The youth said that he had no connection with the alleged plot, but that two other youths had planned it for Thursday night.

PEACE MOVES OVER EUROPE ARE A PUZZLE

Confusion and rumors were rife throughout Europe today, as conflicting reports of the status of the proposed Russian-Finnish peace move, started in Stockholm were received from various sources.

The London Daily Mail today printed dispatches stating that the Finnish government had definitely rejected the Russian proposals for peace so too drastic and stated that they could continue to carry on the war.

Reports have also been received, and denied, that Baron Von Mannerheim was ill; that the former president of Finland had flown to Berlin to confer with Nazi officials, supposedly on peace plans, or moving peace negotiations from Stockholm to Berlin, and that the Russian and Finnish government officials were to confer, or were already conferring in Tallinn, Estonia on peace plans.

Strict censorship in all countries reportedly involved in the peace proposals, either as principals or mediators, prevents accurate accounts of any progress that may be made however.

Meantime the Finns reported that they were holding their ground at Viipuri and north of Lake Ladoga, and that heavy losses had been sustained by Russian forces on all fronts where there was any activity.

At Paris Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles is reported to have asked Washington for full particulars concerning the Scandinavian peace proposals. It was not believed that Russia would accept the United States as a mediator, however, because of strong Finnish sympathy.

Activity Grows In German-Allied War On Land, Air Sea

Great Britain gave further indication today that she is planning on a long war with Germany, by calling another group to the colors. The call today was for youths of 23 years to report, many of whom are to report by tomorrow and who are already partially trained.

At the same time the air ministry announced another of the long flights by Royal Air Force planes, from England over France, all of Germany to Poland and back to France, where the 16-hour flight ended. No casualties were reported although the planes passed over Germany twice.

From Paris it was reported that a German patrol raid on the Western Front had been repulsed.

War on the sea continued with Berlin claiming to have sunk 30,000 tons of shipping in the last few days, and Britain announcing scuttling by her crew of the big German freighter Uruguay, when the ship was sighted by British warplanes. The ship carried 14 officers and 40 men.

Profit Division Is Sought In Suit At Court In Eastland

C. B. Hutchison of Eastland county has filed suit in 88th district court against Mrs. M. Brownstian of Howard county in an effort to recover $750, which he contends is his rightful share in a pipe sale deal, from the defendant.

He represents to the court in his petition that Mrs. Brownstian, who operates the Big Spring Iron Metal company, had an order for a quantity of pipe and that she enlisted his aid in finding the right size material.

According to the plaintiff, he found the right size pipe and was to buy it for the Big Spring Iron Metal when she closed the deal herself and sold the pipe at a profit of $1,500. The plaintiff contends that it is customary in his business in such a deal that the profit be divided. He stated there was an understanding he was to receive 50 percent of the profit.

The two buses loaded with boys will leave Fort Worth at 8:30 a.m. and will arrive in Ranger about 9:30 that night.

Approval Given On Record Work

A project providing for the re-indexing of the marriage, birth and death records in the office of County Clerk R. V. Galloway has been approved, it was announced today by Area WPA Engineer R. Tower Dickinson.

The project, providing for an expenditure of $11,978.58, will result in the re-indexing of 12,000 marriage, 12,000 birth and 6,000 death records. The Cott system will be employed.

WPA workers have been employed since September 8, 1938, in record work at the county clerk's office. R. W. Creavenger, who is in charge of the index of 58,000 entries and 30,000 entries of the direct index completed in the work of indexing deed records from 1865 to 1912.

Several years ago the index on all deed records from 1912 to date had been transcribed to modern indexes, but the ones from 1865 to 1912, consisting of about 85 deed record books and eight old-style indexes, were not modernized at that time, necessitating much more time to locate an old record back of 1912.

A crew of five persons has been working on this project in the basement of the clerk's office since the project began.

All of the work will be thoroughly checked by the force in the county clerk's office before they are put into permanent form for the use of the public, to eliminate any errors that might occur, according to Clerk Galloway.

Japan's resentment was increased by the fact that the loan came on the eve of establishment of a new regime in China by the Tokyo government.

War Has Already Tightened Belts of Nearly Every Nation In Europe, Where Hoover Predicts a "Hunger Spot" Soon

By WILLIAM H. LAWRENCE
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Mar. 8.—War already has tightened the belt of almost every nation in Europe, which former President Hoover predicts will be one vast "area of starvation" by the time hostilities end.

Belligerents and non-belligerents alike have effected or prepared various degrees of food controls, according to information obtained today from official and semi-official sources.

Indications are that the sharp food shortages exist among refugees in Poland, where Mr. Hoover has estimated that 7,000,000 persons will be starving within 60 days. Congress is considering proposals for federal appropriation for European relief, especially in Poland.

In other nations acute shortages are not yet reported. However, groups within certain states—notably Jews in Germany and some refugees in France—have been reported to be suffering food deficiencies.

The big belligerents, Germany, France and Britain, all have adopted strict rationing of food. Neutral Switzerland, because of the difficulty of obtaining imports, has instituted equally thorough rationing.

The commerce department reports that virtually every European country has prepared a food control system, but that so far actual food shortages themselves are not the major cause of such preparation.

"Food rationing is adopted partly because of actual shortages, because of potential shortages (poor crops or sunk cargoes) and to restrict consumption, even when food is available to lessen increased spending which leads to inflation," the department said.

Government reports show these rationing plans:

Germany: weekly ration for normal consumer: bread 5 pounds, 4.6 ounces, or 70 per cent of usual purchases; meat and meat products, 1 pound 2.7 ounces, or 52 per cent of usual purchases; cheese, 2.2 ounces, or 52 per cent of usual; sugar, 8.8 ounces, or 47 per cent of usual; "nahrungsmittel" (meal, rice, tapioca, pudding powder, etc.) 5.2 ounces. No other countries in the Balkans and the Baltic have prepared economic controls, but so far as is known here, none have adopted rationing plans yet.

The school is for those who are working and who are unable to attend school during the day. Tuition is free.

Scandinavian "Peace Move" May Involve Most of Warring Nations If Any Action Is Taken Up By Finland

United Press Cable Editor

A Scandinavian "peace drive" to end the Finnish-Russian war before the Allies get into it and make the Scandinavian countries a battleground seemed unlikely to succeed today.

Sweden was understood to be the intermediary and to have transmitted to Finland the terms on which Russia will agree to an armistice.

The reported terms are so hard that it is questionable whether the Finns will accept them, especially Baron Mannerheim, their military commander. The Russian terms are said to include possession of the entire Karelian isthmus, Lake Ladoga, a naval base on the island of Hanko, off Finland's Southern coast, and a strip of the Petsamo region on the Arctic. Such terms actually exceed what the Russians asked in the first place, over which Finland went to war rather than accept.

Not only Russia and Finland, but the three Scandinavians, Germany, Great Britain and France are directly involved in the present situation.

The Scandinavian move, according to opinion in London and Paris, may have been designed to head off a direct appeal to Finland to the Allies for military aid, which might widen the conflict to the whole of Scandinavia. Germany was believed to be backing the peace move, both to avoid being attacked by the Allies through her back door on the Baltic, and to insure a continuance of the minerals and other supplies she gets from Sweden and Norway.

A Finnish appeal to the Allies might force France and Britain to act—either to give actual military aid or sacrifice Finland to the Russian invasion and lose respect and sympathy in many friendly neutral countries.

Paris reports that the Finnish cabinet has been studying the question of appealing to the Allies for regular army aid, but to have

TALK ON SOCIAL SECURITY ACCOUNTS

Old-age and survivor's insurance system is similar to other plans. The worker contributes, and so does he, to help meet the needs of those who are unable to work. In other words, a premium on what is called an insurance policy will pay benefits to the insured if he should die. If he lives to the age of 65, he will receive a pension. 47,000,000 workers now are under the Social Security Act. Each worker's wages are recorded by his employer. These records are used to determine how much the worker has paid in taxes. At least once a year or once a worker leaves his employment, he can get a post card card at the nearest field office of the Social Security Administration. He has to do is fill in and mail it to the Board and he will receive a statement of his record. This record will be correct. SERIAL STORY

$15 A WEEK BY LOUISE HOLMES

COPYRIGHT, 1943, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Florabelle's party turned to be a drinking affair with three men in an apartment. Ann is sorry that she cannot give Clara more wine, but Ann is not even cordial. She wishes she had never come.

CHAPTER XIV

STEVE eyed Ann's drink. "Are you hardy enough for that kind of stuff?" he asked. "I graduated from grape juice several years ago."

Ann was still blushing. To make any kind of a scene only meant that she would focus the attention of the party upon herself and, more than anything else, she wanted to remain in the background.

Ann wandered through the little hall and into the bathroom. She dumped half the contents of her glass into the lavatory and returned to the party.

Jake met her, putting his arm around her waist. She slipped out of his embrace and went back to her chair. Jake seated himself on the arm, leaning over her.

"But ready for another drink?" he purred. "I still have some." "Like it?" "Well enough."

He threw back his head and roared. "Hard to please. That's the way I like 'em."

There was a discreet tap on the door and a waiter was admitted. He brought menus and stood by, pencil and pad in hand, while the guests quarreled loudly over a choice of food.

"What'll you have, peachy pie?" Jake asked, turning to Ann. "Oysters on the half shell," she said dully.

"Breast of turkey with a slice of baked ham and mushrooms—cauliflower in cream—no potatoes—lettuce hearts with Roquefort dressing and—let me see—meringue glace and coffee—black."

She handed her menu to the waiter and he bowed. "Clara, who had been wildly muddling through the confusing page, blinked. "I'll take the same," she giggled. Steve looked at Ann curiously. It ended with five repeats of her order.

STEVE went to Ann. "I want to talk to you," he said. She raised her eyebrows and he pulled a chair beside her. Jake yelped, "Hey—that's my girl," but Steve paid no attention. Jake sat down and pulled Clara to his lap. She laid her head on his shoulder like a drowsy kitten.

"What are you doing here, Ann?" Steve asked. "Killing an evening. What are you doing?"

"You tell me! Do you like this sort of thing?" "Do you?" "You're always answer my questions with more questions!" His indifference had changed to lively interest.

She smiled demurely. "It's conversational tact employed by those who do not wish to appear too obvious."

How could she get away? An open break, she knew, would be unsuccessful. The men were in a mood to have their entertainment come to an abrupt end. Schemed, fitted in the back of her mind.

Steve drained his glass. The pupils of his eyes were slightly dilated, his face was flushed. "You're clever as they come," he said. "Where did you pick up your line?"

"From Pete." "Pete?" "My father."

Steve laughed. "I'd like to meet that fella. He must be somebody." "He was. He lived by his wits."

"And his little daughter is following in his footsteps." She shrugged, twisting her glass. It was going to take all the wits she possessed to get out of this situation. The evening had only begun. There was no doubt that it would progress to new heights.

Two waiters came in. They set a table in the center of the room. Dinner was a nightmare of clumsy ribaldry and intimate patter.

THEY were still at the table when Jake slumped forward. Too many drinks, the warm air and rich food, had done their worst with him.

Ann said, "Steve—Clancy—you'd better do something about Jake."

They pulled him to his limp feet and headed down the hall to the bathroom. Florabelle went to the kitchen in search of bicarbonate of soda. She laughed softly, repeating over and over, "Jake can't take it—Jake can't take it."

Ann sprang to her feet. "Get your things, Clara," she said quickly. "We're getting out of here."

"No—I don't want to go," Clara howled. "I'm having fun—I never had so much fun in my life—"

Ann shook her arm. "Don't be a little fool, she blazed on—"

"You and I are on a spot. Come on—"

Clara jerked her arm free. She stumbled past Ann and into one of the bedrooms, slamming the door behind her. Ann heard the key turn in the lock. She heard Clara muttering, "I won't go—you can't make me—"

She had chosen to lock herself in the room where Ann's hat lay on the bed. Hesitating only briefly, she slipped on her shoes and slipped out of the door.

Ann put an arm around her and led her into the house, breathing a sigh of relief. Inside their own apartment, she said, "Don't cry, Clara. Everything is all right. You're home. Maybe this will teach us a lesson."

She was mixing soda in a glass of water if Florabelle considered the correct dosage for Jake certainly could do Clara no harm.

Clara was a sight. Tears had wrought havoc with mascara and rouge. Her eyes were swollen, her mouth loose and shaking.

"I never was so mad in my life," she sobbed hysterically. "They can't do that to me. I guess I've got feelings just the same as anybody else."

"What did they do?" Ann asked, proffering the glass. Clara obediently drank, still crying.

"What did they do?" Ann asked again, hanging Clara's coat in the closet.

"When you left, those two hard men were sore. They took me down to the street and put me in a cab. They said it was time to throw out the trash. Oh—oh—I won't be insulted like that."

"Never mind," Ann said soothingly. "Be glad they put you in a taxi. She helped Clara to bed and slowly undressed. Well, she'd been on a party and that was that. She'd never do it again."

Thinking of Steve, she smiled. He was a rascal, but an engaging rascal.

CLARA was still fast asleep when Ann went to church the next morning. She was grumpy through dinner and napped all afternoon. At 4 Florabelle, evidently just out of bed, crossed the hall. Her face sagged with weariness. Ann decided again that Florabelle was not so young as she pretended to be.

"Come in, Florabelle," she said. "Clara is asleep." She braced herself for a storm of criticism.

None was forthcoming. Florabelle said, "Sorry you didn't like the party."

"You see, I don't drink," Ann explained apologetically. "I've never been drunk in my life and—oh, I don't know—"

"You're smart," Florabelle let it go at that. "You certainly went over in a big way with Steve."

"Did I?" "I'll say you did." She jumped to another topic. "Wasn't Clara a mess?" "Pose Clara," Ann said. After a little more luscious conversation, Florabelle rose to leave. Opening the door, she gasped, "Oh, it's you!"

Ann left the apartment. Closing the door softly, she heard Florabelle fuming. "Where in hell is she? She's not coming back!"

Ann fled into an elevator and out of the building, not stopping until she reached the corner. A bus was lumbering down the street. She had put a 50-cent piece in the pocket of her dress—mad money—she fumbled for it.

Ann let the bus pass. What could she do about Clara? She shouldn't leave her. She looked artfully back at the lighted hotel.

"I can't go back," she thought. She'll have to take care of herself. "I tried—"

Suddenly she was startled by the sound of running feet. About to take to her heels, she recognized Steve's voice.

"Wait a minute—here's your hat." He dashed up, breathing hard. "Whew—I'm winded—not so good at running as I used to be." He held out the hat.

"CLARA—" Ann said worriedly. "Wouldn't she come?" "Not a chance. I did my best."

He touched her elbow. "That's my car over there. I'll take you home."

"Thanks—the bus is coming." "Oh, I guess not." His fingers tightened on her elbow.

"Steve, I'd rather go home alone. She was close to angry tears. "I hate all of you."

"All right—I'll buy you a taxi." "You won't do anything for me."

"Please, Ann." He looked so contrite that she ceased wriggling. "I apologize for myself and my friends. Let me drive you home. I want to talk to you. Please."

Ann could not know that it was the first time he, Claybourne, had pleaded with a girl. He, in his turn, would have been surprised to know her reason for relenting. Riding home with Steve would be the means of saving carfare.

"All right," she said. His car was long and broad and comfortable. Ann sat in a corner of the deeply cushioned seat, offering nothing. Steve asked for directions and shot through the traffic, dodging between cars, making green lights on the last flicker.

Ann kept silent. So Steve was drunk after all. She made another foolish mistake. She set her teeth as they zig-zagged from one curb to the other. When Steve crashed across an intersection against a red light, miraculously missing another car, Ann heard the faint whine of a police siren.

"Steve—the police—" she gasped. What a night. Why hadn't she stayed in the safe confines of Clara's apartment? (To Be Continued)

Making Americans Quickly

A proposal to simplify the process of naturalizing aliens has been made by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. Under existing laws, she told the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco, tests for immigrants are too drastic.
 She recommended that requirements for "responsible aliens" be relaxed. This would include, Miss Perkins said, aptitude tests for elderly aliens.

The millions of Americans out of work could not be expected to take kindly to any plan that would open the gates to a flood of aliens, potential competitors for the few jobs available. After a reasonable number of immigrants have been admitted, it should be the desire of officials everywhere to make them good Americans as soon as possible. Sufficient time must be given them, however, for acquaintance with the responsibilities of citizenship and to make certain they are fully prepared to relinquish their loyalty to any other countries.

Parliament Writes Blank Checks

A new system of making appropriations has been developed in England. When the war leaders need money, they go to Parliament and ask for 100 pounds (about $500).
 Obviously, they need more than that for the functions of government—and actually, the 100 pounds is really considerably more.

It may be a million pounds, or 10 million pounds. The word "100," is merely a token. Not even Parliament knows how much it is voting. All it knows that it has agreed to let the war cabinet spend another 100 pounds plus.

It is difficult to imagine the United States Congress operating under such procedure. Conjure up a picture, if you can, of the President going before the House and saying,
 "I need some more money. Write me another blank check."
 What is even more difficult, try to imagine Congress voting on it.

Swimming suits will apparently be longer this season.
 It was obvious they couldn't get any shorter without eliminating the industry completely.

Philadelphia, next June, will be full of a lot of people who will try to shove Destiny into a corner for a heart-to-heart chat.

Des Moines water department engineers are working on a problem to eliminate rings around the bathtub. Only way we can think of is not take baths.

The news is out—the king played hockey last month.
 Now the ice, like the censor, has melted.

The price of weddings is being cut in Britain for solders. It's hard to imagine any man joining up with the army just to get a bargain rate on his own private quarters.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS

Open Spaces Are Much Safer for Flying of Kites

Local kite fliers have been asked to seek wide open spaces in which to enjoy this pastime, to avoid any danger of getting their kites tangled in the electric wires. In addition to losing a kite, there is a possibility that someone may be injured, according to A. N. Larson, manager of the Texas Electric Service Company. He declared that each year a number of children are injured, some fatally, by accidents resulting from flying kites into electric wires, and urged parents to see that their children fly kites away from wires. If a kite should become entangled, the electric company will send a trained man to remove it, if it is possible to do so.

Mr. Larson listed four "don'ts" for kite fliers:
 Don't fly kites near electric wires.
 Don't make kite frames of metal or wire.
 Don't use sticks or climb poles to get kites off the wires.
 Electric company representatives will visit schools and give further information on how to use care in flying kites.

1920 Club Has Study of Education in Texas

"Education in Texas" was the subject for study at the meeting of 1920 Club, held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Blue room of the Gholson hotel. The study was conducted in the form of a symposium with Mrs. O. L. Phillips as chairman.

In the introductory remarks Mrs. Phillips spoke of the changing needs in education, especially the need for an education that prepares one to serve in some definite field. Mrs. John Kindle discussed the "Institutions" for education in Texas giving especially interesting information as to the schools for the colored population. Mrs. Helen C. Yonker, who recently returned from an extended visit in the north, compared the opinions of southern and northern educators giving convincing quotations from various leaders. Mrs. James R. Gregg traced the development of "Adult Education" pointing out the rapid growth of enrollment in this field.

In the business session following the program Mrs. O. L. Phillips was elected delegate to the District convention which will be held in Colorado City, April 1, 2, and 3 and Mrs. Mills Davenport was elected alternate.

Mrs. C. E. Maddocks, in reporting for the Civic Committee, encouraged members to take advantage of the plant exchange box which has been placed in the Joseph Dry Goods store. Mrs. Maddocks also announced that a "clean-up day" for Ranger is being planned for April.
