PICK GORMAN AS LOCATION FOR S.W.P.G.

Dick Weekes, manager of the Southwestern Peanut Growers Association, announced Monday the organization has selected Gorman as future headquarters. The organization is now located in Eastland.

Weekes said the removal to Gorman will be within 30 to 60 days and is being taken because more peanuts are marketed in Gorman than in any town of the state. In 1939 he said, 2,250 tons of peanuts were bought by the association in Gorman and that in 1938 the figure was 2,450 tons. Weekes added that the tonnage was only one-half of the total marketed in the town.

He also stated that Gorman would be the location of any cooperative undertaking established by the organization.

Weekes, Conrad Schaefer, Rising Star, president; J. D. Sargent, Tolar, vice president, and T. D. Robinson, De Leon, secretary-treasurer, on Friday of this week are to leave on a trip during which they will inspect cooperative fertilizer and peanut mill undertakings in Georgia and Florida. While in Georgia they will visit in Camilla, Ga., headquarters of the Georgia, Florida and Alabama Growers Association, an organization similar to the Southwestern Peanut Growers Association.

Raisers of Sheep And Goats to Meet Tuesday, Mar. 26

Sheep and goat raisers of Eastland County are being invited to meet at Eastland on Tuesday, March 26 at 2 p. m. to form a county organization and discuss how to market their wool and mohair. Elmo V. Cook, county agent, has announced. L. F. Aston, manager of the Mid-West Wool Marketing Association, Fort Worth, will talk to the group on cooperative marketing. Frank Grayson, Marketing Specialist for the U. S. Department of Agriculture will discuss mohair and wool grades.

There is no definite marketing set-up for wool and mohair in Eastland County, according to County Agent Cook. For this reason he is expecting a high percentage of the wool and mohair producers of the county to attend the meeting and help work out plans for a definite marketing arrangement. Growers have also requested the meeting in order that a county organization of sheep and goat raisers can be formed to sponsor an educational program to acquaint growers with solutions to some of their production problems such as selecting breeding animals, feeding, and control of parasites.

Cook estimates that the number of sheep and goats in Eastland County have increased at least ten fold in the last five years and states that if there were as many sheep and goats in the county as the land could conveniently carry their income would exceed all the present agricultural income of the county and the cattle carrying capacity would be increased greatly by the resulting eradication of weeds and brush.

Also, continued the agent, the Kraft-Phenix Cheese corporation is to give a gold medal to boys in the county who compose the best dairy demonstration team. The members of the second best team will be awarded silver medals.

Two gold medals will be awarded youths who have the nearest farm record and crop enterprise record. These will be given by the International Harvester company. Wilson and company will give a gold medal to the boy with the best demonstration record on beef or hog demonstrations.

The National Committee on Boys' and Girls' 4-H Club work will award a medal to the boy with the best report on advantages of rural electrification.

They Don't Know What's in the Cards

Waiting for something to happen on the Western Front, these German soldiers, according to Nazi censor's caption, while away their time playing cards and listening to the radio. Only in background is their hint of war. There a sentry, beside an anti-aircraft gun, scans the skies with field glasses, and steel helmets are parked handily atop the sodded blockhouse.

Urges Planting of Crops for Silage

"Now is the time to decide what crop or crops to plant for silage," advised Elmo V. Cook, County Agent, who called attention to two things to be considered in making the decision: First, the relative value of the different feed crops on a per ton basis; Second, the expected yield in tons per acre.

If there are two crops that will make the same yield on the land to be planted to feed, then the one that has the highest feed value should be planted. If two crops that will make different yields are being considered, then the one that makes the highest yield should be planted. The feeding value on a per ton basis differs slightly for different classes of livestock.

On a per ton basis, E. R. Eudaly, Extension Dairyman rates crops in the following order for feeding to dairy cattle: Best is corn, then grain sorghums such as hegari, kafir, and milo, then sweet sorghums, then sudan grass, and finally Johnson grass. If corn silage is rated at $5.00 per ton, then grain sorghum is worth $4.50, sweet sorghum $4.00, Sudan $3.50 and Johnson grass $3.00 per ton.

DALLAS, Mar. 18.—The body of Mrs. Albert Darver was recovered today from Trinity River near where her son, found nude on the country road, told officers he pushed her into the water. The son, Arnold Benson, 21, was released from a private sanitarium Sunday to have dinner with his mother and stepfather.

DALLAS, March 18.—Police today dragged the Trinity river, northwest of Dallas, after a young man admitted to them that he had pushed his mother into the river. According to police Arnold Benson stated that he and his mother were walking along the river bank when he pushed her in. She clung to him and he fell in the river with her.

Benson told police he swam two thirds of the way across the river before his mother let him go. He took off his clothes, he said, and dived for her several times.

When taken into custody young Benson was clad only in his underwear, which was wet, police said.

Dictators In A Conference Along Border

Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy and Adolf Hitler of Germany concluded a surprise conference at Brenner Pass, on the Italian-German frontier this morning and each started the return trip home without announcing why the conference was held, or its outcome.

The two were in conference, in the saloon car of Mussolini's private train, for two hours and a half. As Mussolini speaks German no interpreter was used and only the two dictators were in the car. After half an hour Foreign Ministers Von Ribbentrop of Germany and Count Ciano of Italy were called in.

Although it was not announced officially what was talked, it was hinted that Italy had agreed to enter into the European war on the side of Germany when the time seemed advantageous from the Italian viewpoint.

Observers of the European situation were of the opinion that the two dictators might have talked of the possibility of the war spreading into Southeastern Europe and the Balkan States, and means of keeping the Balkans out of the war. Hitler is believed to have exchanged peace views with Mussolini, who has been suggested on a number of occasions as a possible mediator.

In Vatican City Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles conferred for half an hour with Pope Pius XII. It was indicated that in view of the Hitler-Mussolini conference Welles would delay his return to the United States and would possibly repeat his visits to the French, German and British capitals. He had been scheduled to leave Rome early this week on the return trip.

Allies Confused By Turn of Events Throughout Europe

British and French sources were confused today over recent developments in the European diplomatic front. Emanuel Shinwell, laborite, told the British house of commons that Great Britain has lost 750,000 tons of shipping in the war instead of the 200,000 admitted by the admiralty.

He said he fears that food supplies may be curtailed by the German sea warfare. Newspapers in London today criticized the raid, Saturday night, on Scapa Flow naval base, where the admiralty said one ship was damaged. The Germans say that three battleships and a cruiser were hit by heavy bombs.

Peace Talks Gain Impetus

It is almost an accepted proposition nowadays that out of the present world war will come a federation of states, if not of the world, at least of Europe. The League of Nations grew out of the last war, and like the early American Federation, the league was incapable even of holding the respect of its member nations, much less maintaining peace among them.

It is possible the league will lend itself to complete rehabilitation, permitting use of the facilities which now exist. More likely, however, is the prospect of an entirely new body, formed independently of the league and avoiding the unpleasant connotations of that latter group.

Everyday men are talking about peace—planning the kind of peace they believe will do the world the most good. Suggestions come as freely from the belligerent nations as they do from the neutrals. Inherent in every proposal is the implication of a strong central body—an international parliament invested not only with the power of regulating international relations but also with the power to enforce its decrees.

One of the specific proposals is that of Clarence Streit in "Union Now." Streit proposes to found a union of democracies, with the Fascist nations eligible to join only when they change their governments to meet democratic specifications. The organization would be precisely like that of the United States government. The only difference would be that the organization would be enlarged to include the world, with nations taking the place of states in the American setup.

Wide support has been given the Streit plan. Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese ambassador to the United States, recently urged its application to the world in general. Meanwhile, the Institute for Intellectual Co-operation, and adjunct of the League of Nations announced in Paris that $1000 had been offered by Chester D. Pugsley, Peekskill, N. Y., attorney, for research on a world federation.

The tragic irony of all this peace talk is that it must be carried on alongside three wars in Europe and the Far East. If peace is possible on a permanent basis after the current wars are over, it is possible now. Wars are difficult to end, once they have been started. There is so much "face" to be saved by all parties.

A university student was fined $5 for saying "boo" to a policeman. The young man should have been complimented for his restraint.

The millennium will be much closer when headline writers finally forget about "Gone With the Wind."

A Greek sea captain was distressed by the fact that he bought 800 tons of coal that didn't burn from the U. S. navy. He should have known that most of the navy's fire was spent during congressional hearings over appropriations.

Ping Pong Tourney Is Scheduled At The Corral Center

A ladder ping pong tournament will start Friday, March 22, at the Corral Community Center.

According to reports the elimination and round robin tournaments have been used frequently in this vicinity, but the ladder type tournament is quite a novelty. There will be five ladders: junior boys, and junior girls; senior men and senior women, and mixed doubles with no age limit.

The drawing will be made Friday night for places on the ladder.

Any person can challenge the first, second or third person above him, and if he wins the match he is allowed to take the place of the loser on the ladder, while the loser goes down to that occupied by the winner. This type of tournament gives the ambitious players an opportunity to play as many matches as they desire, and to work their way to the top as fast as they are able.

The tournament will last until summer, and every three weeks the top ranking two players of each ladder will meet the first ranking players of Eastland and Cisco.

Tournament matches may be played at noon hours, afternoons or nights. All entries must be in by 6:00 o'clock Friday to be included in the draw for places. All late entries will be placed at the foot of the ladder.

YESTERDAY A VERY PROMISING young man and woman had just parted, and she was sitting alone in the room, looking at the clock. She was waiting for Paul to come back. She had a feeling that she was in a trap.

CHAPTER XXII
It was during that rosy week that Clara confided her wedding plans. She and Roy Swenson were to be married on Saturday of the following week.

Ann made a dress for her, and a beautiful little hat. Knowing that she must find another room, she let her plans ride, waiting until she should see Paul again. That next meeting might mean anything.

She saw him on Thursday night and the rosy days was no more. He seemed almost to dislike her. He informed her, quite coldly, that he had been transferred to Mexico, that he was leaving within a few days.

Ann couldn't know of his sleepless nights, that, in desperation, he had gone to the manager and asked to be transferred. The kiss in the park had done it. "I can't kid myself any longer," was the way Paul had put it to himself.

Ann felt that a door, through which she had glimpsed happiness, had been rudely slammed in her face. She almost felt that Paul had slapped her. Even then she felt no resentment toward Paul. He had stated his convictions fairly and squarely at their second meeting and she had promised to abide by them. It was her own fault if she had taken a casual kiss too seriously. She managed to put up a brave front.

"Does it mean a promotion for you, Paul?" she asked, ignoring the real issue, the personal issue. "Maybe a little—I'm not sure." They were standing on the steps of the rooming house. About to start for a walk, Ann had stopped short at his announcement.

"Could we go to a movie?" she asked. In a movie she needn't talk.

"Sure," he said. Neither Ann nor Paul could have told a single detail of the picture. For three hours they sat side by side, eyes on the silver screen, not speaking. Then they were again back on the rooming house steps. They stood silently until the two furtive-eyed young men who lived on the second floor passed inside.

"I don't like the look of those birds," Paul remarked, for something better to say. "I have the feeling they're up to no good." Ann agreed absently. It was hard going. After a moment, Ann said, "Will I see you again?"

"I'll try to make it. Pretty busy—getting packed and everything."

"I suppose you are."

"Well—He took a step away from her."

Ann bit her lip, hard. "Best of luck, Paul."

"Thank you. And you, Ann—things have got to break for you. You're the tops—you've got what it takes—the kind fates will catch up with you—I know they will."

"Will they?" she asked childishly.

"They've got to." He held out his hand. "Goodbye, Ann."

She put hers in it and quickly drew it away. "Goodbye, Paul."

FRIDAY and Saturday were unendurable days. Clara announced Paul's departure from the store. It was all over.

On Sunday Ann's troubles were pushed aside by the newspaper headlines. Florabelle's friend, Clancy, had been murdered in an apartment hotel. Florabelle had been arrested for the crime. Clancy's widow was flying from Omaha.

The girls gathered in the hall, looking with fearful eyes at the closed door of Florabelle's apartment. Even Neddy and Teddy were serious. Clara cried, Ann felt sick. Mrs. Follet went through the second floor hall, muttering to herself that she'd always known Florabelle would come to the girls, that she kept a respectable house and she wouldn't put up with such goings on. Myrtle crouched in a corner, her eyes big and hunted.

It was a strange day in the rooming house. Florabelle sent for clothes and Ann packed a bag. She would never forget that few minutes with Florabelle in the city jail. Locked doors, barred windows, guards—horrible.

"I didn't do it, Ann," the girl said. She was no longer a girl. Her face was ravaged and old.

"But that's what I get for playing with fire. Keep away from men, kid—men like Clancy." Ann tried to encourage her. "They'll find the right one soon, Florabelle. Keep hoping."

"I don't know who did it," Florabelle said through tight lips. "I was tight—we were all tight—somebody put the gun in my hand—" apprehended and Florabelle came home. She was a chastened woman. When Mrs. Follet asked her to leave the respectable rooming house she hadn't a word to say. Three days later the girls heard that she had married the postman. Ann never saw her again.

WHILE all this was going on Ann had been thinking. Nothing was going to come her way unless she forced it to do so. Her mind darted up and down blind alleys. There seemed to be no way out. At last she came to a conclusion and talked the matter over with Clara.

"I can't go on like this forever," she said. "I absolutely refuse to make over hats all my life."

Clara was alarmed. "You'd better hang on to what you've got."

"I will—until I get what I want. Clara, I've put in my name at the agencies—"

"A lot of good that'll do you."

"—for a place as parlor maid or companion or something like that."

Clara was horrified. "You mean you want to be somebody's servant?"

"Call it that if you want to. I don't mean general housework. I want to live in a beautiful home and handle nice things even if they don't belong to me. I want to live like decent people."

"What's the matter with the way we live?"

"Nothing—but I want to try this. I can very likely make as much as I do now and have a room and board beside."

Clara said, "I think you're crazy."

"Maybe I am—maybe I can't get a job without references—just the same I'm going to try. I have to leave here—"

This brought Clara around to her own enthralling affairs and Ann's decision was forgotten. Ann left the rooming house on Friday.

The girls bade her farewell in the upper hall. Neddy and Teddy openly disapproved of her next step which had been duly reported to them by Clara. Myrtle cried. Clara was so taken up with her approaching marriage that she scarcely noticed Ann's going.

Ann wondered a little that two girls could live together, sleep in the same bed, eat at the same table, for a year and feel no real fondness, one for the other. It had been an economic arrangement, nothing more.

Carrying her suitcase and heavy paper bag, Ann walked down Mrs. Follet's stairs and straight into adventure, dangerous adventure.

Public Is Warned About Carelessness In Driving Autos
Chief of Police Guy Pledger today issued a warning to Ranger automobile drivers, after receiving several complaints about the way many have been neglecting to observe traffic rules.

"I have noticed that children are particularly bad about careless driving," Pledger stated, "and I have had several complaints from several sources about their recklessness. We will have to start a campaign against traffic ordinance violators if the practices are not stopped."

Pledger pointed out that complaints had been made about several drivers of high school age, both boys and girls, and that they were to be watched to see that they did not endanger human lives by their recklessness.

Pledger stated that failure to stop at stop signs, cutting corners, particularly on left hand turns, not observing proper traffic precautions in the school zones and fast driving were among the most common complaints.

"We do not want to fine anyone," Pledger stated today, "but we will have to start doing so if more caution in driving is not used. It is not always younger drivers who are at fault, though they are the worst offenders, but some adults have become careless in observing traffic regulations. If the drivers, themselves, do not correct their bad habits we will be forced to give traffic tickets to the offenders."

Lost Dime Causes Trouble at El Paso
EL PASO, Tex.—It was only a dime, but what a furor it caused. The ten cent piece slipped from the grasp of a youthful owner and dropped through a sidewalk grating. Then things began to happen.

The boy lit a match to aid in locating the coin and dropped it through the grating. A quantity of waste paper was ignited, bringing fire engines racing.

Firemen quenched the blaze. Total loss was slight—the dime which the boy failed to recover.

Good Coffee Has Long Journey To Reach Your Cup

Good coffee begins hundreds of miles away from the cup in which it is served. It begins as a matter of fact where the green coffees are selected, and each successive step contributes to the goodness of the finished product.

Frequently, certain types of green coffees are known by the name of the buyer who always selects them. For instance, a certain very high-grade quality of green coffees is known in the market as the "Duncan" type. It is green coffee of this characteristic quality that is bought for Admiration Coffee by the Duncan Coffee Company. In fact, the Duncan Coffee Company is noted among the coffee grading and testing experts for buying only the top of the crop, the finest green coffees that the market affords. Mr. Jules E. Cathalogne, a highly respected coffee authority who has earned the reputation of an expert through many years of experience, is associated with one of the world's largest coffee expert organizations. Being so associated, he is in a position to know which roasters buy the finest coffees.

"Throughout the past twenty years," says Mr. Cathalogne, "we coffee men have watched with keen interest the rapid growth of the Duncan Coffee Company. The reason for the ever-increasing popularity of their product, Admiration Coffee, is no secret to me of the coffee trade. For we know that the Duncan Coffee Company has always purchased the finest coffees. They always buy the top of the crop."

H. M. DUNCAN

These fine, high-grade green coffees are blended under the supervision of Mr. H. M. Duncan, president and general manager of the Company, to produce the distinctive rich, winery and full-bodied flavor for which Admiration Coffee is famous. This blend, which was accepted whole-hearted-

Admiration Coffee is roasted the most modern process known to the coffee industry—Thermo-Roasting. Thermo-Roasted coffee never comes in contact with charring flames, being gently and uniformly roasted clear to the center of the bean by indirect heat.

When Admiration Coffee is roasted it is cut—not ground—with razor-edged steel knives in three ways, one to suit every type of coffee maker. Steel Cut is intended for percolators and pots and Dripkut for dripfilters.

Admiration is the only Coffee on the Southwestern market which has a cut prepared especially for glass coffee makers. Glassdrip Admiration is, in fact, recommended by the manufacturers of both Cory and Sixx coffee makers.

Vacuum-packed Admiration, in either the tin or the glass jar, affords a superlatively fine, rich coffee guaranteed to give satisfaction. It is also packed in an economical, Cellophane-sealed triplex bag.

Listen Girls... Beauty Comes From Within!

Our finest athletes are taught to keep the best health habits, and this includes drinking plenty of milk. Athletes are always the first to say, "I'll take milk" when asked what they will drink. In schools teaching beauty aids, girls are definitely learning that beauty comes from within. Their slogan, too, has become, "I'll take milk." Clemmer's milk is especially liked by healthy young people. Healthy people are usually more pleasant.

LOCATED in all sections of Texas, 141 refineries manufacture into finished petroleum products 80 per cent of the State's crude oil production.

In contrast, Texas processes only 3 per cent of its cotton production and none of its wool or mohair.

Petroleum refining now constitutes 41 per cent of the value of all Texas manufactures.

Of the 225,000 Texans regularly employed by the oil business of the State, 25,000 skilled workmen and 5,000 office employees (a $50,000,000 annual payroll) are employed in this one division of our oil industry.

All of the Texas oil refined in our State, whether used in Texas or shipped to other states, paid last year in taxes an average of 9.8 cents per barrel.

CHAPTER XXIII
AT the foot of the stairs Ann started back to the kitchen. She hesitated upon finding the two furtive-eyed lodgers in the hall. One of them stood against the wall, a suitcase behind his knees. There was a tenseness about him, his eyes were fever bright.

He did not speak to Ann, seemed hardly conscious of her presence. The second young man was talking in a low tone at the telephone near the kitchen door. Ann placed her suitcase and paper bag near the wall and went into the kitchen. She said good-by to Mrs. Follet and returned to the hall. Both men were at the telephone, one beseeching the other to "cut it out."

Ann heard him say, "My God—break it up—every minute counts." As she stooped for her baggage, the paper bag tipped, scattering articles on the floor. Hastily she gathered them together, caught up her suitcase, and ran into the street. Her arm reached when she finally deposited her belongings in a bare little room at the Center. Paul had carried her things on the last move. Paul.

It was lonely in the little room and Ann went down to the lounge. Choosing a magazine, she sat down. Sprightly dance tunes tinkled from the radio. She leaned back, remembering the Albans Club party when she and Paul had danced. That night had become more than a memory, it was now a tormenting dream. The music stopped and a man's clear voice brought the news. In the midst of war talk, he interrupted himself to announce a bulletin. A bonded messenger, delivering $25,000 worth of jewels, had been slugged and robbed. The assignment was the property of the Temple wholesale jewelers.

It must have been an hour later when she went to her room. She lifted the suitcase to the narrow bed and stopped short, frowning. While the black leather and general aspect of the bag were the same as her own, she knew the suitcase did not belong to her. It was too new. She tried the catch to find it locked. Near the handle was a name in gold letters, "John B. Temple."

Ann sat down suddenly, keener improving NYA girls. The other games will be: Eastland vs. Broncs, and High School vs. Corral Community Center team.

her hand on the suitcase. Was it possible that $25,000 worth of jewels rested under her hand? If so, how had it come with her to that room? The two young men in the hall—she had always been suspicious of them—one had been standing over a suitcase. When she returned from the kitchen he had been at the telephone with his back to her. She remembered that her paper bag had fallen over, spilling some of its contents. She had hastily gathered them together. Had she then picked up the wrong suitcase? She again examined the damaging evidence with a sick certainty that she had done that very thing.

Doubtless, long before this, the two men knew what had happened. They knew that she had escaped with the prize. They would have little difficulty in locating her. Clara knew where she had gone—but Clara had been ready to leave for a kitchen shower when Ann took her departure. Did the other girls know? She hadn't mentioned her plans but Clara told everything—

ANN got up and walked about the room, her hands tightly clasped. She looked over her shoulder at the window. There was a fire escape just outside. Snatching up the suitcase, she ran from the room, down the stairs and into the office, at the same time trying to decide what to do. If she telephoned the police they would no doubt arrest her. A dim light burned in the lounge, the office was dark. The entire floor was deserted.

Ann locked herself into the office and turned on a desk light. Tremblingly she leafed through the telephone book. Temple—there it was—John B. Bittersweet 4-4545. Mouth dry, fingers shaking, she dialed the number, then switched off the light. A precise voice answered. "Mr. John Temple's residence." "May I speak to Mr. Temple?" Then, "John Temple speaking." "Mr. Temple—this is Ann Brown. I think I have your jewels." "You think you have them," he roared. "Don't you know?" She heard him speak sharply to someone beside him. "I'm quite sure. I got them by mistake." "Look here, young lady, get down to business and explain yourself. Someone half killed my messenger to get those jewels. Give me the facts and be quick about it. If this is a stall—" "Please—it's no stall. When I left my rooming house tonight, picked up the wrong suitcase. I can't open it but it has your name near the handle." "Where is it now?" "I'm sitting on it. Mr. Temple—I'm scared. It would be easy enough for those men to follow me—" "Where are you?" "At the Center on West Hubbard—" "Where did you get the suitcase?" She gave the address on Murray. "The men live there—they have my things—" "Hold the wire a minute." Ann listened. She could hear a murmur of voices. Then Mr. Temple spoke again. "Sit on that stuff until the police get there." "I will, Mr. Temple."

ANN sat in the dark. It wasn't five minutes until she heard the distant shriek of a siren. A moment later a car stopped in front of the Center. Three officers jumped out and she unlocked the door. "Here I am," she said weakly as they entered the lounge. "Is this what you are looking for?" She held out the suitcase and exhaled her breath on a long sigh of relief when the first officer took it.

An amazed cry came from the stairs and Mrs. Tate, the secretary, ran down, wearing a bathrobe and metal hair curlers. Girls flocked behind her. Suddenly the lounge was brilliantly lighted. One of the policemen said, "Come on—you're going with us." Ann said, "I'll have to get my hat."

"Okay—go with her, Bud." A strapping big fellow followed Ann up the stairs. He remained discreetly outside the door while the officers all carried drawn guns as Ann walked to the police car. The car whirled eastward, finally coming to a stop before a lighted house on Sheridan Drive. More policemen stood near the entrance. A butler opened the door and they filed in past him. They were led through a thickly carpeted hall to the library. There Ann faced the Temple family. John Temple was short and round. At his elbow stood a boy of 17 in the uniform of a military school. Irene sat on the edge of a table. Seeing Ann, she started and came toward her. (To Be Continued)

Technical Men Best Adapted to Industrial Plan

AUSTIN, Texas—Investment-minded bankers contemplating new industries for Texas during the next fifty years must turn to the advice of technical men—and it's up to the Texas schools to provide these men. This theory was advanced as a foundation for a State industrial program by Dr. E. P. Schoch, veteran University of Texas chemist, speaking here recently before a state-wide radio audience. Dr. Schoch emphasized the need for graduate instruction to train young men to a degree of technical skill second to none. "We want Texans as well as Texans industrialized," he explained, "if Texas is industrialized by anybody except Texans, then the people of the State have gained nothing. To do this we must train Texans to be able to do the job." Dr. Schoch's address was one in the current University industrial broadcasts, "Frontiers of Progress."

"Before the State can adjust itself to the 'Chemical Age,' Dr. Schoch called for proper handling of Texas' three great resources: (1) minerals in the earth; (2) biological resources on the farms and ranches; and (3) human resources in the minds and hands of Texas people. "It is foolish to start an effort to grow more or produce more of a particular product without first studying the markets, then research to develop new uses for new crops—or for new products," Dr. Schoch pointed out. "That is why we consider the large sums set up in research laboratories such a necessary prerequisite for progress in Texas in this age of chemistry."
