips," he said, "I will chastise you with scorpions."

It is the rule that many a foolish leader has followed in the course of history. The instructor of George III of England always admonished him, "George,

That connection, our correspondent says, is the location of the old stock safe in the Goldcrest Bank, but it is valueless now, but the combination: 12-14-18-25.

Respectfully yours,

Secretary, Western M. & M. Corporation.

Dale turned to her in high elation.

Here—read it! I—gee, I wish—come on, let's see these right now! You mind being late for dinner, you? Honest?"

guest didn't answer until had finished reading. Then turned in her saddle to look at the smaller girl, and smiling sweetly. The horses becoming again.

Now listen, Roselee," Christine "are you serious about my of this? I think it's a per-darling idea, but after all an outsider. You needn't be obligated to invite me in."

Christine spoke earnestly, "Christine were pals all through grad, weren't we? We got degrees together recently, didn't we? We can still be part-darling."

You can—we can adjust the difference. You're in!"

Roselee spurred Warrior and followed Christine. They stayed of pavement of course, but they near to it. They read a sign. An arrow pointing west said "HOLLER DAM, 94 MILES" and one pointing east said "GRAND CANYON, 117 MILES." A smaller sign on the side said this was "U. S. HIGHWAY 66" and the girls knew it was a main transcontinental

BUT the girls could see no other evidence of civilization. Mohave county, in northwestern Arizona, is still about the least settled portion of the nation; three Indians and a cowboy together there amount to a crowd, and even they may get lost in the rugged desert expanses, the magnificent blue mountains and foothills.

"Since you've never been here I'll take you the longer way this time," Roselee explained. "I'll show you first where the old side road turned off this highway. It's barely visible, but it could be opened again. Just a few Joshua trees have grown up on it."

"I've never been in a ghost town," Christine called, spurring to keep alongside her friend. "Four miles, you said?"

"It's only two off the highway." "That shouldn't be hard on tourists."

"It's perfect!" Roselee declared. "Just enough to make them think they are roughing it — with a thrill at the end of the trail."

"I'm thrilled in anticipation, Roselee. Let's—let's go see the old bank first, when the robbers were. Want to?"

"Okay. It has barred windows and—and you simply must visit the jail! It was carved from the side of a rock mountain. Cut out of rock. A real dungeon."

"Goodness!" Christine was impressed.

They had to slow down because the going was rocky.

"It's picturesque!" declared Christine, referring to the wild landscape around them.

"It surely is!" Roselee said, thinking of Goldcrest. "It's a perfect ghost town if ever there was one."

That was true. The girls, Christine especially, were doubly impressed when finally they came up the mountain gulch and rode down its one main street.

UNCONSCIOUSLY they began speaking in awed tones, as one might use in a cemetery. The place really was funeral. Homes cracked or split. Weeds and dead grass showed inside rooms, poking through rotted floors. A great ore dump loomed in the distance. Nothing moved—save a jackrabbit that leaped away with startling suddenness and emphasized the deadness of the surroundings. Dirt and dust were everywhere but the wooden forms were all visible so that the place was a movie set from a past century, yet was genuine, real. Many of the old store signs were still legible, after four or five decades. An old buggy, broken; several wagon wheels; hitching rails; bottomless chairs; saloon bars; cracked mirrors; stoves; rusted bed springs; all noted by the girls.

They had hitched their horses now and they walked up a ragged plank sidewalk, almost furtively. Their own shadows glanted long and grotesque against the store fronts so as to seem alive in the waning sun. The hour was late and twilight already was hovering when they came to the bank that had been Goldcrest's center of commerce and life.

"Let's just take a peep in before we have to go back," Christine said.

They moved on tiptoe, pointing, talking, speculating, communing with the storied past. Both girls were excited.

Because of the paragraph in the letter, they pushed through a corridor to a dim back room and came to the bank vault. It's massive steel door was rusty but intact. The vault, as with the jail, had been set back into the rock cliff of the canyon.

"Look—the vault door's closed!" exclaimed Roselee in surprise, pointing. "I wonder if it's locked?"

"You bet it's locked!" declared another voice—not Christine's! It was a masculine voice, not unlovely but nevertheless terrifying now. "I've been wondering if you came to open it."

CHAPTER II

LOT of women in history have fainted—or fainted—for old. They wanted to impress somebody with their frailty, which is a stylish back in the buggy-buckle era.

It is physically possible for a young woman to faint in absolute reality, and Christine and Roselee Dale almost did only their abounding curiosity, plus an inability to flee, and them to remain standing long, freezing moment of terror passed even before they could faint! Finally they let out a secret yell.

"Gosh!" said the man, himself fainted now.

They saw his head then, a fine-ling head above the half wall that had been a bank teller's cage.

"Say, I'm sorry!" he went on, "I guess I scared the lights out of you. I should've shown myself sooner."

"Who—who—who in the world are you?" Roselee finally managed to speak, staring spellbound.

"I'm alive, and harmless!" he assured them, smiling and coming down the doorway to join them.

"I was snooping on you, you know. I thought you would be nobody else."

He was a big fellow, bareheaded and in shirt sleeves, tieless with baggy pants. He had black hair, and a long, luscious mustache.

"Did you—expect—somebody?" Roselee pointed at him.

Christine could only swat, and finally exhale in tremendous relief from her fear.

"Well, yes," he admitted. "There's been tracks here, and I was sure I still am."

Tracks, Roselee echoed, still awed. "Fright made Roselee's blue eyes larger and more lifelike still. The young man seemed to discover them."

Yump. But they were men's tracks. Here in the dirt and dust he bank, leading to the vault, where you riding up in the distance. I thought you'd be—there. I had in here to see who they were—were. See? And it did not but to be frightened, but you awful sorry I frightened you. I wouldn't have done it for this. I blunder a lot."

"Do you?" This was inadequate, Roselee was still shaking a little, appraising him. The mustache fellow was strangely handsome, she saw. He stood with his smart, hands on his hips, smiling down at her. She couldn't see the thought that some about him looked familiar.

"You—uh—live here?" Christine asked.

"Business, no doubt!" Christine was prone to speak a little bit to him, now. "What business?"

"That is—well, insurance. You see—well, it is—say, what's your name?"

The girls looked at each other, they were still flushed with excitement. Roselee took up the question. "What's your name?"

"I'm Roselee Dale, and I'm present my friend Christine Bancroft."

"I'm happy to see you, Roselee," Roselee exclaimed, softly.

"What?"

"I just—was thinking you hadn't said how the here, it business is, or why you're here."

"I don't think I'd better say why," he stated, seriously.

"You are a trespasser," Roselee said.

"So are you both!" He looked stern. "I could go to the owners and have you thrown off the property. Or I—I could throw you off myself!"

The girls gasped, and looked significantly at each other.

"Do we have to fight?" he asked then, with a new smile. "I'd rather invite you to dinner. Honest, I can scrape up enough for all three. It's pretty lonesome here. I—I keep batch over yonder in the Ace High Hotel."

"Batch?"

"Sure. Since last Friday, I've been awfully busy."

"Herming?" Christine turned her own pretty eyes directly on him.

"Waiting for Franklin. He's due tonight or tomorrow."

"Um. Another crusty old hermit, no doubt?"

"Franklin's my roommate in college. Franklin Larraway. He went by to see his folks first, and bring some things we need here."

"White sheets and such, to scare people with."

He smiled at her. "No. Frank's going to study. And I have a serious job. I've loafed some because I've been curious about that vault since I found it locked and saw the tracks here. I have opened every other door in Goldcrest. This one defies me, and I can't stand it."

"You can't stand being defied," Christine echoed him.

He looked it, but he was surprised at her statement.

"Well, you know what I mean, it said, lamely. "I'm curious, is all."

"Naturally."

"I'll skip over for my flashlight and show you what I mean," he said, boyishly. "Wait a sec."

HE ran swiftly out and all at once the girls were alone again with the bank ghosts of yesterday. They didn't like it. Details of the building had slipped into night gloom, so they walked to a barred window and peered out into the street that had been de-

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those grating, nagging, painful backache people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking away acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people give about 3 quarts a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent of empty passages with astringent and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 tubes of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 tubes of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Barbecued Chicken Will Be Sold By St. Paul Church

Barbecued chickens will be sold today at 11:30 at the St. Paul Baptist Church (colored) at a price that will be attractive to everyone, as it is very little above the price of live chickens.

The chickens will average about two pounds each, it was stated Saturday by members of the church.

Proceeds from the sale of the barbecued chickens will go into the fund used to help maintain the church, which is one of the most active colored churches in this part of the state.

Prompt service has been provided for at the cafeteria, which adjoins the church, and where the barbecued chickens will be sold. The sale will start promptly at 11:30 and will continue as long as the chickens last.

Patronage of both colored and white friends of the church and all who enjoy chicken barbecue has been urged by members of the congregation.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH.
G. Alfred Brown, Pastor
The First Methodist Church school begins at 9:45 this morning and everyone is urged to be on time.

At the morning service, beginning at 11:00 o'clock, the choir will sing the anthem, "God is a Spirit," and the pastor will preach on the subject of "God's Workmen."

The Epworth League Services will be at 7:30 and the evening service at 8:00 o'clock. At the latter service the pastor will again preach, using the subject, "Christ or Barabbas?"

With only three remaining in the present series of mid-week services, the picture travogue following the Bible study Wednesday evening, will be in Paris, France.
