PENSION GOVERNOR UNPOPULAR

By United Press
CIN, Nov. 27.—Legislators on both sides of the issue the sales tax constitution amendment in the last Texas session today opposed "suspending" Gov. O'Daniel for a session of the legislature to aid age assistance.

James Taylor of Kerens said that it might be well to suspend the legislators in 1940. This probably will happen in the session of 1940, Taylor said, and he voted for the suspension.

E. J. Isaacks of El Paso, the successful battle for the submission of the constitution amendment, dismissed the idea that the governor be "suspended" with an expression of surprise and Andy. "It's foolish," said Isaacks.

A Girls, Boys Make Toys To Give to the Needy

Girls of the NYA project in this town are planning on making toys for needy children, announced today by Mrs. Shaw, supervisor of the project, and have already begun to make some of the toys they make.

Animals, stuffed with sawdust, the NYA wood shop, are the first being made. Mrs. Shaw said today, and the girls are making many such toys.

Boys who work in the wood shop are to help, too. Mrs. Shaw said, doing a good portion of the work that will be necessary to make some of the things to be made. The girls, too, have a few dolls, including a rag doll, which they can do part of this kind of work.

From the civic and social organizations in this town is being supplied some of the things that will be needed, as boys and girls cannot afford to purchase these. Cloth for dolls, or the stuffed animals, to be used, and it need not be material, but old shirts, and other garments could be used, Mrs. Shaw said.

Wood, rope boxes and lumber, nearly any kind can be used, including stiek horses, doll wagons and other items that can be made of wood. Any materials that can be made, appreciated, Mrs. Shaw said, and the girls and boys really do their part in helping Christmas for needy children, and this is about the only way which they can help.

FINLAND AND RUSSIA AGAIN IN A TANGLE

By United Press
MOSCOW, Nov. 27.—Finland must withdraw troops from the Soviet frontier or "we will throw them back," Russian workers and students said today in resolutions at mass meetings demanding stern action against "the Finnish militarists."

"We are ready to strike three decisive blows for each provocative blow of the Finnish war clique," said a typical resolution adopted at a Leninbrad mass meeting.

Throughout Moscow the scene was reminiscent of the days before the Soviet occupation of Eastern Poland as people lined up at news stands and around loud speakers to get the news arising from charges Finnish artillery had fired on Russian troops.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Nov. 27.—The government announced today Soviet troops had been firing trench mortars along the Finnish border, and that if any Soviet troops were killed, as reported in Moscow, their own shells killed them.

Official quarters here showed little alarm at a Russian note charging Finnish troops had killed four Soviet soldiers and wounded nine in an artillery barrage, and demanding that the Finns withdraw 12 to 15 miles from the Russian border.

It was announced that the Russian note was being "studied."

SEA WARFARE TEMPO GROWS NEAR ENGLAND

By United Press
The tempo of sea warfare increased sharply today and Soviet Russia took advantage of it to threaten Finland with a show-down on Moscow's demands for territorial concessions.

Twenty-two vessels, including one armed British ship and six German craft, were added over the week-end to sinkings by mines and torpedoes. About 250 persons lost their lives and several other vessels were wrecked in storms.

Prime Minister Chamberlain reassured the British that the threat to Allied lifelines soon would be overcome. About 42 ships have been sunk in sea warfare within 10 days, but the rate of sinkings still is below the World War peak, which took 119 ships in one week.

Against the "new weapon" introduced by the Nazis in an avowed plan to destroy British naval power, the British and French governments:

1—Ordered seizure of German exports at sea, despite the official or unofficial protests of six nations, including a threat of "counter-measures" by Japan. King George signed the order this morning.

2—French planes were ordered to aid the British in patrolling the sea against mine-laying German airplanes and submarines.

3—2,000 British fishermen answered the British admiralty call for volunteers to man mine sweepers.

Germany lost two mine patrol boats which struck their own mines, three ships to British warships and one in the week-end storm, but the British suffered greater losses.

The armed merchant cruiser Rawal Pindi of 16,697 tons went down with a loss of 283 persons, apparently after hitting a mine. The 16,000 ton Pilsudski, former liner taken over by Britain, went down with a loss of eight lives and the Dutch liner Spaarndam of 8,857 tons, struck a mine off London.

Preventing War in 1964

Something that never happened during those long years between 1914 and 1918 is happening in Europe today. People are asking their statesmen what they intend to do to the continent AFTER the conflict is over. The man on the streets of London and Paris is interested not only in having his country win the war, but in punctuating the fight with something better than a Versailles Treaty.

During the last war, virtually the only objective of any allied nation was to hang the kaiser. That accomplished, everyone believed everything else would take care of itself. Democracy would be rescued, workers could go back to their factories, farmers to their fields; joy and peace would reign. It was as simple as that.

Today, one of the principal war aims advocated is the federalization of western Europe. The chief champion of this idea is Julian Huxley, British novelist, who feels that instead of trying to balance power, the European nations should consolidate it. Huxley would set up a United States of Europe, based upon the successful American system.

Clarence Streit, American author, carries this idea a step further in the book he wrote sometime before war was imminent. Streit, in "Union Now," proposes a federation of world democracies. Under the American plan, Germany, Italy, and Russia would be ineligible until they adopted democratic forms of government.

Loudest demand for a concrete declaration of allied war aims comes from H. G. Wells, British writer, who doesn't care particularly what the British and French have in mind—as long as it's something a little more solid than merely clipping Herr Hitler's ears.

There is some hope, if the people are sufficiently aroused by the spread of these ideas, that Europe's troubles can be disposed of for periods longer than 25 years at a time. Whether the next peace conference will meet after a long, harrowing war or before too much blood has been spilled, the results should be much better than they were after the Wilson-George-Chateaubriand huddle in 1919.

No matter who wins the war—if anyone wins it—the loser can't be expected to remain permanently on his knees. Economic expansion is important, and international trade is doubly essential to nations that have just gone through long years of military profligacy.

A truck crashed in California, and 10,000 pounds of sugar were strewn over the highway. Spectators stood around waiting for a strawberry truck to come along.

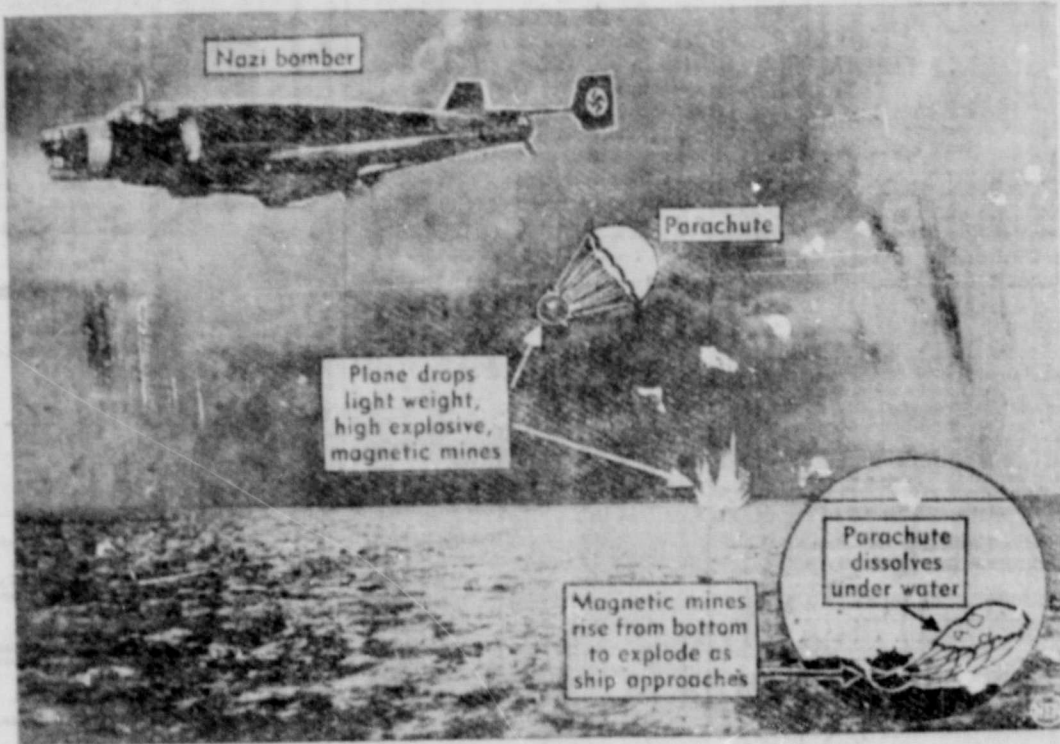

Alabama's pig crop this year is the biggest in years. We're going to get our ham and eggs after all.

Each golfer in a friendly foursome in Illinois turned in an 89 on his card. Maybe they were too friendly.

36 Garands Could Wipe Out Regiment in One Minute

Thirty-six soldiers, armed with the U. S. Army's new Garand rifle, could annihilate an entire infantry regiment in 60 seconds in open country fighting. That's the opinion of officers who recently watched New York National Guardsmen test the Garand at Camp Smith, Peekskill, N. Y. Like the Springfield, the Garand is a clip-fed shoulder rifle, but uses an eight-cartridge clip instead of the Springfield's five. The loading mechanism is operated by gas pressure generated in the chamber when a cartridge is fired, eliminating the familiar bolt on the Springfield breech mechanism.

Scientists announce formally that the world is getting hotter. Travelers just back from Europe may consider this an understatement.

21 Year Old Fund Left In Man's Will Going To Charity

By United Press
EL PASO, TEX.,—Twenty years ago Jervial Henderson, a raw mining man, died leaving in trust a bequest of $32,000 to be used for "a worthy charitable purpose for the benefit of the city's underprivileged."

Today that project—a baby and pre-natal clinic in El Paso's tenement district—is on its way to realization. Contracts have been let and actual construction is soon to begin. When completed, the clinic will provide maternity hospital facilities for underprivileged patients and demonstration rooms for instruction of classes in baby care.

In his will, Henderson stipulated that the $32,000 bequest could not be obtained until 20 years after his death. Recently Henderson's nephew and estate trustee, Richard Eulich, came to El Paso and consulted with health authorities in a survey of desirable projects for which the bequest could be used. Construction of the clinic for child care and educational work among underprivileged mothers was decided upon.

The city council has approved acceptance of the building when completed and will maintain the structure as a part of the city health department.

Ship Blown Up, but They Are Happy

Happy smiles wreath the faces of these Japanese officers as, still carrying their life preservers, they gather in a London hotel. They were among 209 persons rescued from liner Terukuni Maru, sunk by a mine off Harwich, England.

The Spanish-Style, Stucco-brick building is designed to care for 300 patients daily. It will be equipped with baths for babies in addition to general clinical rooms. An auditorium with a seating capacity of 200 and in which lectures on child care will be given is included in the plans. There also is to be a large demonstration room where mothers and expectant mothers will be able to learn feeding methods and child care. Health authorities have indicated they expect to close the present city-maintained baby clinic and transfer staff and equipment to the new building when it is finished. The new project will be called the Henderson Baby Welfare Clinic, in honor of the donor.

SERIAL STORY

5 WOULD KILL

BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC., N. Y. C.

Yesterday, Douglas pleads for a chance to talk to Ara alone. When Dawson arranges it, Douglas shows the girl a button from her dress. "I found it in Helen's study. Were you there?" she asks. "I was there," she admits. She saw Benthorne but insists it was early in the evening, long before he was killed.

CHAPTER XI

HELEN BENTHORNE led Dawson toward the back stairs.

"You asked how my father got into the house," she said, pointing to the doorway across the kitchen.

"He came in there, met Jameson in this hallway, and then came up the stairs to the left. Jameson's quarters open off the kitchen to the right."

Dawson glanced backward for a moment. On the other side of the swinging door he had just passed through was the dining room, and beyond that the study. If a man hurried—ran—

He followed Mrs. Benthorne up the stairs. "Here is the landing where father paused to catch his breath," she added. "Oh yes, Captain, I forgot to tell you. I talked to Father after he had seen you. He told me all that he had said. She hurried on, her black gown swishing about her trim ankles.

Dawson hesitated as he reached the top of the stairs, eyed a small door recessed in the wall. "The clothes chute," Helen Benthorne explained. "A most convenient place to hide a gun."

"I'd thought of that already, Mr. Benthorne," Dawson smiled. "Ernie emptied it fully two hours ago."

"Do you really think you'll find that gun here in the house, Captain?" Helen Benthorne seemed amused at the thought. "I should think you'd be searching the grounds. Undoubtedly the murderer of my husband went out the window. While you waste time over, he's probably miles away."

"Mr. Benthorne had many cases," she said. "Arnold had no friends," she said. "This is the guest room"—and nodding at the figure on the rumbled bed. "My father is sleeping. . . . Poor Dad!"

The detective pushed past her, through the doorway. He took in the disarray of the room; the spread tossed back over the foot of the bed; the muddy shoes, side by side; the black raincoat in a heap on the floor; the hat, on the highboy, and the little line of water down the front of the drawers; the figure of Alton stretched full length upon the bed, face down, outlined under the blanket. The man's breathing was steady, unnaturally loud.

"The sleeping pills," Mrs. Benthorne explained. "Must you disturb him now? This has been an ordeal for him. Won't you let him sleep and come back later?"

Dawson nodded, backed slowly from the room. Alton stirred slightly, then relaxed again, resuming his quiet snoring. Dawson turned to Mrs. Benthorne's suite.

TWENTY minutes later he was ready to admit that if Helen Benthorne had ever kept a revolver hidden in her room, she had left no trace of it. There was no tell-tale outline on flimsy underthings in any of the dresser drawers; closets, filled with hundreds of dollars of costly dresses and coats yielded no clues. Each garment was hung neatly upon a satin-padded wooden hanger—Alton hold the shoulders in shape, Dawson decided—and at the end of each rack were more hangers awaiting this season's frocks.

Mrs. Benthorne sat beside the window, nervously cutting an envelope to pieces with a small gold scissors. She did not miss Dawson's approving glance at the padded hangers.

"Arnold called those my pet extravagance," she said, nodding toward the closet.

"The gowns? They must have cost a small fortune," Dawson agreed.

"No, the hangers. I insisted upon them, but Arnold could never see why the ordinary wire kind—those the cleaners always send back—weren't just as good. He owned one of the companies that makes those—the wire ones, I mean."

The detective nodded, and went on with his search. Once he paused, as if listening. "Is this room directly over Mr. Benthorne's study?" he asked.

Benthorne's widow shook her head. "I wish it were," she replied. "I might have been able to hear—last night. Mr. Benthorne's room is above the study." Do you want to look around my husband's room?"

"Not right away," Dawson said. "I'll have to awaken your father now. Or would you rather?"

Helen Benthorne led the way. There was a queenly pride in her erect carriage, a calm defiance in her manner that easily explained Arnold Benthorne's longing to have this woman for his wife, and to take any means to force her into that marriage. Helen Benthorne was an aristocrat, Dawson knew, and her mannerisms never allowed anyone to forget it. She opened the door to the guest room gently, then threw it wide with a crash.

"My father is gone!" she screamed. Dawson darted into the room.

It was true. The bed was empty, the covers thrown back. The shoes were still there, neatly placed side by side, half under the bed.

Dawson rushed to the head of the front staircase, searched the hallway and entrance beneath.

"Krone! Krone!" he shouted, and as the patrolman rushed through the half-open front door, "watch this stairway and the hall there. Stop everyone. I'm coming down the back way!"

DOUGLAS and Ara were still at the table when Dawson pushed through the swinging door. "Any- one go through here in the last 20 minutes?"

"Not a soul, Captain," Douglas answered. "What's the matter now?" But Dawson had hurried on.

The detective bumped into Krone a second later at the door of the study. "What is it, Captain?"

"Alton—he's disappeared!"

"But he was upstairs, sleeping."

"Yes—yes—I saw him in 20 minutes ago, sound asleep. But he's not there now. Did you see him come down the stairs?"

"I just stepped outside with Joey for a smoke—I'd have heard him—"

"He left his shoes by the bed— what were you doing outside?" Dawson thundered. "Search the house. Call in a couple of those men on duty in front—to see a dozen more. Where's Flynn? What—?" The words died in his throat.

"Were you looking for me, Captain Dawson?" The door of Benthorne's private hallway to the street opened and Alton emerged from the long corridor. The detective stared at him, open-mouthed.

"I awakened suddenly, with an idea," Alton explained. "I came down quietly, and I think I found something you'll want to see." He handed the detective a smudged, water-stained cigar, half burned and crushed. "Most interesting," he went on slowly, his breath rasping in his throat.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—A little-noticed angle of the Third U. S. Circuit Court's decision on the Republic Steel case is that it leaves Republic owing some money to WPA.

Down in the lengthy Labor Board finding which the court upheld was a section dealing with back pay for employees whom the Board ordered Republic to re-employ.

Since the original unpleasantness on which the whole row was based took place back in the spring of 1937, some of these men had been out of work a long time and had gone on relief; so the Labor Board, in ordering the company to give them their back pay, stipulated that it deduct therefrom any sums which they might have received from WPA and pay those sums direct to WPA.

That isn't entirely unprecedented. WPA authorities say there have been a few similar cases, involving small sums, in which they have received payment. They haven't yet figured out how much they have coming from Republic.

DECISION COMFORTS LABOR BOARD

THE Republic decision, incidentally, heartened the Labor Board more than anything that has happened in months. For it was this case which the Board withdrew in the spring of 1938, after it had already got into court with it, because of the Supreme Court's famous ruling against Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in the Kansas City stockyards case.

Wallace had set maximum rates for livestock sales commissions in the Kansas City yards. The Supreme Court threw these rates out on April 25, 1938, holding that Wallace had simply taken as his own the findings of "active prosecutors for the government" and that the packers had been denied a full and fair hearing.

These "feds" interpret the recent murder of Edward J. O'Hare, wealthy race track owner, as a possible curtain raiser.

Al Capone is due to walk out of prison a free man Nov. 19. O'Hare, back in the days of Capone's greatness, ran a dog track for him and was an important figure in his organization. Since Capone's imprisonment, O'Hare has risen to riches he did not have in the old days.

One rumor is that Capone was turned down when he tried to levy on O'Hare for a contribution to help pay the $10,000 in tax liens which Capone must pay before his release is final.

WOULD EASE BUILDING PAYMENT

AT least one and possibly several attempts to liberalize the Federal Housing Act in the hope of stimulating low-priced home construction will be made at the next session of Congress. One senator—a Republican, by the way—is now drafting a bill which would make it possible to build a home under FHA financing without making any down payment whatever.

He proposes to have this apply to construction costing less than $4000 and to stipulate a 10 per cent down payment on homes costing more than that.

His argument is that there are plenty of people whose annual incomes are enough to enable them to pay for a house, but that the down payment proposition is a hump they can't get over. By removing it, he hopes a wide new field of construction would be opened.

PROPOSE HELP FOR STRANDED MIGRANTS

ONE of the innumerable complications in the problem of the dispossessed sharecropper, tenant farmer, and "dust bowl" migrant is that of relief. The Department of Agriculture estimates that some 350,000 families in this group have gone adrift in recent years.

They wander into other states, and when they fail to find work fall into dire distress, since the local authorities naturally tend to deny relief to them on the ground that they are not residents of the state.

Congressman Jerry Voorhis hopes to get public hearings this winter on a bill he has introduced to meet this situation. He would have the federal government make grants to reimburse states for money spent on relief for out-of-state people.

Under his proposal, administration of this relief would be handled locally, subject to the general approval of some federal agency, such as the Social Security Board.

Incidentally, Farm Security Administration officials say that while a number of families were set adrift this fall by drought in the southwest, a few of them headed west. They'd heard too many stories about people like themselves who went to California in search of work and couldn't find it.

Baseball Umpires In Venezuela Are Perfect Gentlemen

ENNIS, TEX. — Baseball umpires in Venezuela are scholars as well as gentlemen, in the estimation of Andy Rabe, manager of the Amarillo "West Texas League" team.

Rabe recently returned here from a barnstorming tour of the South American country.

"The umpires are among the best-educated men in the country," said Rabe. "Our American players could argue with the in English. They speak that as well as Spanish."

Rabe took a team of American players, mostly from West Texas, to Venezuela for a one-month stand at Caracas, where Venezuela's best ball park is located.

The Americans lost six and won seven games against Venezuelan players.

"The Venezuela teams have improved 100 per cent since I was there last in 1931," said Rabe. "They kept pace with American rules, and the only rule they don't follow in the scoring of sacrifice flies."

The American manager said that Venezuelan fans take the game seriously and alternately cheer and boo. The socially-elect have seats behind home plate at 15 bolivars '45 a seat and the prices range down to the equivalent of $1.50 for the bleachers.

Hero of the 10-games series, Rabe said, was an American pitcher for the Venezuelans-Carrasquel, who has played for Washington in the American league.

Carrasquel, a Venezuelan by birth, pitched successfully both for and against his native countrymen.

Rabe's team was made up of Frank Grabek, Lloyd Summers, and Bob Bailey of the Pampa, Tex. Club; Quinn Lee of Beaumont; Jim Bivins of Oklahoma City; Tex Nugent, and Kirby Jordan of Midland; Bob Decker of Big Springs; Eddie Guynes of Lamesa; Harold Gregory of Anneton, Miss.; Bones Sanders and Ray Nichols of Amarillo.

Stub Of A Pencil Which Wrote Law Placed In Museum

Austin, Texas. — Stub of a pencil with which Col. J. A. Chambers, early Texas colon, drafted the bill upon which Texas school law is based, has been presented to the University of Texas, Dr. Homer P. Rainey, University president, has announced.

Colony Chambers, a native of Mississippi but a resident of Tex. from 1850 until his death in 1893, served as a member of the basis of the State's present school system.

He wrote the law with a plain lead pencil which was preserved among his effects. His grandson, C. A. Patterson of Oklahoma City, has presented the 56-year-old treasured stub to the University.

Dr. Rainey pointed out that the pencil and the University are probably the same age, the number one institution in the state's educational system having been opened in

NAVY CALLS IN LAST COAL BURNER; WEEP, MATEY, FOR SHE WAS A LADY

'Galloping Ghost of China Coast' Retired

BY WILLIS THORNTON NEA Service Staff Writer... SING a dirge of the sea, matey—the last coal-burning fighting ship of the United States navy has been driven from the oceans.

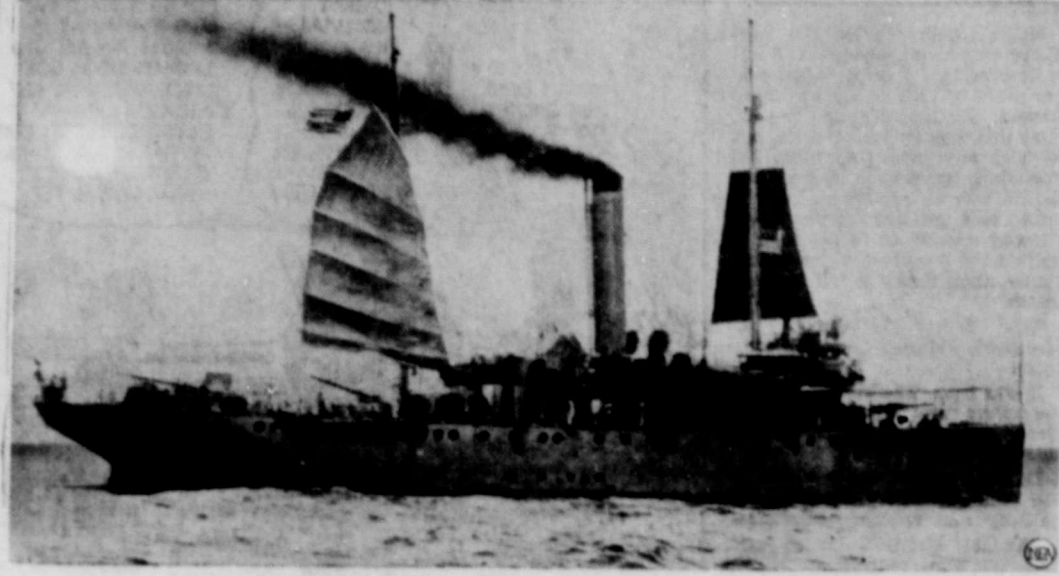

When the stubby coastal gunboat, Sacramento, "Galloping Ghost of the China Coast," started a few days ago for an ignominious retirement berth in the freshwater port of Michigan City, Ind., she closed the book on a whole era of naval propulsion. The domination of oil now is complete.

They're making the Sacramento a naval reserve training ship. They've stripped her of all but two of her weapons—guns that have been smoking from more than firing practice, too, and that's more than some of these snooty Diesel-driven packets can boast.

They'll keep her from the frontier seas where she's chugged these 25 years. But they can't strip out the holes that bullets blasted through her funnels on the Yangtze. They can't chip out all of the concrete that was poured into her bow to reinforce plates torn by the ice filled seas up Archangel way. They can't rob a lady of her reputation—and the Sacramento was and is a lady.

A PROPER LADY CAN NUDGE WITH VIGOR... BIT active for a lady? Yes, but she proved that a proper lady can rub elbows with the world—occasionally tossing in a little extra dig—and still keep her good name.

First it was Vera Cruz. She had scarcely been commissioned in 1914 when she was sent down for the U. S. naval landing and occupation of the city. Then it was the Barbary Coast. She was the first American to that wicked lane since the days of Decatur, and she still had her good name when she left.

U. S. S. Sacramento, last of the navy's coal-burning fighting ships. Once they rigged her with the sail of a Chinese junk to conserve fuel.

During the World War, she helped convoy 483 ships, sailing more than 63,000 miles. She rescued the crews of the Sebastian when it burned at sea in 1917, and of the Swan River when it sank while the Sacramento was trying to tow it to port.

In 1919 she was frozen in at Murmansk while serving the troops guarding the Russian and Siberian Railway.

Three years later, she appeared at Vladivostok in the nick of time to save foreigners caught in the middle between fighting Reds and White Russians.

in Yokohama in 1923, helped the Philippine Constabulary against rebels in Socorro in 1924.

In 1926-27 she helped protect the foreign colony at Canton during an uprising. By 1931 she was off Helize, Honduras, helping earthquake victims and rescuing a group of castaways on Cocos Island.

SHE was present at the first bombing of Changhai by the Japanese. One bomb landed 29 yards off her bow, broke in all her ports, smashed the boats, injured several of her crew. She evacuated refugees from Shanghai and Hong Kong to Manila. She was at the bombing of Swatow, too.

Yes, she was a lady, and proud, too, but not too proud to dress herself in the sail of a Chinese junk one time and sail along with the Oriental wind to conserve the coal in her hunkers.

Only 226 feet long, drawing but 14 feet, and very slow, she tossed like a chip in a typhoon. She said farewell to Straits Settlements, Singapore, Penang, Aden Suez, Port Said and Alexandria and steamed on into another storm in the Mediterranean. But on past Naples, Marseilles, Gibraltar, the Azores and Bermuda, she came.

She reached New York in time to serve at the scene of the Squalus disaster. She stood by during the long weeks of the struggle to raise the sunken submarine as a "hotel" for the rescue workers, and helping to tow the Squalus to Portsmouth.

And now she's coming down the St. Lawrence to the Great Lakes that will be her prison. Frankly, it's no way to treat a lady.

Pictures May Prove When You Speed

By United Press... EL PASO, Texas—Future violators of speed laws in El Paso may be faced with photographic evidence in court if plans of the police department's traffic division are realized.

The division is experimenting with a device designed to prevent arguments in the court room between police and motorists as to extent of violations of the law. The device is a "traffic eye" which takes pictures of the speeding automobile and a speedometer mounted on the fender of the patrol car.

Protection for the motorist is provided by the contrivance. Unless the automobile and the traffic car are traveling at the same rate of speed, the picture will be blurred and "no evidence."

By United Press... FORT WORTH, Texas—Twelve prospective jurors were summoned for a six-man jury in county court here to try a man charged with gambling at poker.

Ranger Bowlers In Contest On Sunday

The bowling team, which has been playing in the match games at Breckenridge each Sunday and at the Bowling Palace here on Wednesday nights for the past several weeks, again played at Breckenridge Sunday, but were defeated by the Breckenridge bowlers by the close margin of nine pins, in a total of three games.

Those playing in the Ranger team Sunday were Finis Langford, W. J. Barr, E. F. Arterburn, Freshman Phillips and D. E. Dahlgren.

Several other Rangerites attended the match game.

Great interest is being taken in bowling, and the City Bowling League is now getting ready for the winter league, which will start in a few days. At these events, when the teams play their matches, spectators will see some real bowling, as the boys in Ranger are becoming crack bowlers.

The opening of the Bowlers League will be announced later. Those wishing to enter their teams in the league can do so, if entered before the date set for opening, by notifying the manager at the Bowling Palace.

One of the Ranger teams has been exchanging match games with Mineral Wells for several weeks and expects Mineral Wells to play a return match next Monday night at Ranger.

An agreement has been signed between two eastern colleges which have consented to exchange goal posts after a football game on a gentlemanly basis. No more riots, and the end of another Golden Era in college life is in sight.

Medical Program Of FSA Is Being Pooled In Counties

DALAS, Texas—C. M. Evans, regional director of the farm security administration, announced today that the FSA was expanding its medical program under which money loaned farm families is pooled by counties "for more certain pay to physicians and more complete service to farmers."

Evans said that reports from the Texas and Oklahoma families the FSA is aiding showed that nearly 10,000 families have unpaid doctor bills amounting to nearly half a million dollars. He said that 8,000 cases of serious illness were without a physician's care.

He said that this contrasts with the few counties in the two states in which cooperative medical services have been operating during the last year. In six Texas and Oklahoma counties which have the cooperative pooling plan, he said, adequate medical service had been received by the participating farmers and almost full payment had been made of doctors' bills.

Loans of $15 or $20 made by FSA to the farm families for medical supplies were pooled and paid out under directions of the county medical society. Participants called the doctor of their choice as they needed him, and his bill was turned in to the county committee handling the pool. The year's pool was divided into monthly quotas, and if there was not enough money to pay all bills in any one month, each doctor was paid his pro rata share.

Evans said 37 county medical units now are operating under FSA in Texas and "we hope to double that number shortly."

First Important Date In Politics In State June 3

AUSTIN, Texas—The Democratic calendar for state races has June 3 as its first important date. That is the deadline for applications of candidates for state and district offices for places on the state democratic primary ballot.

Parties that cast less than 100,000 votes in the last governor's election nominate by convention. On June 10 the state democratic executive committee will meet and certify the names of candidates to the various county committees. County candidates have until June 17 to file their applications for ballot places and county democratic committees meet on the same day to draw lots for the order of the names on the ballot. The ballot will be made up in each county on June 24.

The first vote will be taken on July 27. The result in that election, known as the first primary, will be canvassed by the state democratic executive committee on August 12. The leading two candidates in each race will be certified back to the counties for the second primary or run-off primary to be held on Aug. 24. If a candidate for any office receives a majority of votes in the first primary, as Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel did in 1938, no candidate will be certified for that particular office.

Results of this second or run-off primary will be canvassed by the state democratic executive committee on Sept. 3. On Sept. 10, the state democratic convention will be held. Then a platform will be adopted and the candidates who were chosen in the primary elections will be certified to the secretary of state as the democratic candidates for the general election.

Parties with less than 100,000 votes will hold state conventions on Aug. 13 for the purpose of nominating state tickets. Independents can also get on the ballot for the general election which will be held on Nov. 5. Their names must be filed with the secretary of state by Sept. 23. The application of an independent must be signed by one per cent of the total number of people who voted in the last general election if the candidate seeks a state office. For district offices, the application must have three per cent of last vote in the district. There are numerous minor elections on 1940's political calendar. February the county commission courts are required to name election judges to serve in a county. By April 1, the county collectors are required to set poll tax lists for the various precincts in the county.

An important date for the voters is Jan. 31 on or before that time they must have paid a tax or obtained an exemption certificate if they wish to vote in year's elections.
