GERMANS SAY BIG GUNS ARE BEING LANDED

By George Kidd, United Press Staff Correspondent BERLIN, April 13.—German big guns have been transported through the British naval and air blockade of the Norwegian coast and were landed yesterday at Trondheim, between Bergen and Narvik, the official German news agency D.N.B. announced today.

The agency earlier said that large, additional units of the German armed forces had been landed at Oslo yesterday. Germany, according to D.N.B., has taken over units of the Norwegian navy in occupied Norwegian ports and has manned them with German crews.

Regarding North Norwegian events, the agency said that "German troops assigned to securing and extending occupied territory in the region around Narvik have taken control of the greater part of the roads from Narvik to the Swedish border."

"On April 12 the Trondheim coastal defense was strengthened by newly-arrived German artillery," D.N.B. said. "This means the further strengthening of completely undamaged Norwegian coastal artillery there which the German troops had captured and made ready for action."

Pitzer and West's townsite test in Breckenridge on the Gonzales land east of the First Christian Church was shutdown below 4,400 feet. Pitzer and West No. 1 Compton, section 9, OAL survey, southwest part of the county, was drilling below 1,850 feet.

British Navy Is Using New Mines In Its Blockade LONDON, April 13.—Constant vigilance by British naval units off the Norwegian coast has made "further landings by German troops in the far north of Norway almost impossible," official quarters said today.

The statement was made in comment on an official German news agency report that more German troops had been landed at Narvik. It was reported, meanwhile, that as part of its attempt to cut off Germany from its forces of occupation in Norway, Britain has used a new deadly, secret mine.

PEANUT CO-OP TO BEGIN ON GORMAN WORKS

GORMAN, April 13.—The Southwestern Peanut Growers Association will start construction in Gorman within the next two weeks on $25,000 worth of improvements according to Dick Weekes, manager of the Association. Office facilities will be constructed the first thing, stated Mr. Weekes, and as soon as this is completed, work on two warehouses and a building for the fertilizer plant will be started. The Peanut Mill will be erected following these.

Mr. Weekes and a number of the board of directors of the organization returned from an inspection trip to Georgia and Alabama where they went in the interest of the fertilizer plant and they were highly pleased with the results they found along this line. It has been decided by the directors that it will be necessary for the association to buy chemicals and other things needed in the manufacture of fertilizer, in July of this year, and in order to do that and be ready for the sale of the products during the next year.

The directors have also changed plans in regard to the warehouse facilities and instead of one warehouse with 1500 tons capacity, they will erect two, with a total capacity of 2000 tons. These buildings will be of sheet iron and concrete.

The fertilizer plant will be constructed of native stone or brick and will be two stories, one below and one above the ground. Due to the activity of certain chemicals, it will be necessary to house the fertilizer plant in either a frame or stone or brick structure and present plans call for a stone or brick structure.

Southwestern Is Celebrating Her 100th Birthday

GEORGETOWN, Texas, April 13.—Texas oldest college, now Southwestern university, began celebration of its centennial anniversary here today. An academic procession on the campus began the two-day program that has been arranged. The concluding feature will be a Sunday morning service dedicating the institution from which many of Texas' most prominent men have been graduated.

Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel expressed greetings from the state government; Dr. John W. Bergin, college president, explained its objectives and Judge Ralph Yarborough of Austin traced its history and development since the days of the Republic of Texas. It outdates A.&M. College by 36 years, San Houston College by 39 years and the University of Texas by 43 years.

Scarcely a month had elapsed after Texas won its independence at the battle of San Jacinto when a general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church appointed missionaries to Texas and authorized Dr. Martin Ruter to make a survey, secure funds and found a college in the new republic.

The college was chartered as Ruterville College and opened in October, 1844—first institution of higher learning in the republic. It then was situated on a tract of land four miles from the present site of LaGrange, Fayette county. It was chartered by the Fourth Congress of the Republic of Texas and granted 17,712 acres of land.

COUNTY GROCERS TO DISCUSS STAMP PLAN

Complete details of the functions and operations of the federal food stamp plan sought in Eastland county will be explained at a meeting of county grocers Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 in the Chamber of Commerce office at Eastland. The plan will be explained by H. J. Tanner, secretary-manager of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce, who filed application for adoption of the plan with the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation last December. Commissioners' court of Eastland county are also eager for the adoption of the plan.

Tanner called the meeting of the grocers so that a greater concerted effort might be put forth by the county for the adoption of the plan. All preliminary work has been completed and decision of the FSSC is being awaited. Persons in each town of the county were written by Tanner and asked to advise grocers of the meeting at Eastland. "This will be an excellent opportunity for the grocers of Eastland county to understand the food stamp plan thoroughly," declared Tanner.

"There is no reason," he added, "why every grocer in the county should not benefit by the adoption of the plan. The grocer is the key man in the successful operation of the plan. If he understands it he can do a wonderful job in his community."

It has been stated that over the nation about 15,000,000 individuals will receive the benefits of the plan when it is extended on a national basis. The food stamp plan will call for the distribution of 300,000,000 pounds of butter, 352,000,000 dozen eggs, 25,000,000 bushels of wheat in the form of flour, 6,000,000 bushels of corn converted into corn meal, 140,000,000 pounds of rice, 87,000,000 pounds of prunes, 227,000,000 pounds of dry beans and trailroads of citrus fruits, tomatoes and vegetables.

BATTLES STILL RAGING OVER SCANDINAVIA

By CLIFFORD L. DAY, United Press Staff Correspondent AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands, April 13.—Fighting between Norwegians and invading Germans in Southern Norway, large scale naval operations in the entrance to the Baltic, and intensified infantry action on the Western Front marked the progress of the war today. The British were reported to have sown a new secret type of deadly mine in the Kattegat between Denmark and the Norway-Sweden peninsula, in an effort to cut off the German forces in Norway.

The British were reported to have sown a new secret type of deadly mine in the Kattegat between Denmark and the Norway-Sweden peninsula, in an effort to cut off the German forces in Norway. London naval experts claimed the new mine is so deadly that the Germans will not be able to escape it by any known method. The great mine field laid by the Allies around the German North Sea coast, Denmark, the Skagerrak and the Kattegat was reported to cover about 60,000 square miles, which would make it the greatest mining operation in naval history.

London sources said the Allies have a submarine fleet in the Kattegat, ready to meet any German attempt to sweep a path through the mine field. The British admiralty announced that the air arm of the fleet had raided the large Norwegian port of Bergen yesterday, bombing transports and supply ships and blowing up a munitions warehouse. One British plane was lost in the raid. In other raids by the Royal Air Force, the admiralty said, eight planes were lost and two were forced down at sea.

The British estimate of German losses in Scandinavian waters this week was 34 ships known to have been sunk or reported sunk, they comprised three surface warships and one submarine known sunk, six others reported sunk, and 23 transports, supply, ammunition and merchant ships sunk or reported sunk. The Germans were reported to have landed additional troops at Halden, on the Oslo Fjord leading to Oslo, probably by transport plane. However, the Norwegians said they still were holding Halden and the fortress of Frederiksten nearby.

Defendant Is Big Conspiracy Trial Is Found Dead

NEW YORK, April 13.—Claus Gunther Ernecke, missing defendant in the trial of 17 men charged with conspiracy to overthrow the government, was found dead today in the cellar of an apartment house. He had hanged himself. Ernecke failed to appear in federal court yesterday when the trial was resumed and his bail of $7,500 was forfeited. Ernecke, a German who had taken out first citizenship papers, was a member of the New York national guard.

Denis Healy, chief prosecution witness at the trial, had testified that it was through Ernecke that he was introduced into the Christian Front, whose members he accused of plotting various acts of violence designed eventually to overthrow the government. The trial is in adjournment until Monday because of Healy's collapse late Tuesday during a cross examination. Leo Healy, lawyer for 11 of the defendants, including Ernecke, had told newspaper reporters that he had talked with Ernecke Thursday. He said Ernecke had told him his life had been threatened. "He was very nervous," Healy said, "and I tried to calm him without much success. He kept repeating 'someone will get me over and over again.'"

Today, Healy said that Ernecke may have been kidnaped, "he may have been murdered or he may have committed suicide." "But I don't believe he fled," Healy added.

Building Standard Is Increased By Federal Housing AUSTIN, April 13.—Structural standards have been raised since the Federal Housing Authority stepped into the home construction field, Dr. Goldwyn Goldsmith, professor of architecture at the University of Texas, told the first Texas housing conference here today. Poor construction had resulted, Dr. Goldsmith said, when some real estate developers erected "paint and paper" houses to realize quick profits. He urged adoption of state-enforced codes for all buildings both in the city and country. "We have laws against murder," Dr. Goldsmith said. "Why not have laws to keep us from building houses in which people may be burned to death, or die slowly from diseases caused by unsanitary conditions?"

Low Wheat Crop Is Predicted In Texas This Year

AUSTIN, April 13.—Lowest wheat production in Texas since 1926 was forecast as probable by the crop reporting board of the Federal Agricultural Marketing Service here today. The report placed the probable wheat production in the state at 20,770,000 bushels compared with a 5-year average of 26,687,000 bushels. During the five years the Panhandle wheat area has averaged 12,775,000 bushels. Outlook for this year is 12,800,000 bushels. Farm stocks of grain were reported less than average in Texas. Condition of farm pastures was placed at 62 per cent of normal compared with 69 per cent last April. Prospect for peaches was favorable on April 1. Grapefruit production in 1939 from 1926 blooms was at 13,200,000 bushels, compared with 15,600,000 bushels of grapefruit and 2 oranges from

McCraw Undecided On Any Campaign

DALLAS, April 13.—William McCraw of Dallas apparently had not made up his mind today to announce for governor. "I don't know," the former Texas attorney general said when asked if he was going to run. "This is a great country, and there's no telling what will happen." McCraw said he read with interest that Col. Ernest O. Thompson, Texas Railroad Commissioner who ran second to Gov. Lee O'Daniel in the 1938 race, had decided to run for congress. However, McCraw also declined to comment on that situation as it related to the governor's race.

To a Gallant Captain!

A toast to Giles Chester Stedman, master of the America! This gallant American captain has just been given command of the graceful ship being completed at Newport News. It will be the finest the United States has ever built.

Every American ought to be proud of the trim hull of this ocean beauty whose sea trials are scheduled for June. And proud likewise of the career of Captain Stedman, who at 42 has already amply earned the right to command her.

Both are thoroughly modern and thoroughly American. Giles Stedman as a Quincy, Mass., boy, wanted to study engineering. But he also wanted to go to sea. Via the Coast Guard he served in the war zone with the navy during the World War. Then he went to Massachusetts Institute of Technology to study marine engineering, and took his first merchant fleet berth as third officer of the Grayson in 1919. Six years later he was first officer of the President Harding when she got an appeal for help from the Italian steamer Ignazio Florio. Stedman himself directed the lifeboat crew which brought the Florio's crew to safety in a dangerous sea.

In 1933 now master of the American Merchant, Stedman answered an appeal from the British ship Exeter City, and in a vicious sea directed the rescue of 22 men from this vessel. All the marine world hailed it as a masterly piece of seamanship.

Staff captain of the Leviathan before she was retired, Captain Stedman now takes over the most coveted job in the American merchant marine. He is a credit to his country, clean-living and modest, an advance guard in the new merchant fleet that is putting the United States back on the seas where her flag once fluttered so brightly.

In a day when so much of men's energies is devoted to destruction, it is good to hear the industrious hammers ringing through the hull of the America at Newport News. And to see her command go to a young American seaman whose career is already so distinguished adds to the prideful thrill.

May the America and Captain Stedman have long careers of useful, constructive service to their country and to a world turned at last, as turn some day it must, to the pursuits of peace.

SERIAL STORY

K. O. CAVALIER BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

COPYRIGHT 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: When Val is washed overboard, Eddie plunges in after him. He saves his way to the ship, supports her until a boat is put out to save them. Back on the ship, Eddie explains to Sam, Duffy and Grimes how he saved Val. The girl is all right, Grimes explains.

CHAPTER XV

POP GRIMES breathed a sigh of relief next morning when Eddie told him the news of Val's rescue. Eddie said he had been in the water for a long time, but he was all right. "Looks like the storm's over," he observed, nodding toward the porthole.

"Yeah! I'm sure glad," said Pop. "And I'm also plenty glad you didn't take cold or anything. Can't have you going into that ring next week on crutches."

"Where's Duffy?" Eddie asked, looking around. They were alone in the crew's quarters.

"It's almost noon. They wanted you to sleep it out and you sure did just that. You've been poundin' your ear for a good 14 hours."

"Say, Pop... uh..."

"Yeah, she snapped out of it too, if that's what you're tryin' to say. She's still in bed, though... an' she sent word she'd like to see you just as soon's you got up and had somethin' to eat."

EDDIE got into his clothes and went straight to her cabin. She lay propped up against a couple of pillows when he entered.

They looked at each other. His look was a little challenging, and perhaps a bit reproachful.

She motioned to a chair. "Please sit down," she said in a low voice. "I'll stand."

"No," she said firmly. "Sit down. I can talk to you better that way."

"About what?"

He sat down, facing her. "About what a dunce I was for slapping you last night."

"Oh... that?"

"It's awfully inadequate to tell you I'm sorry... and it's just as inadequate to thank you for saving my life."

She extended her hand. "But won't you let me try?"

He took her hand in his. It was the first time he had ever touched her in more than a casual, accidental fashion. He wondered why he got the sudden electric shock that surged through him. "Sure," he said easily. "I think I know how you feel. You don't have to eat now."

"I don't think you'd want me to. But Eddie... why did you do it? Last night, I mean. Steve Hansen says he doesn't know how anyone could live in that sea."

"We were lucky. The ship had almost stopped and we didn't drift far."

"You haven't answered my question."

He shrugged. "I don't know. Ask me again sometime when I've had a chance to think about it."

"I will," she promised.

"BY the way, what did we run into?" he asked.

"Some tanker out of Seattle. Outside of a couple plates above in nothing serious happened. We'll be able to make port in good shape tonight. Which reminds me, there's nothing to prevent you from jumping ship once we get to Prince Rupert. Unless we keep you a virtual prisoner below decks," she added.

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I said. Once you and Duffy and Pop get ashore we won't be able to keep an eye on you every second. What's to prevent you from walking out on us? You could grab a train, or even a plane back to Frisco."

"You mean you're giving us our release if we want it?"

She nodded again. "Why not? You've earned it, haven't you? Besides, we probably can pick up all the men we want in Prince Rupert. We'll be in port for a couple of days, you know. Won't be any trouble at all."

"Just like Lincoln freeing the slaves," he murmured. "That'll be a big sacrifice, on your part, you know. What about the stories you're sending back to your office? You wouldn't want to give up a good thing like that, would you?"

"Must you rub it in? Why don't you decide on my offer as it stands?"

"Might not Captain Hansen have something to say about this?"

"Steve Hansen will do anything I say."

"That was the trouble in the first place," he reminded her, getting to his feet. "Now if you don't mind, I'll go get myself some breakfast."

She was surprised. "Why, I told them to be sure you ate first, before coming here."

"I didn't," he said. "See you later."

It wasn't until well along in the afternoon that Steve Hansen would permit Val to get up. When she finally came on deck she found Eddie beating a tattoo on the bag. There was still a heavy ground swell that made any sparring impossible.

Duffy Kelso bit down on his cigar and jerked his head toward her. "Here comes the eighth plague," he said to Pop. "Sam Golden should only know how close he come to promotin' a funeral at sea instead of a fight."

She looked at her watch. "Sam Golden will be reading the entire story in about an hour. I'd say I just filed a yarn that'll leave him limp with exhaustion when it hits the streets."

"SHE wasn't far from the truth. Sam Golden, a fat little fellow with a pair of sad brown eyes, paced back and forth and mopped a perspiring bald spot.

Sam had broken out two bottles of his best liquor but the half dozen sports writers who were cluttering up his office at the moment didn't let up on him for a minute.

Sam stopped his pacing. "I ask you—could I help it, boys? Is it my fault that crazy Duffy Kelso decides he wants to become a sailor all of a sudden? Is it my fault this dame falls overboard? Here, Kenny, have another drink."

Ken Bradley, boxing writer for the Express, growled in his grog and held his glass out to be replenished.

"Scoped within an inch of our lives. Every day for a week and another week to come. And then this—!" He tapped the paper containing Val Douglas's story of her own rescue. "Sam," he mourned, "we've been jobbed like never before in our lives."

"Don't I know it," said Sam. "And then dreamily: 'But already I ain't got 300 seats left in the joint. And they ain't coming to see Massini.'"

A couple news hounds sitting on his desk snorted. The telephone rang and one of them answered.

"For you, Sam," he said.

Sam took it. The party at the other end had spoken only a half dozen words when Sam Golden went white as a sheet.

"Boys," he gasped, hanging up. "It's awful. They just called from the gym... that dope Massini... he just tripped over a dumbbell and sprained his ankle."

She was surprised. "Why, I told them to be sure you ate first, before coming here."

"I didn't," he said. "See you later."
