States Proclaim Their Wares

The states of the Union have learned not to hide their lights under any bushels. If they've got anything to offer Friday noon "snack," the sardines and the $3,000,000 invested in the eration recently by the Public Li either industry or the tourist trade, they want the rest of ___ the country to know it. And the best medium they know of getting the word around is advertising.

Before 1935, only six states made any provisions in their fiscal budgets for advertising. This year, 40 states have ear-marked funds to be used for publicly extolling their merits, and 75 per cent of these states intend to use the newspapers of the nation liberally to get their messages across. A total of about $4,400,000 has been appropriated. Thirteen of the states have appropriated more than $100,000 each. The highest advertising allotment-$825,-000-is that of Florida, which long ago became aware of the old axiom. "It pays to advertise."

It's pretty hard to tell definitely just how much it pays. Many of the benefits from advertising are too intangible to be measured. But some of the states, which started advertising in 1937, have already seen the results burst right out into indisputable statistics.

Arkansas picked up 92 new factories, representing a total investment of $2,600,000. New Jersey noted a $167,-000,000 tourist business last year and a 28 per cent increase in the value of the state's branded advertising products. North Carolina opened its arms to 51 new factories during the first eight months of 1939. Wisconsin's gain in tourist trade was reflected by the jump in gasoline taxes from $6,500,000 in 1935 to $8,030,000 in 1939, and in non-resident fishing licenses from 65,157 to 112,185. . . .

The influx of tourists into any state projects its effect far beyond the hotel keepers, restaurant owners, resort landlords, and department stores, who are usually direct beneficiaries. The money taken in seeps through the entire community. It creates new jobs, makes possible greater spending, filters finally to the smallest business man far removed from direct contact with tourists.

States' advertising this year should bring even greater dividends, with travel abroad cut off. In many cases, the advertising efforts will help vacationers plan their itineraries.

Roosevelt says he never said anything nasty about Jim Farley. Just gossip over the tea cups probably.

Chamberlain evidently isn't interested in Hitler's 11point program. He would rather read Punch or "Mein
