Red Cross Opens Drive For Aid in War Service

By WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
Once more facing the greatest of the many disasters it must cope with, the American Red Cross is conducting its national drive in an effort to boost its membership past the 7,500,000 mark.

Far better prepared for this war than it was in 1914, the Red Cross today has 3716 chapters. Through these 25 years of fire, flood and panic it has built up a membership of nearly 6,000,000, including 500,000 trained volunteer workers, 3365 professional workers, and a registry of 41,500 nurses.

Appeals have already come from British and French Red Cross organizations for medical supplies, a need so urgent that the British organization would "gratefully accept non-sterilized dressings." The German group, evidently better prepared, reports "no special need," at present.

Red Cross assistance in the present war has been largely confined to getting stranded Americans home, and to getting money or communications from Americans to their relatives or friends in various European countries.

Chairman Norman H. Davis of the ARC looks back on World War days for guidance in the work the organization must carry on in this new conflict.

Democratic Party Leaders Fear Split At The Convention

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Democratic political leaders asserted today that any effort to nominate President Roosevelt for a third term will precipitate a party-jarring contest, which might put the ticket out of the running in the November election.

As it stands now Mr. Roosevelt heads a list of five democrats from whom the democrats may choose their nominee. The others are John N. Garner, James A. Farley, Secretary of State Hull, and Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt.

Garner for President campaign managers have announced a drive to organize a majority of the states for their man in the next two months. Garner's name will go before the convention regardless of Mr. Roosevelt's third term decision.

State Police Join Search For Bandit Who Robbed Show

FORT WORTH, Nov. 13.—State police joined in the search today for three well-dressed gunmen who held up the Worth Theater's treasurer last night and escaped with more than $3,000 in the third robbery of an Interstate Circuit theatre in two weeks.

An investigation sought to connect last night's crime with a $3,000 theatre robbery at Austin two weeks ago and a $595 holdup at Denton a week ago.

A capacity audience was unaware of the real-life drama taking place upstairs in the theatre's business office. The bandits tied up five theatre employes and disappeared.

LITTLE POWERS RUSH DEFENSE PLANS TODAY

By United Press
Europe's little nations redoubled their defenses against the threatening tide of war today as Finland and Russia broke off negotiations on enlargement of the Soviets' sphere in the Baltic.

In Holland Prime Minister De Geer declared mobilization of the Netherlands army was preparation against any eventuality, but also was a guarantee to the belligerents that the Dutch would avoid taking sides.

Speaking indirectly for Belgium the prime minister denied that danger to the Low Countries was any greater than at the start of the present war. De Geer held little hope that the Dutch-Belgium peace appeal would succeed.

He said that if it fails other nations might make another effort. It was pointed out the U. S. Minister called on Queen Wilhelmina last night.

The clash between Finland and Russia became more acute, and the Finnish minister to Moscow was called home.

The Finns drew blasts from Soviet publications, which speak only with government permission. These attacks said the Soviet proposals were essential to the defense of Russia and Finland, that the Soviet intends to achieve them and that Finland is threatening war against Russia.

The Allied powers worked desperately for a diplomatic triumph in the far east. Both Britain and France announced they were withdrawing most of their troops from China.

On the fighting front Winston Churchill dared Adolf Hitler to make a big-scale attack. The British announced a stiff campaign against Nazi U-boats continued to gain and that only one British ship was sunk last week.

Reforming the Complex Tax Structure

Gov. Culbert D. Olson of California, troubled by the wide variance in income tax rates among the states and by the small percentage of income taxes collected compared to the total tax levy, recently proposed a rearrangement in the tax picture. He suggested, among other things, that uniform rates be established by the federal government so that all income taxes might be collected centrally and proportionate shares returned to the states.

The governor's plan would certainly eliminate fears among states that industries are driven out because of high state income taxes. But to place such a proposal into effect might initiate an economic revolution in this country, the results of which might be too disastrous to imagine. The tax structure of the United States is much too involved today to admit any sudden sweeping reforms, however meritorious they may be.

Seventeen states today levy income taxes, but no sales taxes. Six states have sales taxes without income taxes, and 17 depend on both for their revenues. Eight states have neither income nor sales taxes but rely entirely on other forms of taxation, such as property, gasoline, liquor and tobacco taxes.

Sales taxes vary from 1/2 of 1 per cent to 3 per cent and produce yields anywhere from half a million dollars, in Connecticut, to $6 millions, in California. Income tax rates vary from 1/2 of 1 per cent on both personal and corporate incomes, in Maryland, to a 1 to 10 per cent range on personal and a straight 6 per cent levy on corporate incomes, in Minnesota.

The federal graduated income tax rate is the same in every state of the union. In states which depend, not on sales taxes, but on income taxes for their chief source of revenue, it might be assumed that the proportions of state to federal revenue would remain reasonably constant. But it doesn't.

In Delaware, the state revenue approximates only 11 1/2 per cent of the federal collected. In Kansas the percentage is 33 in Kentucky, 31 in Maryland, 27 in Oregon, 83, in South Carolina 60; in Tennessee 20, and in Wisconsin, 75. None of these states has a sales tax to supplement its income taxes. Obviously some of these states must depend more heavily on other forms of taxation.

It was only a generation ago that the income tax was inaugurated, but in the year ending in June, 1935, 27 per cent of the total revenue in the United States was collected through income taxes.

Like civilization itself, the tax structure of a nation cannot suddenly be turned over with a spade. Texas in certain fields, which may be too high, must be made up somewhere. Some uniform and centralized tax basis might be advisable as a means of eliminating unfair multiple taxation. But the process must be slow and natural. It cannot be adjusted suddenly by edict.

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The fine oratory let loose during debate over the neutrality bill probably helped the administration to get its measure approved.

But it always helps to have a little straight, old-fashioned political pressure, too, and when the measure got to the House of Representatives that pressure was not lacking.

Two things proved especially useful as sources of pressure: the 1940 census, and the 1939 drought.

First, the census. The headquarters staff here in Washington, under whose direction the census will be taken, is under civil service and there is no patronage to be had. But the temporary staff, under which the field work will be done, is not under civil service. It will consist of approximately 130,000 people.

For the census, the nation has been divided into 103 areas which are further subdivided into a total of 560 districts. The district supervisors will choose the 130,000 enumerators; and during the last couple of weeks it has been made clear that a congressman who refused to go along with the administration on the neutrality matter was going to have a hard time exercising any voice in that selection.

On top of that, there was the drought. A short time ago a number of congressmen and senators formed an unofficial committee to seek immediate action for drought relief. The sum of $50,000,000 was mentioned as being the least that would meet the situation, and it was agreed that the $50,000,000 had to be forthcoming pretty speedily.

Since then the administration has done a neat job of finding money where none apparently existed.

First of all, it was discovered that something like $12,000,000 was available at Farm Security Administration.

At the beginning of this fiscal year, FSA earmarked $18,000,000 for grants-in-aid to distressed farmers; approximately two-thirds of this money remained unspent, as the big call for such grants comes around the first of the year. It was decided that this money could be used for drought relief immediately, and that a deficiency appropriation could be had in January.

Next, it was recalled that the Budget Bureau had $9,000,000 in FSA money which was being held in reserve and which, under the President's economy proclamation, was to be turned back to the treasury unless some emergency arose. The drought situation was officially dubbed an emergency, and the $9,000,000 thus became available.

Then it was found that the Disaster Loan Corporation had $20,000,000 on hand. This corporation is a subsidiary of the RFC, and hence it can't make its funds directly available to the FSA people. Conferences are now under way, however, to work out some system whereby this money can be used in the drought area, and it is expected that some arrangement will be decided on in a few days.

Lastly, the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation was able to make food grants for the most urgent cases.

Now by "finding" this money to meet the crisis, the administration was able to do two things: First, it was able to stave off the rising demand that Congress remain in session to appropriate money for drought relief; and, second, it was able to swing several votes for the neutrality bill by agreeing to take care of suffering constituents promptly.

In moving to erase the 41-vote majority which last spring wrote an embargo into the Bloom bill, those two maneuvers were of apparently decisive importance.

It Looks Like the Old Badger Game

Cotton's Little Sweeper

Entrusted atop a huge pile of samples, Audrey White of Jackson, Miss., gallily introduces the newest of cotton products—a sweeping compound made of cotton seed hull bran. Perfected recently by the Cotton Research Foundation, new uses division of the National Cotton Council, the hull bran compound is claimed to be "distinctly more economical" and to have superior cleaning qualities to ordinary sweeping compounds now on the market. The thousand samples forming Audrey's throne were shipped to committees of the Cotton Council in each of the 850 counties of the Cotton Belt and are being used in demonstrating the new product to heads of schools, office buildings, factories and other quantity users of sweeping mixtures.

Speeding Action In Legislature Is Being Sought

AUSTIN, Tex.—The constitutional amendment that created the 120-day session specified that it should be divided into periods. One period of 30 days is supposed to be for introduction of bills and consideration of emergency matters submitted by the governor. The next 30 days is set aside for committee hearings, and the last 60 days for action.

There is a proviso however that either house may change the order by four-fifths vote. The public generally thought that proviso meant that when a particular matter of importance came up the legislators might vary the rule by four-fifths vote to act upon that particular matter. But the members consider it broader. They set aside the session division generally by a single four-fifths vote.

House rules now are being scrutinized by a special committee with a view to speeding procedure. A list of changes recommended to a sub-committee for drafting would reduce the number of committees, prevent abuse of the right to speak on "personal privilege," reduce the number of elective officers, and make the rules more certain about elapsed time after which a measure or proposal may not be revived.

How complicated the rules of procedure have become can be gathered from the fact that the house rules and their explanations occupy 130 pages of an ordinary sized book. The senate rules require 61 pages and joint rules occupy nine pages.

The new rules are expected also to speed procedure by doing away with the frequent call for verification of votes. When "verification" is called for the entire 150 members must be polled and answer how they voted.

Calls for "verification" were frequent because dials on the desks of the speaker and house clerk showed only the approximate vote. Frequently the indication was found to vary two or three votes.

A new machine will have on the speaker's desk a miniature of the large voting board that is placed above the rostrum. It will show him exactly how many vote "aye" and how many vote "no."

Ex-Service Men Get Preference On Jobs

AUSTIN, Tex.—The 46th Regular Session of the Texas Legislature passed Senate Bill 190, which requires all State Departments to give preference to the ex-service men to the extent that not less than ten per cent of the total number of employees in each Department shall be selected from those given preference in the Act. The State Highway Department has made a complete check of its employees and finds that 10.3 per cent are ex-service men, or a little more than the number set out in Senate Bill 190.

Girl Gets Homesick 10 Blocks From Mom

She's away at college just ten blocks from home, but that doesn't keep Leta Underwood, Texas State College for Women sophomore, from getting homesick. She lives in the dormitory, writes her family once a week, and isn't going home until Thanksgiving because she made a bet with her brother that living in Denton wouldn't keep her from "going away to college."

Duck Identification Guide Is Issued

AUSTIN, Tex.—Because game laws protect entirely or limit the daily bag of various species of ducks, Will J. Tucker, executive secretary of the Texas Game Commission, has issued a duck identification guide for the hunters who flock to blinds along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico each fall.

The Wood duck, Tucker says, makes a whistling sound, has falling flight and weaves its head as it flies.

The Rufflehead can be distinguished in flight by conspicuous white patches on its swift-moving wings. The Canvasback is distinctly white on the body and base of the wings and its long bill gives it the appearance of a long neck and head.

The Redhead generally flies low over the water. It is similar to the Canvasback in appearance without the conspicuous white or long neck.

G-Men Re-Open an Office In Arizona

PHOENIX, Ariz.—A growing influx of criminals apparently seeking safety in Arizona's "wide open spaces" has prompted the Federal Bureau of Investigation to re-open its Arizona office, closed two years ago in an economy drive.

Although FBI agents admitted the re-opening was caused by an "increased volume of business," they maintained the utmost secrecy on the nature of the business.

Two theories stand out, however, both of which local authorities believe may have caused the FBI to re-establish headquarters here.

The first attributes the re-opening of the office to increased investigation by the federal government of Nazi activities in the Pacific Coast. It is held significant that the announcement of resuming operations here came shortly after Attorney General Frank Murphy disclosed that federal agencies would begin a drive on "subversive" activities. The second theory, and that most generally accepted, is that the growing numbers of fugitives apprehended in Arizona led the FBI to station permanent men in this state.

Arizona long has been regarded as an ideal place for fugitives "to hide out." Vast stretches of virtually uncharted and unexplored desert regions are havens for the fugitive desperado, and Mexico stretches invitingly to the south.

In the last two months, at least three men have been arrested here in connection with major crimes in other states.

There's No Great Mystery about Cigarette Tobacco

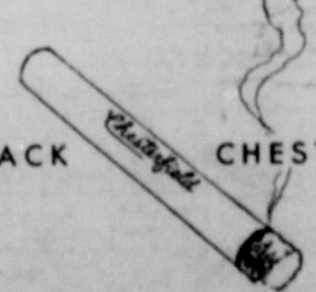

THERE ARE FOUR TYPES of tobaccos found in the more popular cigarettes, namely... Bright, Maryland, Burley and Turkish.

ALL THESE TOBACCOS except Turkish (which is bought direct from the planters in Turkey and Greece) and Maryland (which is bought through sealed bids under government supervision) are bought at public auction, just like any other auction where you might have bought in a table or a chair.

AT THE AUCTION SALE the tobacco is piled in baskets weighing from about 100 to 500 pounds and each purchaser buys all of his tobaccos by competitive bidding for the particular piles he wants.

THE CHESTERFIELD BUYERS buy the best of these mild ripe tobaccos for the Chesterfield blend. And it is Chesterfield's Combination... the right amounts of Burley and Bright... just enough Maryland... and just enough Turkish—that makes the big difference between Chesterfield and other cigarettes.

IT IS BECAUSE of this combination that Chesterfields are COOLER, have a BETTER TASTE and are DEFINITELY Milder. They are made of the world's best cigarette tobaccos. You can't buy a better cigarette.
