LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 15.—Mrs. Lillian M. Knox, who was once tried on charges of murdering her husband, a wealthy Texas lumberman, was in critical condition today after a heart attack when she was arrested in a downtown department store after attempting to cash a check for $75.

Papers in her possession identified her as the widow of Hiram Knox, millionaire lumber and oil man, who was shot in his sleep in 1922.

In case parents are unable to make personal application, they should notify the county school superintendent and he will call on those who are unable to make personal application, Williams stated.

Trade Barriers Are Becoming Problem Of United States

WACO, Texas.—Trade barriers between the States is fast becoming one of the major problems of the United States, Burris C. Jackson of Hillsboro, Chairman of the State-Wide Cotton Committee of Texas, said here as he appointed a Trade Barrier Section of the Committee to cooperate with the Southern Council of Governors and the Department of Agriculture in an effort to get trade restrictions removed.

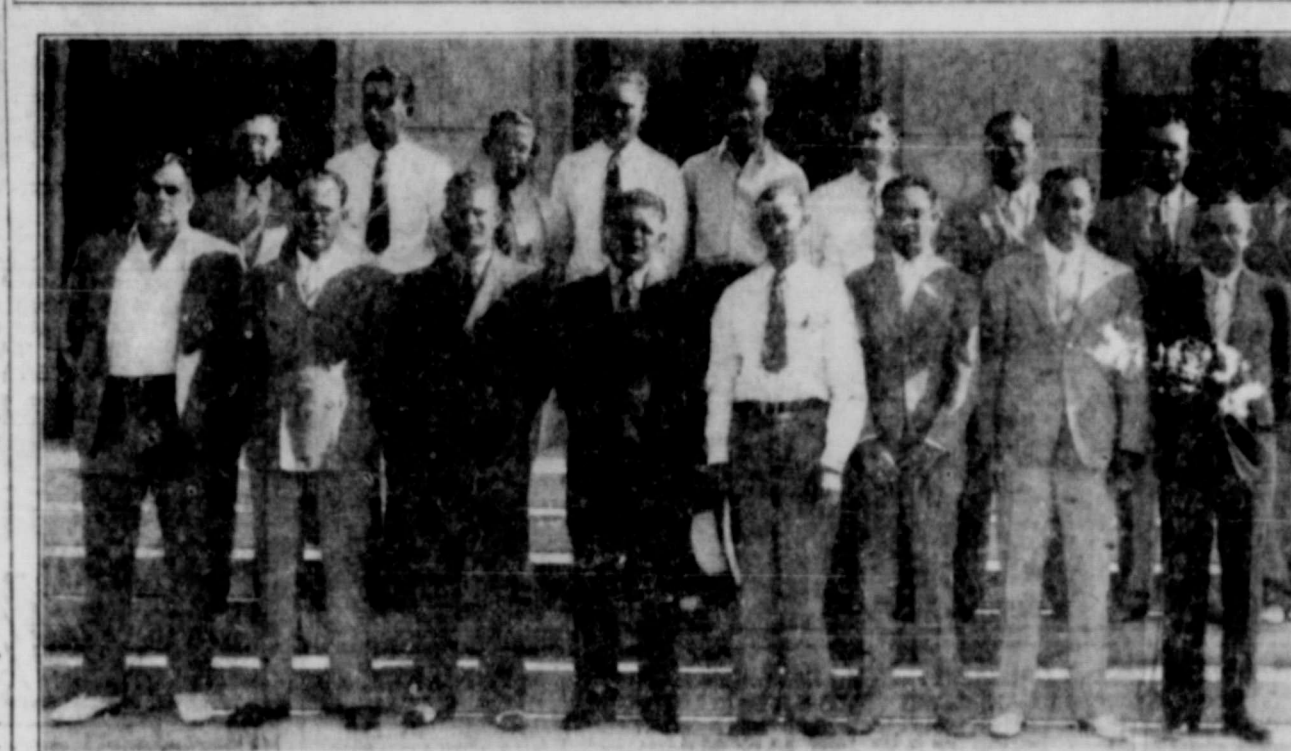

Phillip Tucker of Fort Worth was named Chairman of the Section. W. F. Pendleton of Dallas and Dean E. J. Kyle of College Station are Vice Chairmen, while A. L. Ward of Dallas is Secretary. An educational campaign as to the dangers of raising additional barriers against trading in this country will be started by this section of the State Committee at once, Jackson said.

In making the announcement Mr. Jackson made the following statement: "The Trade Barrier question has developed into one of the major problems facing the commercial life of America today. It is not only an all-important matter to the cotton industry, but it is becoming a number of major industries. A study of the situation shows that the restrictions of trade among States has increased to an alarming degree. If the present trend continues, it is entirely possible that there will be no such thing as free trade between the States. Such a condition is intolerable in the United States."

Expect Figures On Allotment Soon

The Law Lid Blows Off Completely

People used to have funny idea that there was a limit to the things you could do by law. Of course we know better now.

You can do anything by law. Why, not long ago we had a law telling people what they couldn't drink.

There is no longer any limit. Illinois is pioneering. It is on the point of passing a law forbidding picture houses to show double features.

This of course opens the way for a lot of new laws which nobody had dared to think about before. Let your imagination go a little:

How about a law that there must be not less than three, not more than five shrimps in a shrimp cocktail? This is practically a tradition, anyway, like the third term.

How about a law against any one woman spending more than six hours in a beauty parlor in any one day?

How about a law providing that a vegetable plate shall always consist of equal dabs of spinach, buttered beets, carrots, and peas?

How about a law providing that all restaurants serving chop suey must publish on the menu its exact contents?

How about a law prohibiting doubleheader baseball games?

How about a law prohibiting people from showing more than once those movies they made on the vacation to Geesick Falls?

In short, how about a law?

Well, how about it? You might think, in your innocence, that the question of how many pictures a movie was going to show would be a business question, purely between the people who make and sell the movies, the people who show them, and the people who go to see them.

That would be the old-fashioned view. So purely private a matter as this, a matter so little tinged with the public interest, would scarcely have been considered a matter behind which to throw iron regulation and the majesty of the law.

But Illinois is on the point of declaring otherwise. Do the kids love to sit all afternoon watching an interminable show? No matter—the law knows best. Do the elders want to drift in, catch a quick show, and beat it? No matter, the law knows best.

Any such law as that now proposed by Illinois would certainly seem destined straight for a long career in the courts, which will then be faced with the difficult task of determining precisely how much movie the citizen is entitled to see for his quarter.

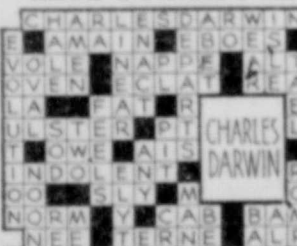

Louisiana State University: the prexy vanishes, a tiger is taken to football games. Ah, at last—there's that school we've seen so many times in the movies.

Parking Meters Are Source of Revenue
By United Press
FORT WORTH, Tex.—Parking meters, greeted with skepticism when they were first installed, are proving themselves an unexpected source of municipal income. City officials report that income from 1,174 parking meters on downtown streets in Fort Worth now approximates $100,000 a year. Operating expenses of the meter system amount to about $6,000 a year, and the city has invested $65,000 in the meters. Which leaves a tidy profit for the city treasury. Since the first of the meters was installed in 1936, the local government has realized a total of $283,373—made up from 3,460 tickets—from parking meters.

SERIAL STORY GHOST DETOUR

BY OREN ARNOLD

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday Bancroft sleeps in the old bank, waiting for the return of the owner of the $12,000. One night, however, while the girls are talking, they hear steps at the main door and then a cry as if someone were in agony when Bancroft disappears into the old jail with the money bag.

CHAPTER IX

WHEN Dick Bancroft had told his friend Franklin that he meant to sleep on guard near the bank vault, Franklin's objections had been overruled. Dick, too, had persisted in his policy of watchful waiting. Sooner or later the robber would call for his money and Dick expected to be right there waiting for him. For several days the work of preparing the ghost town and then of showing it to first customers had kept everybody extremely busy, but while he worked Franklin Larroway did a deal of thinking.

Wherefore, when the routine seemed firmly established, Franklin found a reason for going in to the county seat, which was a small town several miles away. He drove his own second-hand but dependable old car.

He arrived in town at night and went directly to the sheriff's office but the sheriff was not present.

"Why, he won't be down till tomorrow, less'n there's trouble," the night deputy said. "You got some difficulty on hand?"

"No, no sir, no hurry. I'll drop in tomorrow morning."

Franklin had an hour before bedtime then, and so he wandered up the small street of the town, circled courthouse square and came to a drugstore that was open. Just because he was young and lonesome and hungry he ordered a soda. While he drank it he gazed at the "drug" store's stock in trade; apparently this consisted of almost everything but drugs, and Franklin found himself interested.

He remembered he had $22 in his pocket. Roselee had begun paying salaries now. He eyed a show case not far from his soda counter stool.

"Indian made, eh?" he spoke to the clerk.

"Yes sir, best bead work in the west. Look at some?"

The clerk took out a beautifully ornamented purse, a lady's purse of white calfskin with bead designs. "Fourteen-fifty," the clerk said.

Franklin felt like splurging. He bought it.

For $4 more he bought a silver ring set with a stone of petrified wood that looked like a blazing forest fire, itself a precious bit of Indian jewelry. Then he remembered that he had to sleep and eat, so he stopped buying and went to a hotel.

At 8 next morning he sat with the sheriff and held a set of small photographs out for that officer to inspect.

"Them's fingerprints," the older man said.

"Yes sir," "Whose?" "I don't know, sir. That's what I came to ask you about. Can you help me?"

"Well now, son, this is a small county; in population, that is. We don't rightly go in for much identification work. Still, I keep a sort of file. You expect maybe these is some criminals?"

"Yes sir. Perhaps—perhaps a robber's. Maybe a bank robber or something."

"Where'd you get 'em?" Franklin smiled disarmingly. "Do you mind if I don't tell that yet, sir? I wouldn't want to go off half-cocked about it."

"Now, not a tall. But did you take 'em yourself? You an officer, son?"

"No sir. I mean, I'm not an officer. I'm a Texan who just came to Arizona a while back. Out of school at El Paso. But I know a little about photography, and have a small camera. Fingerprints aren't hard to photograph, once you know how. Camera work is sort of a hobby with me, you see."

The sheriff was already thumbing a big album. In the book were pasted dozens, perhaps hundreds, of pictures of wanted men, or of descriptions of wanted men. Often these pictures and descriptions included fingerprint photos, too.

"I c'n match 'em if I see any like you got, but you just study these along with me and let's see what we find."

But the office telephone rang then, and the sheriff had a call to an accident scene across town. He stood up, donning his huge sombrero.

"You just make yourself at home, son. Study this book till I git back and see what you can find."

"Thank you, sir. I will." For nearly an hour Franklin searched. It wasn't hard to compare his photographed fingerprints—he had taken them from both the door and the inside of the bank vault in Goldcrest, without letting the others there know it—with those of wanted men and women in the sheriff's big book.

But the search availed nothing for a wearisome while. Then he turned a page and all at once knew he had scored!

ONE look at the printed bulletin on it was enough. He had already virtually memorized the enlarged prints he carried, and at once he recognized their duplicate. A thumb and three fingers loomed unmistakably there above type notice and under a man's portrait. Above it all was a large heading:

REWARD

"$1000 will be paid for the capture, dead or alive, of Carl Quait, pictured here, wanted for pay: robbery in Los Angeles in December, 1938, and for subsequent murder while escaping prison. The reward will be doubled if any major portion of the stolen money is recovered also, or for information leading to its recovery, regardless of capture of the outlaw. Quait is a man of fair complexion, 5 feet 8 inches tall."

The description was detailed, and the bulletin showed a clear front and side view of the man's face, sharp prison photos. Franklin's pulse quickened with excitement. He had the two sets of fingerprints with minute care, over and over. Unmistakably they matched. Every other detail fit in, too. The missing money, the first flight in an automobile toward the east, and subsequent capture of the man in Salt Lake City, Quait's past history of trouble in western mining camps, everything.

"And now, by George, he's running loose!" Franklin whispered to himself there at the sheriff's desk. "With all the publicity Goldcrest has been getting, he's sure to try for that money. He's just bound to, any moment! He'll think he had the vault safely locked, but he'll be afraid the new owners will try to have it forced open. He probably picked the lock himself—no, maybe he knew the combination. It says here he worked once for the Western M. and M! Good jumping grief!"

He sat there five minutes more, thinking, gazing at Quait's pictured face. He'd have to hurry back and warn Roselee and Christine and Dick. Some inner sense of duty and conviction told him he ought to wait and lay the whole matter before the sheriff; but another urge—perhaps it was adventure lure and youthful self-confidence—told Franklin to keep his knowledge secret for a while longer at least.

He left the sheriff's office and started back to Goldcrest in a hurry.

Asa: A Life of Trust

Text: II Chronicles 14:2-12

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D. Editor of Advance We ought to study these lessons with a very definite purpose to apply to modern rule and rulers all that we are told concerning ancient kings. Here in our lesson we have the story of a good king, who tried to do what was right all his days. He realized that the religion of a people is the most important thing in its life. The religion of Israel, as we can clearly see, was in its moral content and in its spiritual ideas far in advance of the pagan idolatries of surrounding peoples. Yet Israel in this little land that the people occupied was always subject to the influences from these stronger, more powerful nations. There was always a tendency toward idolatry, and where the people fell into idolatry it meant not merely the worship of false gods, but it also meant the bringing into the life of the community of foul and licentious practices. It was the moral and physical health and welfare of the people as well as matters of faith that was at stake. ONE of the first things Asa did, therefore, was to take away the foreign altars and destroy all the setup and accompaniments of idolatrous worship. At the same time he urged upon the people positive fulfillment of the law and commandments of God. But his vigor and integrity were not manifested entirely in the sphere of religion. He proved a strong and effective leader in the defense of the nation, in building up fortified cities, and in giving the nation peace. It was no wonder that, under his rule, the kingdom of Judah built well and prospered.

BRUCE CATTON - IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—A quiet and friendly smile has managed to create no end of embarrassment for the ruling politicians here.

The man is Senator Carl A. Hatch of New Mexico, and he created the embarrassment simply by suggesting that the country discard the spoils system.

That he now admits with a grin, was simply whistling to keep his courage up. He was as good as his word, though—and this spring, somewhat to his surprise the Senate did pass his broadened bill, and passed it unanimously.

He isn't especially surprised by the fact that the Democratic administration is trying desperately to block the bill, even though Democratic platforms since 1874 have denounced the spoils system.

"If you'll check the history of political parties," he says dryly "you will find that when either party is out of power it is most vigorous in condemning the spoils system—but it's strangely silent when in power."

Senator Hatch decided to strike his blow; just politics at its best, when it comes to New Mexico. He believes the political parties themselves, as well as the nation as a whole, would be better off if the system were ended, and although it happened to be Republican party politics in New Mexico that first opened his eyes to the system's evils, he adds that "I've seen things happen in my own party that made the idea stronger."

One thing that makes it tough for opponents of his measure is that the country as a whole goes for it so heartily. Senator Hatch says the newspapers can take a big bow on that.

"If this bill becomes a law," he says, "a whole lot of the credit belongs to the press of the country."

Ranger Ice Plant Wins First Place In Sales Contest

J. W. Meador, manager of the Southern Ice Company plant in Ranger, has received word from the company's office in Dallas that the Ranger plant employee won first prize, during June, for the greatest increase in refrigerator sales for the month. The Ranger plant attained a record of reaching 227 per cent of the June quota.

Towns which exceeded 100 per cent of their quota, but which did not come within 58 per cent of equalling the Ranger plant record, were Hope, Ark., Little Rock, Ark., Midland, Tex., Prescott, Ark., McAlester, Okla., Sherman, Denison, Texarkana and Fort Worth. A check for $27.50, the prize offered for first place, has been mailed to the Ranger plant, and Meador said that the money would be used to give the plant employees a big barbecue.

Those who participated in and helped win the prize are Roy Dawn, Elbert Young, Jody Stevens, R. D. Dawn, Marvin Witt, Gary Grider, John Young and Robert Stevens.

J. E. Young of Ranger won an individual prize of $4.50 for being among the first nine salesmen in the district in refrigerator sales.

The Ranger plant, in addition to leading in June, was second in the contest in May, establishing a record of 170 per cent of their quota.

Lions Will Hold Annual Convention On July 18 to 21

Advance registrations are the largest in Lions convention history, and attendance is conservatively estimated to pass the 12,000 mark.

making it the largest service club in the United States and Canada, with nearly 8,500 clubs and 125,000 members.
The annual convention to be held in Pittsburgh will celebrate this year of expansion. The only comparable year in the past 25 years was 1917-18.

Delegations to the convention will arrive on special trains, by motorcade, and quite a number by airplanes. The president of the Lions Club of Ponce, Puerto Rico, will fly his own plane to Pittsburgh for the four-day convale.

Special trains are scheduled from Texas, California, New York, New England, Florida and Illinois, and most of the specials will carry high school bands with them to participate in the annual juvenile band contests to be conducted as part of the four-day program.

An unusual feature of the convention program is to be a "lion beauty parade"—of real, live four-legged lions. The entries will be youthful, not more than eight months of age, and there will be eight of them, coming from as many sections of the country.

The "beauty parade" is being conducted in conjunction with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures, and will climax a two-month, nationwide hunt by Lions Clubs for a lion cub to serve as understudy eventually replace M-G-M's famous Leo. The winning cub will be signed up immediately by M-G-M, given star rating, and taken to New York for Lions Day at the World's Fair, July 22. From there he will be flown direct to Hollywood to begin his movie career.
