Clean-up in the Building Industry

Home owners should regard with glee the current investigation by the United States Justice Department on the high cost of building. Whoever may be responsible for high prices—contractors, unions or both—the entire matter should be laid open to public inspection. Prospective builders of family dwellings have already suffered too long from unreasonable building costs.

Attorney General Murphy has pointed out that in some communities, at least, there are sufficient grounds to believe that unscrupulous contractors and certain groups of unionists are directly responsible for high building costs. Certainly no one believes that the majority of contractors or the bulk of A. F. of L. unionists is anxious to impede building progress through obstructive tactics. But it takes only a handful of persons, engaged in nefarious schemes, to wield their influence over an entire industry.

It has been charged that collusive bidding among building contractors is one factor responsible for high costs. This is a system whereby builders get together and agree in advance on what bids are to be made on a project. Contractors can in this way completely eliminate competitive bidding.

Murphy's chief complaint against the A. F. of L. is the series of jurisdictional strikes that have disrupted home building efforts from time to time. There is no argument with the A. F. of L. or any other labor organization on the right to conduct peaceful and legitimate strikes for the attainment of lawful ends. There is, however, considerable objection to carrying on inter-union battles at the cost of the innocent home-builder.

A great deal may come of this nationwide investigation in the way of general reform in the building industry. Unionists and contractors alike may be indicted on a widespread scale to answer questions the public has been asking for years.

But if nothing more is gained than complete dissection of this problem, the purpose of the inquiry will not have been altogether lost. Homeowners will know, at least, where the blame may be justly placed. The road for future action will have been paved.

Meanwhile, another element, disturbing to anyone contemplating construction of a home, has entered the picture. Plans are afoot for development of C.I.O. building unions to compete with A. F. of L. organizations in the construction industry. If this program goes through, helpless builders will be faced with the unpleasant prospect of having their union workmen picketed by rival unions.

The only way anyone can judge to what extent home-builders would be affected with both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. vying for contracts is to reflect on what has happened in other industries where there have been similar disputes. Arguments resulting from such dual jurisdiction have brought untold injuries to innocent business men and their patrons. Perhaps the Justice Department, while it is looking into the building industry, will devote some time to the possibility of this new complication.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—A parliamentary tangle unique in the nation's history may come to a head as soon as the arms embargo fight is out of the way.

The administration hopes that fight will end in another week or ten days, and that Congress immediately thereafter will shut up shop and go home.

But the solid Republican bloc in the House of Representatives is going to vote to stay in session, and if enough Democrats join in this move—as is quite possible—the administration then would be in the dilemma of having one House of the Congress voting to adjourn while the other House refused to do so.

Parliamentarians say that under such circumstances the President is authorized by law to prorogue Congress—to adjourn it by executive order, in other words. This power has never been exercised because this situation has never before arisen.

The understanding here is that the administration is perfectly willing to take this action if it becomes necessary in order to get Congress out of town. It might prove a politically damaging thing to do, however, and if the administration should be forced to do it it can thank Joe Martin, the canny Republican leader of the House.

"I understand there is an emergency," says Mr. Martin. "The President seems to think it is such a pressing emergency that he has said he would like to have Senator Barkley, Senator McNary, Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, Mr. Rayburn and myself stick around here after Congress adjourns so he can consult with us if necessary.

"If that's the case, why wouldn't it be better to have the whole Congress on hand? Besides, there is a lot of pressing business that Congress could handle.

"There are defense funds to be voted, for instance. There is the railroad problem. There is the problem of drought relief. It will take new legislation to regularize Colonel Fleming's appointment to the Wage and Hour Division.

"No, when they move to adjourn the House after the neutrality bill is disposed of, I am going to demand a roll-call. I think the Republicans will support it to a man, with perhaps one or two exceptions."

It is anticipated that some support for Martin's idea to stay in session will come from the Democratic side—just how much, no one knows. If as many as 50 Democrats should flip over, Martin could carry his point.

Administration leaders are confident that an adjournment resolution can be put through the Senate without much trouble. The isolationists, of course, would eagerly vote to stay in session but if they can't beat the repeal issue they would have scant chance of beating the motion to adjourn.

Meanwhile, if—confronted by a House refusal to adjourn—the administration should decide that proroguing Congress was too risky, a compromise could probably be arranged without trouble.

It is understood that most of the House Republicans would be happy enough with an agreement whereby only a few selected appropriation bills would be handed—drought relief, say, and possibly certain defense measures—with "skeleton" sessions being held two or three times a week thereafter.

A number of tolerably hot potatoes are on the legislative calendar for the next session, and the Republicans and conservative Democrats are in no more of a hurry to plunge into them than is the administration.

September Business Is Above Last Year

AUSTIN, Tex.—Texas business records for September showed substantial improvement over the same period a year ago. The University of Texas Bureau of Business Research has announced.

The bureau has collected statistics showing: Consumption of electric power 10.4 per cent higher; postal receipts 1.7 per cent higher; capitalization of new firms charted 45 per cent higher production of Southern lumber mills approximately the same but shipments 12.4 per cent higher, and unfilled orders September 31 118.8 per cent higher; building permits 10.5 per cent higher; production of cement plants 9.8 per cent higher.

Olden Hornets Down Comyn By 39 to 0

Olden Hornets downed the Comyn football team by a score of 39 to 0 on the Hornets field Friday before a large number of Olden fans.

Exhibiting power and speed as well as some very pretty passing by Bryant and Jarrett, the Hornets entered their seventh game of this season. All the Hornets were in there fighting, including Fidler and Stanley, who have both missed a couple of games because of injuries.

Olden's outstanding players in the line were Akains, Bockman, Fox and Langston. In the backfield were Bryant, Stanley, Jarrett and Captain Hendrix.

The Hornets meet Seranton next Friday at Olden in which Captain Hendrix predicts to be a very good game.

It will be the fifth conference game, the Hornets being lost one won two and tied one this season.

If the Hornets go into the game with as much fight as last week it is likely they will be victorious.

Services Planned For Pioneer Texan

AUSTIN, Nov. 7.—Funeral services were to be held today for Miss Lillie Robertson, 85, well known pioneer, who died in the "French Embassy" here yesterday.

The embassy, in which Miss Robertson spent most of her life, was built during the days of the Texas Republic.

Classroom Survey For Texas Schools Has Been Extended

AUSTIN, Tex.—Reaching into every schoolroom in the state, a University of Texas survey aimed at improvement of classroom instruction was last week broadened to embrace three new units, Dr. Hob Gray, University education professor and originator of the survey, has announced.

Initiated last year by the department of superintendence of the Texas State Teachers Association as a survey of public school instruction, the project this year has added three new phases: an experimental class plan, assistance in giving tests, and special teacher instruction.

A 250-point check list, seeking to analyze teaching methods, has been mailed to 1,500 independent school districts, to every county superintendent or county judge, every rural supervisor, and to 24 state deputies who superintend the educational areas of Texas, Dr. Gray said.

Purpose of the survey is not destructive criticism, he pointed out, but guidance for self-improvement of teachers and detection of weakness in collegiate teacher-education.

Experimental classes are being set up by 101 teachers in elementary, junior and senior schools, Dr. Gray said. Duplicate classes are set up and different instructional methods tried—ranging from the regular lecture to use of radio and reading courses. Results will be gauged by standardized tests given each group after one

Citrus Control Not Likely

WESLACO, Tex.—There is no control of citrus in Texas and the Lower Valley, either state during the 1939-40 season.

This surprising news was released to citrus growers by Robert field representative for cultural adjustment, and L. E. Pratt, tive of State Agricultural

It came a week after balloting on a proposed citrus marketing agreement on the agreement to cooperative growers was in favor of limited citrus cooperative organization against the program by of 2 to 1.

This divergence of citrus marketing by the growers was believed for the federal and state doing away with marketing this season.

Charles Cree had been an English naval officer during the World War and had served at the Battle of Jutland. At his father's request he left England, took out naturalization papers in the United States and came to New Mexico to become interested in breeding Hereford cattle and blooded horses.

But when the war broke out in Europe, a notice came to him from the British Government that his services were needed with the British fleet. Charles and his brother talked it over, decided they would both return to England for the duration of the emergency and began selling the Pitchfork Double V pieces by piece. Last month the final parcel of land, 5,000 acres, was sold for $50,000.

War Puts End To History of Famed New Mexico Ranch

CAPITAN, N. M.—The European war has brought to an end the 50-year history of the Pitchfork Double-V, a brand famous on the New Mexico range when the six-shooter was king and Billy the Kid shot his way into the saga of bad men of the West.

Only a lonely grave, fenced by the side of a road in the Sierra Blanca Mountains, is left to remind of the power the Pitchfork VV carried in the days of the Lincoln County war. The grave is that of Lord Cree, a Scottish nobleman who came to Southeastern New Mexico more than 50 years ago to operate a ranch that became one of the most powerful in the West.

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? White bread, meat, potatoes? It's little wonder you're constipated. You probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It's a kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a movement. If this is your trouble, may we suggest a crunchy toasted cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—for breakfast. All-Bran is a natural food, not a medicine—but it's particularly rich in "bulk." Being so, it can help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. You won't have to endure constipation, you can avoid it. Eat All-Bran daily, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.
