When the Value of Citizenship Is Appreciated

We Americans take our citizenship pretty casually. To most of us it is a commonplace. It came to us through no effort of our own but was ours merely by the accident of birth. We sacrificed nothing to gain what the men of Valley Forge fought and froze and starved to gain-the right to be Americans.

Thus accepting as a matter of course the boon of citizenship, we have too often taken just as casually the duties that go with it-the duty to take an active, intelligent interest in public affairs; the duty to vote with the public welfare in mind; the duty to give freely a reasonable measure of co-operation in social matters.

Since 1929 there has been a change. Conditions have been such as to show even the indifferent that public affairs really do matter. Circumstances have placed the national government on every man's doorstep, and interest in public affairs has mounted. The same thing has become doubly true since Europe's long mismanagement has finally brought that continent once again to war. Now as never before, public affairs matter.

It is inspiring, therefore, to see new citizens flocking to the courts to take the oath of allegiance to the government of the United States. Anyone who has had the least touch with the process of naturalization, and seen the glowing eyes and upraised heads of those who take that oath for the first time, knows how valuable the great majority of these new citizens are to the Republic. For the time has passed when passive acquiescence to the law is enough. The Republic needs active, loyal work in its behalf as it has not needed it for many years. It needs the firm, intelligent guidance, that can come only from an alert, informed, loyal and determined citizenship. It needs not blind and unthinking cannon-fodder citizens, but free men and women who will gladly and voluntarily play their part as citizens of a free Republic.

How long has it been since you, native-born American, have repeated the eath that is being taken every day by new citizens? It would not hurt every one of us to read it through and accept, mentally but consciously, the responsibilities it implies. Here is that oath.

"I do solemnly declare, on oath, that I will absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty; that I will support and defend the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same. So help me God!"

Though we'd suspected it for some time, it is finally officially announced that Screeno is not one of the Marx Brothers.

A London paper predicts Hitler will offer to quit. This puts British prognostications about on a level with forecasts that Brooklyn would win the pennant this year.
