In addition to seeing various other attractions, NYA youths will visit their own exhibit. The NYA display is housed in the National youth administration building, formerly known as the Christian Science Monitor building, donated to NYA by the Christian Science church. Displays include large photographic murals, articles of various descriptions produced at NYA resident centers and workshops, and perspective sketches and drawings of NYA work projects being operated in Texas. Scale models of actual buildings erected in Texas by NYA workers in which cotton insulation is employed have been set up for demonstration purposes.

Cotten Is Appointed To Culberson Post

AUSTIN, Oct. 20.—State Senator Clay Cotten of Palestine today accepted appointment as director of the gas utilities division of the Texas Railroad commission. Cotten will succeed Olin Culberson, who said yesterday he was "fired."

"NEW DEAL" DECLARED BY TIPTON TO KEEP DISCIPLINE ON TEAM

Coach Bill Tipton of Ranger high school today announced that several of the members of the previous starting lineup would not be started tonight in the Mountaineer-Bullfrog football game.

In making the announcement Tipton stated that he did not have any regular first and second teams, but that boys who trained hardest and showed most fight and spirit, both in training and in games, were the ones who started, and the ones considered first team members.

In commenting on the game Tipton stated that he had not, as yet, decided who would be starters, and added that there had been considerable misrepresentation concerning the team and members of the squad.

"I would like to put some of them straight," Tipton stated today, "not that I mind in the least taking the blame and full responsibility for all that happens. At the Brownwood game last week our boys, both yours and mine, took quite a bit of equipment, but now we have most of it back.

"This matter, which I think is much greater than winning all football games, started what little trouble we are now having. We do not know who got the equipment and the ones who didn't have anything to do with it have no reason to have their feelings hurt, but the whole team, Coach Jennings and myself and the town as a whole is held responsible for things of this type.

"I asked the boys to bring this equipment back and the same afternoon a few of the boys decided it would be better to go to a show than out for football practice.

"In the game with Mineral Wells tonight I do not know who will start, but the ones who have been training hardest, have been reporting for practice regularly and have been showing the right attitude throughout the year are the ones who will get the call. The fact that a boy does not start does not necessarily mean that the coaches or the school heads think that he had anything to do with the Brownwood trouble."

Japanese Papers Approve Grew Talk

TOKYO, Oct. 20.—Japanese newspapers expressed appreciation today of the candor of American Ambassador Joseph Grew in declaring yesterday that American public opinion is deeply resentful of Japanese acts in China.

BANDIT CAUGHT IN GUN FIGHT IN SCHOOLYARD

AUSTIN, Oct. 20.—A bandit who yesterday robbed the Blanco National Bank at Hinceo was captured today after a gun battle in a school yard here in which a highway patrol captain and the bandit were wounded.

There were approximately 100 children playing in the yard when the shooting started. Teachers immediately told the children to lie on the ground, but some were missed only by about six inches, witnesses said. It was estimated 50 shots were fired.

The wounded patrolman was Capt. George Schauer. Others who aided in the capture were Capt. Frank Albright and Sgt. R. B. Butler, of the Texas Public Safety Department.

Capt. Schauer was wounded in the right thigh and the bandit in the left foot. Neither's condition was serious.

The robber took refuge behind a tree and after emptying two pistols at the officers threw up his hands.

Early today the suspect disarmed an officer at Dripping Springs, taking his pistol and automobile. Officers found $1,080 in the man's pockets.

Congress Asked To Abandon Cole Oil Control Bill

FORT WORTH, Oct. 20.—Congress was asked to abandon the so-called Cole bill for federal regulation of the oil industry in a resolution adopted by the convention of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

"We can see no emergency necessitating such legislation" the resolution said. Rep. William Cole of Maryland, sponsor of the bill, will address the convention tonight.

State Sen. Clint Small of Amarillo said that Texas needs a state conservation agency, separate from the railroad commission.

"I am not critical of the railroad commission, but they could do a much better job of regulating our oil industry if they constituted a body devoting their entire time to the business," Small said.

Gold Mine Area, Long Abandoned, Again Producing

LAS CRUCES, N. M.—Abandoned for 30 years, one of the richest gold mines in the gold camp area near here has come back to producing life through use of modern milling methods.

It was discovered in the bonanza days of the early '80's by John Bonny, old-time mining man who built a three-stamp mill on the property and worked the mine for two years before selling to a Chicago organization. In the following decade more than $40,000 of yellow metal was taken from the mine until all the free-gold ore from the oxidation zone was exhausted.

Though there was known to be refractory gold ore below water level, the mine lay idle until 1910, when the Mormon Mining Co. was organized to build a cyanide plant and work the shafts. It was an unsuccessful venture and the mine was abandoned.

Recently two El Paso, Tex., mining men took over the property. Use of milling methods put into practice in recent years made working of the mine again profitable. When exploitation began again, drills and other mining tools of 30 years ago were found where workmen dropped them as they left the mine for the last time. Heels drilled for the last shot of powder were still there, unfiled.

Johnson Opposes Neutrality Change In The Senate

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Sen. Hiram Johnson, republican, Calif., veteran of the successful fight against this country's participation in the League of Nations, told the senate today repeal of the existing arms embargo would "place us in the shadow, walking down the bloody path to war."

"We gamble with fate, if we enter another war," Johnson shouted. "If we enter war from emotionalism, from propaganda, from the silly arguments that have been made, we risk all as certain as the sunrise and in seeking to save the democracies of Europe we will have lost our own."

Johnson spoke as a house sentiment indicated support for claims of the leadership that a margin of 15 to 20 votes now exist for passage of the neutrality bill.

Hooliganism Is Charged To Chinese

SHANGHAI, Oct. 20.—The municipal council of the international settlement today charged that the Chinese city government was resorting to uncontrolled hooliganism, and force to disrupt law and order.

Cornell Franklin, American chairman of the council, said that if necessary he would ask for United States marines to protect American residents.

Oil Order Will Be Issued Saturday

AUSTIN, Oct. 20.—An order governing oil production in Texas for November will be issued tomorrow, Railroad Commissioner Jerry Sadler said today after the Federal Bureau of Mines estimated market demand for Texas oil will be 1,444,000 barrels daily.

Sadler said it has not been determined how many days of shut-down will be needed to keep production in the federal estimates.

BRITAIN EXPECTING A MAJOR GERMAN DRIVE ON WESTERN FRONT

A high British military source indicated today that the Allies still expect a German attack of a "really serious nature" on the Western front.

The source said that the objective of the latest German operations on the Western front apparently "has been to gain high ground for a further advance."

It was indicated that the main German attack, if it occurs, will be between Luxembourg and the Great Bend on the Rhine River.

It was pointed out that Allied officials have frequently anticipated a German attack on a big scale, but that none has occurred. Unless it comes in the near future it is not likely to succeed in view of the military belief that approximately six weeks of good weather are necessary for a successful offensive.

The British Foreign Office said the German losses in Poland were much greater than official German statements admitted.

"Information from a reliable neutral source said there is every reason to believe that German losses in men and materials in the Polish campaign were much heavier than appear from German statements," the foreign office said.

Adolf Hitler had reported that Germany lost 10,000 killed, 30,332 wounded and 3,409 missing.

German Aircraft Are Repulsed In Scotland Flight

LONDON, Oct. 20.—German aircraft, attempting to make reconnaissance flights over the Firth of Forth, Scotland, today disappeared before the British planes could engage them, the air ministry announced today.

Observers at Edinburgh said that while bursts of anti-aircraft fire were seen over Rosyth, only British planes were seen. During the afternoon alarm German planes were heard over Edinburgh, apparently flying toward Dundee.

An air raid warning in South England involved Portsmouth, but no aircraft was seen.

Johnson Opposes Neutrality Change In The Senate

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Sen. Hiram Johnson, republican, Calif., veteran of the successful fight against this country's participation in the League of Nations, told the senate today repeal of the existing arms embargo would "place us in the shadow, walking down the bloody path to war."

"We gamble with fate, if we enter another war," Johnson shouted. "If we enter war from emotionalism, from propaganda, from the silly arguments that have been made, we risk all as certain as the sunrise and in seeking to save the democracies of Europe we will have lost our own."

Johnson spoke as a house sentiment indicated support for claims of the leadership that a margin of 15 to 20 votes now exist for passage of the neutrality bill.

The children were aged five years, three years and 13 months.

Playing Dentist To A Steam Shovel Is Really Research

AUSTIN, Tex.—Playing dentist to a steam shovel or an oil well drill is, in effect, the research work of M. L. Begeman, associate professor of mechanical engineering at The University of Texas.

Heavy tools made for digging into the earth's rocks must have a heavy facing kept on their teeth or they soon wear out. Begeman's project, which has just begun, is one of experimentation in welding materials used for hard-facing such tools.

Begeman leaves the University College of Engineering machine shops, of which he is superintendent, October 21, for Chicago where he will attend the American Welding Society's annual meet. He is also a member of the fundamental research committee of the Engineering Foundation, sponsored by the society.

Begeman will contribute a paper describing the beginning of his project at the University. While in Chicago he will also attend the National Metal Congress and Exposition.

Colonist Card Of 1889 Proves He Is An Oldtimer

HAMILTON, Mont.—James Dunbar of Hamilton came to the Bitter Root district of Montana in 1889, the same year the state was admitted to the Union, and he has a faded receipt to prove he is one of the "oldtimers" of the state.

It shows he was a member of a colonization group which came to Montana in 1882. The receipt reads as follows:

"This is to certify that James H. Dunbar has paid one dollar as membership fee, and is a member of the Great Western Colony as long as he complies with the Constitution and By-Laws of said colony. In accordance thereto we have subscribed our names and caused the seal of said colony to be affixed this 27th day of May, 1882, at Orleans, Nebraska.

J. S. Hoyt, president. A. C. Robbins, secretary. "New book No. 146. This certificate is not transferrable."

Plane Crash Being Probed By Navy

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Oct. 20.—A naval inquiry was started today into an air collision which set two bombing planes into a flaming crash yesterday and killed four young fliers.

The bombers clipped wings as they roared through a fog bank on a training flight with 10 other planes.

Show What a War Means

No one need have any doubt as to what a modern war really means. The British schedule of war taxes, just adopted without a murmur of complaint in Parliament, show in bold relief an outline of the burden. No one can escape.

Wage-earners whose annual income is as low as $480 will pay $3 income tax if unmarried. A married man without children whose income is $1000 will pay about $29. The same man making $2000 will pay about $360. And the tax schedule will be higher next year. With this stiff tax dose comes a sharp increase in surtaxes on higher incomes, and a jump of from 10 to 20 per cent in estate duties. Excess profits will be promptly taken in taxes, and consumption taxes on items like beer, wine, liquor, tobacco, and sugar have been sweepingly advanced.

For the present, Britain plans to "pay as she goes"; war loans will come later. None can escape: from ditch-digger to millionaire, each must carry his share.

That is modern war — totalitarian war. The old days, when the poor paid the consumption, or sales, taxes, while the rich merely loaned their money at interest, to be paid back later out of taxes, have vanished.

The new plan is democratic, and it is hard to restrain admiration for this thorough-going manner of putting the national shoulder to the wheel.

But this is not to be forgotten: the whole thing means a lowered standard of living. Not only in Germany, where wood fibre bread and ersatz clothing are already the order of the day, but in England, in France, and in any country that goes to war, the great mass of the people must see their standards of living slipping, sliding, gradually sagging downward toward subsistence. That $2000-a-year man who has to lay out $250 in cash for income tax has a very definite slice cut out of his living standards—translated into new shoes, warm coats, healthful food, that is a grave sacrifice. It is the old guns-and-butter choice all over again.

It will be the same in France and Germany, and in any country that draws the sword.

No Trouble

It's nice to know that there isn't going to be any trouble over the explorations and claims in the Antarctic. Admiral Byrd has given assurance that he will confine his explorations this winter to areas in which the British and American claims do not conflict, and leave any conflicts to be peacefully adjusted at some time when Britain is in a better position to give attention to them.

That is certainly soothing, for it's certain enough that if claims to this barren and yet unexplored waste could not be adjusted without trouble, there would be little hope of territorial adjustments in crowded Europe or the more-inhabited parts of the globe.

The problem of the Antarctic, fortunately, is one world problem that can be taken coolly.

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON

NRA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Steps to evolve a broad, far-reaching policy to cope with depression, end unemployment and enable the nation to enjoy a national income substantially above the 1929 level are now being taken behind the scenes of the New Deal.

They will eventually lead—if the European war does not upset all calculations—to an all-inclusive program which the Roosevelt administration can offer as its blanket solution to the depression problem.

A short time ago the National Resources Committee issued a report on "The Structure of the American Economy." This volume was one of the most important publications of the entire New Deal.

The result of several years work by the administration's top economists, headed by Dr. Gardner Means, it comprises a detailed survey of what the nation's existing economic machine would do if it could be kept working at or near capacity.

It estimates that the loss in national income since the 1929 crash is around $200,000,000,000, and remarks that a national income of better than $100,000,000,000 a year (in 1929 dollars) is attainable with existing man-power and productive plant.

Publication of that report was simply the first step. A short time ago members of the National Resources Committee summoned a dozen or more of the country's outstanding economists to a conference at Charlottesville, Va.

Members of the committee went over the report with these economists and told them that the committee's attitude was, in substance, this:
That after this the government what assume as one of its continuing responsibilities the task of seeing to it that reasonably full use is made of the nation's resources—both in materials, man-power and machinery—and that when it shoulders that responsibility it must be prepared to take whatever steps are necessary to see that the job is performed.

Some time this month the economists will submit critiques on the report so that the accuracy of its findings may be checked. Once that is done, a second report, equally elaborate, will be prepared.

This one will study the different ways that have been suggested for the cure and prevention of depression, and—in general terms—will try to indicate which line is the right one to follow.

After that there is to come still a third, which—based itself on the first two—will wrap the whole thing up and present a definite program which the government can submit to Congress and the public.

The committee's attitude is that there are three main obstacles to the performance of this "basic governmental function"—the job of keeping the productive machinery running.

These, it holds, are first, lack of public understanding of the problem; second, tendency on the part of government to temporize with the problem of depression, adopting "pump priming" expedients instead of tackling the problem boldly; and, third, the lack of a clearly worked out program.

In line end, it hopes to present such a program—in the belief that once such a program is presented, the ensuing discussion will bring general public understanding of the problem.

Hunt Year Old In Girl's Murder

LARCHMONT, N. Y.—The police of this suburban community are still engaged in an intensive search for the slayer of 17-year-old Mary Imelda Coyle hanged to death a year ago while on her way to devotional services.

The slaying was the second in the history of Larchmont since its founding in 1886 and police are determined to press it to solution regardless of how long it takes. The first Larchmont murder, a grudge fight in 1876, was solved after eight months.

One point is settled in the minds of the police—the murderer who drove a metal wedge two inches into the girl's skull was familiar with Larchmont—New Rochelle scene. He trapped the girl in a pebbly road which would not likely have been found by a stranger.

Despite the brutality of the slaying the perpetrator arranged the body with extreme care. He placed it in a spot where passersby would be sure to see it the next morning. The coat, dress and underclothes were carefully smoothed out.

Thus far more than 400 persons have been questioned. Nine men wanted for offenses elsewhere have been turned up in the investigation. The inquiry in one 26-year-old suspect went away back to the age of a year and a half. Thousands of automobiles have been checked for bloodstains. Fifty cars with such stains were found but all with authenticated explanations of cast fingers, sick persons, accidents.

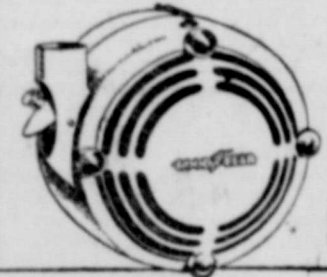

Some 200 known sexual delinquents have been questioned.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Mary Coyle, sent guns to police headquarters two and three times a week to plead with police to catch the murderer. Her estranged husband, who returned to the family after the slaying, again has departed. Mrs. Coyle lives on a houseboat.

Dust Bowl Being Made Cotton Bowl

AUSTIN, Tex.—In an effort to transform sections of the Southwest from dust bowl to cotton bowl, a University of Texas botanist is searching for a strain of cotton which will require a minimum of water for germination.

While a short season and hot climate in such semi-arid areas as Northwest Texas minimizes the insect hazard, insufficient moisture is the chief barrier standing in the way of large-scale production in that section, Dr. G. W. Goldsmith pointed out.

At present the cotton being raised in the Texas Panhandle is the same as that planted in the lowlands.

Dr. Goldsmith is conducting experiments to determine which strain of cotton requires the least water to germinate. When his experiments are completed, he will test the seeds in the territory he hopes may some day be a big cotton-producing area.

Athenia Survivor Finds Lost Shoes

MIAMI, Fla.—Passing through Miami on his way home, M. G. Monde, of Jamaica, a survivor of the Athenia disaster, learned that the yacht Southern Cross, which rescued him, was here.

Going aboard to renew acquaintances, he found a pair of shoes he had lost a month earlier during the rescue off the Irish coast.

Of course the light may be bad, but from here the Nazi dove of peace looks strangely like a vulture.

STALIN PRIES WIDE OPEN TRADE WINDOW

Three hundred years ago, Peter the Great opened a passage to ocean-bound traffic for Russia. The passage was made into a trade window, a few years later when Catherine the Great added the Grand Duchy of Gouland to Russia.

At the opening was blocked by the Versailles Treaty, with the establishment of Finland, Estonia and Latvia as independent states. Today, however, Joseph Stalin has re-established for the Soviet what Peter the Great and Russia's Catherine had started. Even though Russia's commerce flowed through the Baltic states after their independence, the Soviet had only three ports; one of them closed by ice several months of the year and the other regulated and at the mercy of the Dardanelles. These ports were Leningrad (St. Petersburg) on the Neva river, an ice-bound harbor like Montreal part of the year; Odessa on the Black Sea, and at the mercy of the Dardanelles, and Vladivostok, thousands of miles from the western fields and mines of Russia.

Estonia and Livonia, the northern part of Latvia, once Swedish territories, were ceded to Russia after Charles XII was defeated by Peter the Great at the Battle of Poltava at the beginning of the 17th century. The two states, Livonia and Courland, today form the northern half of Latvia. Courland, more southerly, was added by Catherine.

While the Baltic states were Russian provinces, they formed an integral part of Russia's wide-gauge transit system, but when they became independent states, they brought their railroads into conformity with the narrow-gauge systems of the rest of Europe, thus leaving the Soviet, along with Spain, with the only wide-gauge tracks on the European continent. Thus Russia was compelled to transship the bulk of its commerce grain, lumber, minerals, etc., at the borders of the Baltic states instead of reaching ports directly. The re-coordination of the Baltic railroad system, including the other former part of the old Russian Empire—Lithuania, has loomed as a major factor in Moscow negotiations. It assures coordination with Russia, but isolates them for rail transport with the rest of Europe.

Lifeguard Is Idle Guarding A Bridge

ST. LOUIS—Every day for the past six months Ben Dudley, a weather-waten, 42-year-old lifeguard, has rowed out into the Mississippi river. For eight hours each of those days he has sat in his anchored boat, staring up at the Eads bridge and watching painters go about their work, like small spiders among the web of cables, beams and braces. Dudley keeps his eyes on the

EASTLAND C. C. BEGINS A NEW YEAR OF WORK

The Eastland Chamber of Commerce today was beginning a new year of activity with the same officers as the last. That the same officers are again heading the organization was interpreted as a reflection of the view of the directors of the successful year's operation just closed.

Observers said today that the work of the Chamber of Commerce the past year was one of the most successful in its history. T. E. Richardson is president, O. E. Harvey is vice president, C. E. Lucas is second vice president and H. J. Tanner continues as secretary-manager. T. P. Johnson is an addition to the board of directors. Others are F. T. Crowell, J. W. Miller, Lucas, Richardson, Grady Pipkin, Harvey, Jim Horton, George Harper, Earl Bender, Milburn McCarty, K. B. Tanner, C. J. Rhodes, Earl Woody, Albert Taylor, Dr. C. C. Cogburn and R. N. McDaniel. Crowell, Miller, Lucas and Richardson were re-elected to the board.

workmen because he gets paid for it. If one of them should fall, Dudley is there to fish him out. So far none has fallen. Three paint brushes have been dropped the 100-odd feet from the bridge to the river, and Dudley has retrieved each one. Once he pulled out the body of a woman, after the workmen called his attention to it. He tied a rope to the derrick and towed the body to shore. Otherwise, Dudley says, it's pretty dull. "I just sit and twirl from one side to the other," he says. "I'm not even allowed to fish. I have to keep my mind on what I'm doing."

Although he is not an expert swimmer and has never had a chance to fish a workman out of the water, Dudley says he is confident he can do it. He keeps two gallon cans ready to throw out to keep afloat anyone who would be hapless enough to fall from the bridge. Those would be of little help, however, because if a man fell the full distance from the bridge to the water he'd be in no condition to help himself, Dudley says.

Crews on trains crossing the bridge are getting to know him, Dudley says, and they throw him a piece of coal as a greeting when they pass overhead. River pilots are becoming friendly, too. "They used to kick up rollers," Dudley explains. "But now they turn the rear of their boats away as they come towards me, sending the rollers toward the shore. There is some kind of law that says if you turn a man over in his boat you got to go after him."

"Yep, I get pretty tired of looking at that bridge, the power plant and the excursion boat all the time," he says. "But you sure have lots of time to think."

Changes In Freight Rates Approved By WTCC Body

ABILENE, Tex.—Action of the Texas Railroad Commission in ordering removal of differential rates in far West Texas was highly commended today in a statement by J. M. Willson of Floydada, president of the Freight Rate Equality Federation. As head of the statewide federation, sponsored by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, Willson also urged the Railroad Commission to issue an additional order equating the entire level of Texas rates with that of the North and East.

The Commission's order of October 16 will reduce rates from 10 to 20 per cent in seventy West and South Texas counties. This penalty against this area has existed for more than 50 years and the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has long sought its removal, Willson pointed out. Removal of the differential rates was one of two things sought by the WTCC and the FREP in testimony at the Railroad Commission's hearing on freight rates in Austin last June. The other land. Approximately 250 young people will go to Fort Worth to attend the Youth Institute from towns and counties within a radius of 250 miles around Fort Worth. J. C. Kellam, state administrator of the National Youth Administration is serving as the secretary for the general committee and local arrangements for the institute are being handled through the office of H. A. Ziegler, district director of the NYA in this area.

SERIAL STORY

JOAN OF ARKANSAS

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD
COPYRIGHT, 1933, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Joan breaks the news to her friends of her engagement to Keith. She is overjoyed and the girls are delighted. Later she goes to her room and finds a letter from her father. She reads it and is surprised to find that her father has agreed to her engagement.

CHAPTER VIII

It was a cool, misty afternoon when Tech played Marquette. There was a strong hint of rain in the air and the girls wore light rain slickers over their coats. "Don't give a hoot for myself," Joan grumbled, "but the experts say we're a dry field team, or something like that."

What you mean is Keith needs a dry field to get on, Elaine remarked slyly. "Come to think of it, Keith was right. It wouldn't rain because he doesn't like mud cleats."

The game hadn't been under five minutes when a slight drizzle began to fall. The Marquette secondary moved in. They played a seven-man line. Three minutes to go. First and ten on Marquette's 30. The rain was coming down steadily now.

It trickled off Joan's hat and into her face. She hardly noticed. Her eyes were riveted on the field below. "Do something, Keith—do something," she implored in a whisper.

The rest of the stadium wasn't quite as silent. There was a solid, rolling wave of sound as Tech came out of the huddle into a single wing to the right, with Tony Mangano in the tailback position. Marty Gallagher snapped the ball. It went to Johnny White.

White spun, faked to Mangano roaring into the line. Keith, playing the wingback, slipped around, took the ball from Johnny and was off toward the opposite end.

Joe Donchek, who had pulled out of the line, and Dan Webber were leading the way. The Marquette tackle broke through, but Donchek tied into him and dumped him on the spot.

Rhodes ran with his free hand almost touching Webber's back, sticking close and feeling his way. The Marquette end swooped in on them, but Webber cut sharply inside the tackle position, Keith practically treading on his heels.

Dan's shoulder bounced the end aside and they were through and down the sidelines. Forty thousand people stood on their feet and almost went berserk. The Marquette safety man charged across the field. Dan smashed into him, surely, viciously. They both went down in a puddle of mud as Rhodes went by and slithered over the goal line.

Then, with Johnny White holding the ball and split the crossbar for the seventh point. The gun went off two minutes later and it was all over.

They were scheduled for a history mid-term the following Wednesday and Keith suggested that the three of them study together Tuesday night.

"A lot you'll be able to offer us," Joan scoffed, "but if it's okay with Sunshine, here, it's okay with me."

Dan grimaced. "It's okay with Sunshine. Guess I can stand it if you can."

"Really?" The word dripped ice. "Hey—wait!" Dan added hastily. "Don't get me wrong. I'm referring to the ordeal of pounding European immigration into this guy's head. You could put all his notes on the cuff of my shirt."

Keith registered indignation. "Say, I'm no dummy, y'know."

"A moot point," Dan murmured, and Joan laughed out loud. They looked themselves in the Alpha Nu music room and it took just three minutes to see that Dan was right about Keith's notes. They were worthless.

For almost three hours they crammed, going over Joan's and Dan's notes. Keith would have been lost without them. Most of the time was spent in wearily tracing the important things for his benefit.

JOAN couldn't fall asleep for quite a while that night. A pale ray of moonbeam slivered through the open window and she stared at it unblinkingly.

She wondered if Carol and some of the other girls weren't right about Keith. Was he just a glamor boy with dazzling personality?

She recalled one of Carol's first remarks about him. . . he thought life was a lark, and had never heard of clipped wings. Always following the path of least resistance, expecting others to come to his aid when the going got rough.

Too bad Keith didn't have a little of Dan Webber's conscience and ambition. . . but superficial people rarely had much conscience. Just before she dropped off to sleep she wondered if Keith wanted just a little too superficial.

thing to be right out in the open. It was Bonnie Harris who went into action first: "I nominate Kay Granger," she said. "Kay's a senior, and—well, there aren't many more popular girls on this campus than she."

"My idea exactly," a dark-haired girl up front chimed in. "And if anyone doesn't think Kay doesn't photograph well, they can dash upstairs for another gander at that full-length photo she took in her purple evening gown."

The remark brought on a ripple of laughter, and Joan, glancing sideways at Kay, recalled the picture and mentally agreed with the dark-haired girl up front.

KAY GRANGER was a beautiful girl and she did photograph well. And electing a homecoming queen depended greatly on photographs for the benefit of those who didn't know candidates personally.

"I gather, then, that there is a second to the nomination," said Carol. "Any further choices?"

Again silence. And again muffled whispers here and there.

"No politics," Carol warned. "If anyone has any further discussion or nomination, speak your piece."

Marianne Burrows stood up. "I've got another nomination. How about Joan Johnson?"

"I'll admit there aren't as many kids on campus who know her—after all, she's only been here a month. But," she went on significantly, "I'd like to know who is the most-talked-about girl around here, if it isn't Joan."

"No, Marianne, no," Joan whispered to her roommate. "I don't—"

But Marianne motioned her to keep quiet. "And although there are a few people around here who wouldn't even admit it to themselves, Joan is the prettiest girl in this chapter has had in years," Elaine Chesbro added. "And she's had the publicity to go with her looks."

"You mean notoriety, don't you?" someone asked. "I made this an open discussion because I thought we'd get the best results that way," Carol said stiffly. "But I'll dismiss the next girl who can't be decent."

"Well, if you're speaking of publicity, don't forget Kay's uncle is city editor of the Tribune," someone piped up.

Kay jumped up at that. "I'd like very much to be the candidate, of course, but I refuse to allow anyone to approach my Uncle Ed with publicity in mind. There isn't much he would do and besides, I—I, well, I just don't think I'd care to take advantage of something like that."

Joan looked up quickly. She liked the way Kay said that. It was Mildred Holmes who took the floor next. Mildred was a tall, studious girl from upstate. She wasn't a pretty sort, but she had a lot of good, common sense. Everyone listened whenever she spoke.

"It seems to me," she began slowly, "that either Kay or Joan would make a good candidate. To my way of thinking there are two outstanding angles to the situation. Either we capitalize on Joan's stand-in with Keith Rhodes and the Gammas, or consider the fact that Kay is a senior and has a last chance at something big. I move we get the thing over with and take a vote."

Mildred's motion was seconded and carried, and Carol called for a closed vote. There was such a thing as carrying open business too far.

Helen Bancroft read the ballots as Bonnie Harris marked them off. Carol watched as Bonnie called them off in a low voice: "Granger—Granger—Johnson—"

PEEPING THRU the KNOTHOLE WITH BILL MAYES

Just a brief note this time, as time is short.

But don't be at all surprised if a large number of boys who have been starting for the Bulldogs aren't seen in the starting lineup tonight and if some of them don't even get into the game.

Situations about which the public in general have no knowledge, but about which rumors have circulated, have cropped out that must be corrected, and Coaches Bill Tipton and H. G. Jennings are taking the only means possible to preserve discipline and training on the team.

The Bulldogs may not win on the field, but a great moral victory, one that has been badly needed for several years, may be won, according to the way the coaches have figured it out after giving the whole situation much study. Personally, and for one, we believe that they are on the right track.

Some who do not play tonight, or who do not start in the game, may not necessarily be involved in some of the things that have happened in the past few weeks. Tipton pointed out today, and should not be accused, but for one reason or another they are being left off the lineup because of the attitude they have taken toward training and their general conduct, both off the practice field and the game tonight, there should be an interesting one, cause several boys who have little chance to show what can do will be in the line good part of the time, some them all the time, and they be putting out much more will than the team as a whole done in the past.

The Bulldogs have had good material, but have never, on rare occasions and then for a short time, done as good job as everyone knows they do. Maybe things will be different tonight. But win or lose the who is broadminded enough to other considerations first will size that the move has been best.

Possibly some may be punished unjustly by being kept on bench, but, until such time as can prove this they will suffer along with the rest.
