Keeping Americans 'Free and Equal'

More than 260 years ago, Thomas Jefferson decreed that "all men are created free and equal," and on those words a nation was launched.

The Jeffersonian conception of equality has been modified from time to time, but, above everything, the meaning that the Colonial patriot meant to convey was that the nation he helped found must be kept free of castes in the sense that they existed in the old world. His idea was to establish a nation devoid not only of earls and barons and feudal landowners but also of all the shackles and evils for which class society stood.

Today that tradition is being menaced, President James B. Conant of Harvard University recently told those participating in the 72nd birthday observance of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Do. Conant conceded that modern college youngsters are inclined to sneer at the phrase, "equality of opportunity." It is up to the universities to make some revolutionary changes in their methods of preparing young folks for adulthood the educator said. The idea of a casteless nation must be revitalized, given new impetus in college, he maintained.

But is it enough merely to preserve the ideal? Isn't American society as a whole largely responsible for preserving the equality tradition by giving the youngsters with their brand new diplomas a chance to use the things they learned in school? How can anyone assure the hopeful graduate a job when the existence of from 8 to 12 million unemployed remains an uncomfortable reality?

Educators can do their part in renovating the school system to meet the needs of a new, technological America. It's up to those of us not in college to find a way to make which time the course is scheduled ase of this new talent. When we do, the idea of equality to crone to a close. will become a living thing. It won't need to be pumped into anyone

A MOS was not the first of the Hebrew prophets, but he was the first whose prophecies have come down to us in a book attached to his own name. He is a striking figure, and the interest of his prophecy lies in the fact.

Amos describes what he saw in vivid words, as the poor were being trampled upon. He saw also corruption in political life, bribery and dishonesty. He said that the man who is prudent would keep silence at such a striking figure, and the interest of his prophecy lies in the fact.

The Ford way of doing business he Ford Motor Company was founded by a workingman for working-men. Its present officers began as employees of the Company. It was the first company to pay a minimum wage, beginning in 1914, at the then astounding figure of $5 a day. That was double the prevailing wage of the time. The Ford minimum is now $6 a day for all employees engaged in production work. And from that, the wages rise to $10.80 a day, with the average wage $7.25, exclusive of salaried employees.

The Ford Motor Company was the first large company to establish the 8-hour day-also in 1914. And the 40-hour week was inaugurated by the Ford Motor Company in 1926, years before any such laws

The Ford Motor Company employs men without regard to race, creed or color. It is common knowledge that working conditions in the Ford shops are the best that science and constant care can make them. A square deal, a just wage and stabilized employment for a large proportion of our employees - and as fully stabilized for all as conditions will permitenable our men to retain their personal independence.

In consequence of these policies the Ford Motor Company has one of the finest bodies of employees in the world. The larger proportion are mature men of long service with the Company - sober, decent family men. Hundreds of them have been with the Company for more than 25 years - thousands for more than 15 years. Their health record, home ownership and citizenship records are gratifyingly high.

All this is reflected in Ford products, whether cars, trucks or tractors. The work is honestly done. The materials are the best that can be made or procured. Less profit to the Company and more value to the customer is known throughout the civilized world as "Ford's way of doing business."

· Henry Ford and Edsel Ford keep daily personal touch with all phases of Ford manufacture. . In a conference with his staff, Henry Ford often says: "Go ahead - I'll sit here and represent the public."

Ford Motor Company was the first to make a motor car within the means of the average familyquitting the manufacture of what was then the largest selling model in the world to do so. Its chosen field in all the 30 years since that time has been the average American family, for which it has consistently provided car facilities which formerly only the wealthy could buy.

At is the policy of the Ford Motor Company to share the benefits of advanced methods and management with workers and public alike. Increased wages and employment over a period of many years have resulted in a 300 per cent increase in the built-in value of the Ford car and a 75 per cent reduction in its price.
