RANGER BAND GIVEN AWARDS IN A CONTEST

Saturday the Ranger High School Band, directed by Johnnie M. Hensley, attended the Texas Region No. 11 Competition-Festival sponsored by the Texas Music Educators Association in Abilene. The band received II Division in playing, which is comparable to a grade of 95 per cent. A II Division was also received in marching. In the history of the Ranger High School Band, these are the highest ratings awarded it and the only trophies ever won.

Two trophies were awarded, one each in playing and marching, but have not been received yet due to the delay necessary for engraving.

Comments of the judges were Everett McCracken, director of the Baylor University band, Waco, Texas: "A splendid band, which deserves support for better equipment and instrumentation."

Glenn R. Johnson, director of the Texas School of Mines Band, El Paso: "Band gets a surprising amount of quality and music out of such a limited instrumentation. The two closing movements had plays unusually well in time and makes the most of what instrument it has. I hope you get the instruments you need. You deserve them."

Weldon Covington, director of the Austin High School Band, Austin: "Very well played—shows a lot of hard work has been done."

Meanwhile allies have rushed reinforcements to nearby points in preparation for a major clash.

Lake Is To Cover Up Four Towns In Texas, Oklahoma

DENISON, Texas—Rising water from the southwest's greatest dam will cover relics of early Texas history.

A giant, inland lake, with a shore line 1100 miles long will be created by construction of the $54,000,000 Denison dam on Red River.

When the waters begin backing up along the Red, the Washita in Oklahoma and over North Texas' fertile farmlands, they will inundate historic reminders of the settling of the area more than 100 years ago.

Four towns are in the area to be flooded—Hagerman and old Preston in Texas and Aylesworth and Woodville in Oklahoma.

At Old Preston near the river is Glen Eden, century-old home built by Holland Sophie Coffey and made famous by her hospitality.

The structure, a large two-story colonial home, is to be moved approximately a mile and will rest on a promontory jutting into the dam reservoir.

Robert E. Lee, Albert Sidney Johnston, Gen. Sam Houston and other noted figures were guests at Glen Eden.

To be covered by the backwater is an old ford at Baer's Ferry, where Indians from the Oklahoma territory came down into Texas to trade with pioneer settlers at the Abel Warren store, first mercantile establishment in the area, erected 102 years ago.

The ford is where herds of Texas cattle were driven across the river on the northward journey to Kansas City up the Old Preston Trail.

Residents of the area now are watching preliminary construction of a two-and-a-half-mile earthen dam at the exact spot of the crossing.

The matter of cemeteries has not been decided upon—government agents having reimbursed landowners for property to be inundated.

Most of the burial grounds of the condemned lands are old forgotten Indian graveyards. An exception is the Preston cemetery. Construction on the main dam structure is due to begin in early summer. Bids were opened April 16 and contracts are expected to be let within three weeks.

Guy F. Atkinson company, San Francisco, Calif., was apparent low bidder at $8,228,465 for spillway excavation and dam construction projects.

A Dead Language Yields New Key

CHICAGO—A group of stone inscriptions, found last year on the walls of an ancient Persian tomb, have proved important in studying dead languages and in clarifying history between 500 B. C. and 500 A. D., University of Chicago archeologists have announced.

Dr. Martin Sprengling, international-known authority on ancient languages, made the translations from photographic enlargements of the inscriptions. He compared them in archeological importance to the Rosetta stone, which unlocked the ancient Egyptian language.

Dr. Sprengling estimated the inscriptions were made about 290 A.D. by Kartir, a Zoroastrian high priest and king-maker, whose career interlaced those of four ancient Persian rulers.

The inscriptions were in Pahlavi, a Middle Persian language which contains words of both Semitic and Parthian origin. They were discovered near the ancient city of Persepolis by archeologists from the University of Chicago, the University of Pennsylvania, and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

The Kartir stones reveal, Dr. Sprengling said, that the ancient Persians did not practice religious tolerance, contrary to previous conclusions from romantic literature. Religious groups used sacred writings for guidance, were persecuted, according to the new translation.

It was indicated that the Zoroastrians then had no such sacred book of their own.

The Zoroastrian Kartir, Dr. Sprengling said, is revealed as having been one of the most important religious figures of all time. Inscriptions mentioning him were discovered in 1936, but he then was spoken of only as an obscure young churchman.

Car Registrations For 1940 Estimated Above Those of '39

H. C. O'Brien, county tax assessor collector, stated today that automobile registrations were running a little ahead of last year, he believed, though an accurate check had not been made in the past two weeks. He estimated the total collections for the first four months of this year at $90,000.

O'Brien said that the first $50,000 collected remained in the county and the remainder was divided into two equal shares, one going to the state and the other to the county. He estimated total collections for the year would amount to $100,000, which would make the county's share $75,000 and that of the state $25,000.

The county's share of the automobile license fees are also divided into four parts, which go to the road and bridge funds of the four commissioners' precincts. The money for these four road and bridge funds are divided equally each year, though Precinct 1, which embraces both Eastland and Ranger, has the largest percentage of the collections made.

Robin Debunked As Spring Herald

CHICAGO.—The myth of the "first spring robin" has been exploded. Inasmuch as the symbol of spring is a year-long resident in the North, no importance can be attached to his appearance, according to Emmet R. Blake, assistant curator of birds at the Chicago Field Museum of Natural History.

Robins, like many other northern birds, sometimes experience only partial or modified migration. They are less numerous in the North during the winter, but there are always a few hardy ones in sheltered locations.

The migratory instinct can be modified by planting shrubbery and hedgerows and providing sheltered feeding stations. However, Blake warns that once the birds are accustomed to such artificial devices, they will starve if thrown on their own resources. Once the migratory instinct is modified, the bird can no longer travel South even though physically able to do so.

Woman Fisherman Takes To The Lakes For Her Big Thrills

FORT WORTH, Texas—Mrs. W. E. Moss, whose fishing record will compare favorably with anybody's, just likes to catch 'em. She doesn't like to eat fish.

The five foot five, 107-pound wife of a railroad engineer will be aboard a boat on one of North Texas' fishing lakes next Wednesday morning when the 60-day closed season expires—searching the waters with her favorite lures trying to repeat as "first day" winner in bass-catching competition.

She's been fishing for years, and for several years past has won the prize for bringing in the biggest bass to a Fort Worth sporting goods store. Her best one was a 7-3-4 pound bass caught on opening day three years ago at old lake near Ennis. The fish had been out of water for 12 hours, and fishermen estimated that it must have weighed nine pounds when she first landed it.

Mrs. Moss fishes almost entirely for bass, and she is purely a fish-woman for the sport that's in it. Neither she nor her husband like fish, and they've turned many a fine one over to friends or to less fortunate fishermen.

The Mosses fish at Eagle Mountain, Lake Thurber, Lake Mineral Wells, Trinidad, and Old Lake at Ennis most of the time but have tried their luck—successfully—in many lakes elsewhere. Mrs. Moss said that her favorite lures were black gizzard and silver spoon, both deep water and weedless bait. She has been fishing since she was six years old and never gets enough of it.

Among Mrs. Moss' greatest thrill were the time that she caught 30 bass in two hours in a Montana lake and when she landed a two-foot wall-eyed pike in Caddo Lake.

The fish-woman's daughter, Helen, doesn't like fishing, her mother said, because it "bores her to sit out on a lake all day."

But you can bet your bottom dollar that April 30 will find Mrs. Moss, attired in tailored slacks, packing her lunch basket with chicken, bacon, eggs, pickles, potato salad and other camping delicacies.

"We take our lunch, but often don't eat it," she said. "We stop at a cafe, or just eat something that doesn't take long to fix. We get more fishing done that way."

Where will Mrs. Moss and her husband fish on opening day? "Oh, we don't know yet," she said, like all the other fishing enthusiasts who "don't know" where the big ones have risen to the bait best in previous years.

DIES IN FORT WORTH

FORT WORTH, April 30.—Richard Van Zandt, 68, former federal banking official and son of the late Major K. M. Van Zandt died today after a long illness.

NAZIS CLAIM DOMBAAS HAS BEEN TAKEN

Germany claimed today to have captured the vital Dombaas railroad junction from the Allies in Central Norway. The railway links Trondheim and Oslo forces of the Germans and severs Allied communications, if it is captured.

The British, meantime, admitted that their forces had retreated to new defenses outside Dombaas, but stated that its capture seemed "unlikely."

The Germans also claimed that despite stubborn British resistance they had captured Steoren and Dombaas railway centers in Norway.

Another British attempt to take Barvik, in the far northern part of Norway, reportedly had failed, according to German reports, and it was reported from Berlin that 13 British submarines had been destroyed in the Skagerrak. British admiralty sources said that two submarines assigned to duty in that area were so long overdue that it had been presumed that they had been lost, and admitted that two trawlers had been bombed by Nazi airplanes. German claims of British submarine losses, however, included all reported lost since the Norwegian campaign started.

Neutral sources in London declared that the Allied re-enforcements in Norway might yet turn the tide of battle in the Trondheim sector, but that unless a successful counter attack is made soon they must relinquish their gains in the southern part of the country.

Two Stephens Co. Wells Are Watched With Much Interest

BRECKENRIDGE, April 30.—Two wells which have topped the lime in Stephens county were marking time, one was testing and one preparing to drill in.

Pitzer & West's No. 1 Compton, in the southwestern part of the county, which still was testing after administration of 4,000 gallons of acid.

Pipe was set in this at 3,428 and the hole carried to 3,555 feet. Bailer was being run, but C. W. West was not over optimistic over prospects of a commercial producer.

Information was that Panhandle Refining company was awaiting special machinery after dropping bailer. This is the No. 1 Magers, 15 miles northeast of Breckenridge.

Reports received from the Stribling field were the W. B. Omohundro, offset to the Stedman No. 1 Powers, was awaiting spudder and that Falcon Oil's No. 1 Robertson, offset to the Greathouse expected to begin drilling plug today. Total depth of the Omohundro is 3,566 and of the Falcon 3,542 feet.

C. K. West said the deep tonnage test on the Gonzolus would be plugged.

The Easy Descent

"Easy is the descent to Avernus," wrote Vergil, describing in his Aeneids the gentle slope down which Aeneas passed into the murky dwelling-place of the shades of the dead.

Easy, too is the progression by which country after country has been absorbed and their independent existence swallowed up. The last spectacular stages are easy seen, accompanied as they are by blitzkrieg fireworks. But that makes it all the easier to overlook the first easy stages by which the process was begun.

It begins, believes Alexander Sachs, New York economist, with a simple, harmless-looking bilateral trade agreement.

A bilateral trade agreement is simply an agreement between two countries to exchange products on an exclusive basis. Other countries are squeezed out. Note that this is the very opposite to the Hull program, which extends equal treatment to all, leaving the door open to broader trade, rather than closing it.

Now note the "easy descent" from one step to another, as outlined by Sachs to a recent Cleveland College institute:

- 1. You sign a bilateral trade agreement.
2. The other country gradually extends its advantage, until suddenly you find it is taking all your export goods.
3. It uses only part of them, dumps the rest on the world market. The price plummets.
4. Gradually your currency goes all out of gear as a result of this dislocation of markets.
5. Now you are forced to adjust your currency to that of the partner in the trade pacts, since you are far in its debt.
6. You are now merely a tail to the economic dog of the other country.
7. On one pretext or another the other country moves in with its army looting your treasury of what gold is left.
8. Your standard of living is pushed down so that more and more of your products can be sent to feed the other country's ware machine.
9. Enslavement and degradation.

There is the progression, easy and almost unconscious, from a simple bilateral trade treaty to the final payoff.

And that is why international trade has an importance far beyond the bare value of the goods exchanged. It has become something outside of and beyond itself—the keen weapon of a new imperialism.

Most of the 16 State Senators In the Political Campaign Are To Have An Opponent In Primary Election

AUSTIN Texas.—But four of the 16 Texas Senators whose terms expire this year will return to the Texas senate without opposition an early canvass of the senatorial districts indicates.

Retiring voluntarily are Sen. G. H. Nelson of Lubbock and Sen. John Redditt of Lufkin. Senator Olan Van Zandt of Tigua will be a candidate for State Railroad Commissioner in this year's primary election but that does not create a vacancy in the senatorial district.

Going alphabetically down the list of senators whose terms expire this time the present situation is found to be: Sen. A. M. Atkin Jr., of Paris has no announced opponent. Sen. Harold E. Beck of Texarkana is opposed by C. P. Neugeant of Mt. Pleasant, county judge of Titus county.

Sen. Will "Face" of Tyler will have double opposition in his race for re-election. T. C. Chadick of Quitman, county attorney of Wood county, and Rep. Odie A. Weldon will run.

Sen. Albert Stone of Brenham, president pro tem of the senate, will have J. Alton York of Bryan as his opponent.

NO SMASHUPS ON THE HIGHWAY OF TOMORROW; MAGNETIC CONTROL WILL KEEP YOU IN THE LANE

The following article was written especially for NEA Service and these papers by the famed designer of the Futurama at the New York Fair.

BY NORMAN BEL GEDDES
NEA Service Special Correspondent

It is fact, not legend, that cow paths became the streets of New York's famed Wall Street district. Truly, cows were our first road planners.

Every year more and better motor cars appear on the roads—roads that are never intended for high speed engines on rubber tires.

We build great bridges, but we design them for only two or three lanes of traffic in each direction, although there may be 20 lanes feeding into the bridge at each end.

ROAD HARDLY BUILT BEFORE OUTMODED
You should be familiar with the fact that no sooner is a new road built than it is outmoded.

Motorways should be designed in terms of the automobile. Express motorways exclusively for travel of 50 or more miles at a stretch. They should be laid down first in densely populated sections

A flaming perennial at West Texas Chamber of Commerce conventions is Floyd Graham's stage "Aces of Collegeland," of Denton. This musical organization, its 17 players all students in North Texas State Teachers College, has been playing the WTCC's convention Revues for many years.

Idaho Extending Silicosis Fight

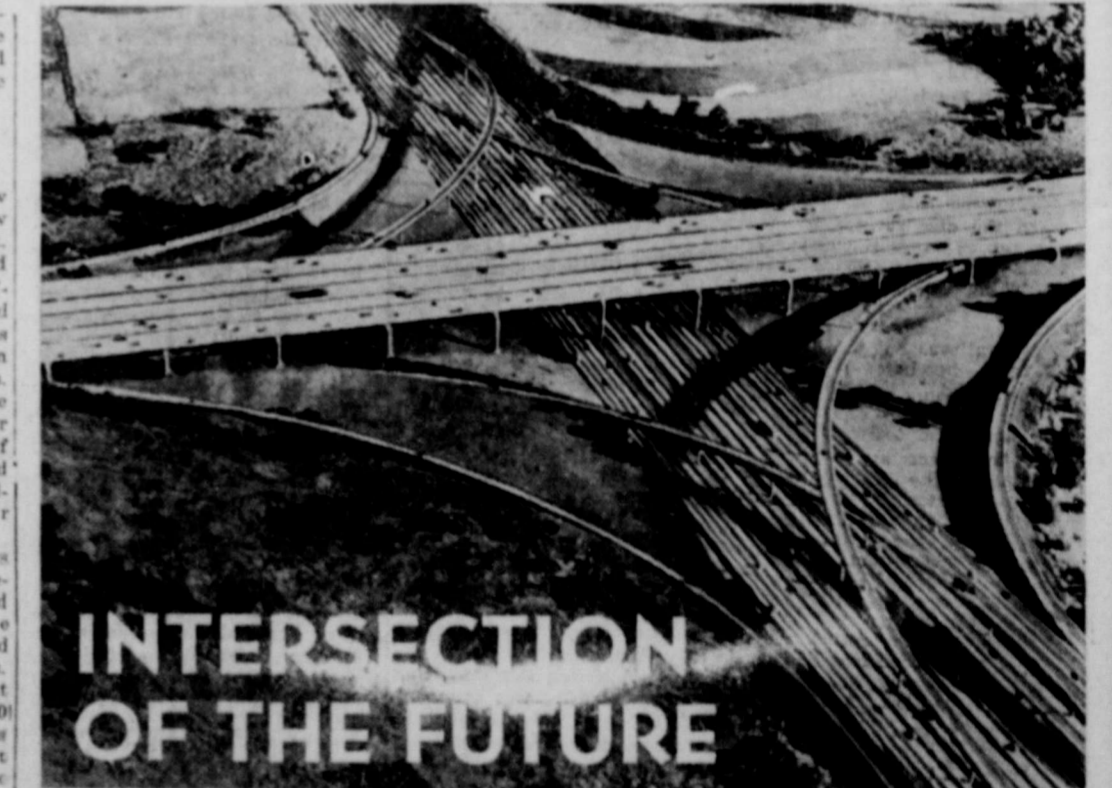

BOISE, Ida.—The latest in modern medical equipment, housed in a 6,000-pound trailer, is cruising throughout Idaho to gather statistical material on the extent of silicosis.

Dr. A. F. Galloway, director of the bureau of industrial hygiene, and H. C. Claire, engineer for the bureau, are in charge of the hospital on wheels, officially known as the Idaho industrial hygiene mobile X-ray unit.

The unit with its built-in equipment was designed so that it may be towed to various sections of the state and used by doctors in making physical examinations and taking X-rays of industrial workers.

Sen. H. L. Winfield of Fort Stockton is without an opponent in the western district which includes 27 counties.

INTERSECTION OF THE FUTURE

This is Mr. Geddes' idea of what a country intersection of the future should be like. Turns would be taken on this streamlined crossing without dim inishing speed.

They should join heavily populated sections but avoid the cities themselves. They should be designed to fit a machine that is built to go 80 miles an hour, that is legally permitted to go 50 miles an hour, but has to crawl along at 20.

Because the life of a road should be at least 20 years, traffic trends should be projected at least that far ahead—before the road is built. Highways should be designed, not on the basis of present day requirements, but on the probable requirements 20 years hence.

This express motorway would not only separate traffic moving in opposing directions, but each lane of traffic going in the same direction would be segregated. You would enter this motorway at intervals from a feeder road. All cars in the same lane would be required to move at the same constant speed. You could enter the motorway, pass from one speed lane to a lane of greater or lesser speed without fear of collision. Side swiping would be prevented. It would be impossible to cut in and out of lanes. There would be no soft shoulders but you could not get your car off the road into them.

CAR KEPT IN LANE BY MAGNETIC CONTROL
This individual lane control may be accomplished in several ways, but probably by electric-magnetic control in the center of each lane, keeping the car on its course more accurately than an airplane is kept on its course by radio beam. Car speed control will probably be by button on the wheel. It will be more accurate than shifting gears and accelerating or braking.

YESTERDAY: Pepper Boy is left at the post in his best race, but Madden sides him hard to bring him through the field. Then in a breath-taking drive, Pepper Boy passes the leader, battles Gray Star to the finish, nose and nose. Gray Star wins!

OLD Sam shook his graying head, moaned. "Land's sakes alive! Jockey Madden took one look at the numbers, slid to the ground as Sam went to the jockey's head. Tugging at the saddle, the jockey called over his shoulder to Sherry Bond, 'You can't say I didn't give your horse a ride.' He jerked off the saddle—ran into the enclosure and weighed, threw his tack to his fat valet, and stalked off to the jockey room.

Gray Star the winner, by half a nose. Pepper Boy a lung-up second—but a nose ahead as far as a mile ahead, Sherry reeled, and the world paid off on winners.

"Miss Bond?" A messenger was standing in front of her. "Yes?" "Secretary's compliments, Miss Bond, and he says will you please take the Pepper Boy taken into the paddock." He spoke the words as an order, not a request.

"Taken into the paddock? For what?" "Secretary's compliments—for delivery to his new owner. He's been claimed."

She had lost the race—now she was losing her horse; a colt that had shown superb class—that was worth three or four times the stalling price: $2500. That a fool he had been to start him out of the class—to run him with a group of cheap horses. She might have known some wily trainer would claim him—why, he was a stand-out—in that great drive down the stretch he had showed Derby quality—his first race at that!

Yes, she was a fool! Paul Wharton had warned her—once, but twice, not to run him in a claimer. Good old Paul! If well, if he weren't always begging her to marry him—weren't getting so bossy, she might have ended. Paul was right.

He was right about her marrying him, too. Deep in her heart, Sherry knew she was just trying to love with Paul. But he had even so determined to keep her out of racing.

She turned, went into the paddock. Sam was being directed to, with the blanketed colt at the end of a halter-lead—a very agitated owner. Catching sight of the girl owner, he broke into complaints.

YESTERDAY: Sherry is surprised when she learns Paul has claimed the Pepper Boy. She is sure she will win the race for the colt. "This isn't finished yet, we've got a say."

CHAPTER VI SHERRY shook her head, as she patted Uncle Willie's arm. "Just wait. This isn't over yet," she whispered reassuringly. But she knew her own mind. She would ease her mental suffering by seeing the dice rattling in the leather cup as Jamison shook them for her throw. Paul Wharton was watching the other owner closely. Sherry saw determination in Wharton's eyes, in the firm set of his jaw. Paul was out to win the had to win—her horse!

Jamison's hand came down and to the dice rolled out on the counter—a deuce and a five. "Seven," the secretary announced, taking up the dice, passing the cup to Wharton. Paul shook the dice quickly, rolled them down the counter. Sherry's eye was fixed upon the bouncing cubes. Sherry held her breath as they came to a stop at last. A four and a six. "Mr. Wharton gets the colt!" "Not so fast, my learned friend," Willie Bond was saying to the secretary. "Not so fast, I demand to see the claiming slip Mr. Wharton deposited."

"Show it to him," Wharton spoke with aloofness, looking out the window. "My name is signed on it, I believe."

"Yes, sir, your name is," Willie Bond conceded, "and also I see the time-stamp; you dropped this on the desk at 2:17."

"What of it?" "Pretty, young sir!" Willie Bond spoke sharply. "Jockey Club rules say the claim must be deposited in the box at least 15 minutes before post time. Post time was advertised as 2:30. You were two minutes late—look at the time stamped on it."

PAUL WHARTON did look; then swore to himself. "That darn claimer," he said aloud. "Look here," he demanded of the secretary, "are we going by technicalities on this race track?"

Willie Bond didn't give the official time to speak. He turned on Wharton. "Do we see by Jockey Club rules—or is it every man for himself? If you don't recognize the Jockey Club, maybe the stewards would like to know it."

"Aw, thunder!" "Thunder yourself—your name's blown out. Right, Mr. Secretary?"

The latter nodded, said, "Correct. Horse goes to the next man."

"I done to' you so, Miss Sherry—we done lost our baby colt—hit ain't fair!" Sherry shrugged her shoulders, stood by, helplessly. Then two men came from nowhere—walked to the colt's head. Each put out a hand toward the halter.

"I claimed him," said the first man, a hard, pimply-faced and stubby fellow of middling years in a dusty brown suit and brown derby.

A tall husky in a wide-brimmed Stetson drawled: "Not so fast, stranger—we got a claim in, too."

"Wait a minute, white folks," Sam protested, "you can't get this here horse till you give me an order from the secretary. Any way, which one of you white gentlemen done claim de colt?"

The man in the derby glared up at the trainer in the broad-brimmed hat. "A boy's bringing me the order—be here in a minute."

"We'll see," the tall one said, and turned aside. "I'm gonna start coolin' this here horse right now," Sam grumbled belligerently, and began walking Pepper Boy in a long circle.

"Which one of you gets my horse?" Sherry wanted to know. The man in the Stetson spoke, as if he hated to say anything: "Whichever one wins the roll, Miss Bond. Our owners are in there," he nodded toward the secretary's office, then explained, as if realizing that she was new to racing.

"When two or more claim a nag, then the claimers roll for the horse. Roll—roll with the dice win."

"Oh, I see. Just—which stables—do you—two—represent?" The man in the derby answered first: "I'm foreman for the Bonnie Lad stable; our trainer—he's in there rollin' now—generally he wins, he's lucky—this is his winnin' day."

Sherry instinctively turned from him. The man in the Stetson faced her, then looked away: "I'm a trainer—but my—my owner—he decided to handle this himself."

"Who is your owner?" The man wiped his lips with a handkerchief, looked straight at her before he answered: "Mr. Paul Wharton, ma'am."

"But—but—he's my—my—she caught herself in time. She was about to blurt out, "Paul Wharton's my friend—a man who wants to marry me!" For an instant she was silent. She could not believe what she had heard, and she did not want to. "Where's Mr. Wharton now?" she managed to ask.

"In the secretary's office, ma'am. For some reason," the trainer repeated, "Mr. Wharton decided to handle this himself."

"I see. Thank you. I'll go there."

"Yes, ma'am," was all he said, as she walked off.

AS Sherry approached the doorway to the secretary's office she heard a familiar voice ringing out—loud and clear; the voice of Uncle Willie Bond. She had forgotten all about him. She crossed the threshold.

Running along the end of the little room was a counter, and behind the counter stood a tall and totally bald man with large, black-rimmed glasses perched on the end of a long nose. He was peering over the glasses at three men who expostulated in front of him.

A gangling, unshaven man in unpressed clothes—to the right of Sherry; the suave and immaculate Paul Wharton at the left; and between them the massive figure of Willie Bond. All three had their backs to her. Uncle Willie was pounding on the counter with a ham-like fist:

"I tell you I've a right to speak—I'm William Bond—business agent for the Lone Tree stable—just back from Europe."

"But we don't know you," the hawklike secretary was objecting. "Your clerk talked with me this morning—when I scratched Pepper Boy out of the handicap, and my credentials were mailed to the Jockey Club last night."

"And Mr. Bond is what he says he is, too."

The secretary glanced up, the three men turned around—to face Sherry Bond.

Her blue eyes blazing, Sherry ignored Wharton, stepped forward, spoke only to the official: "This is Mr. Bond—he is my agent—I am Miss Bond—I own the colt, Pepper Boy. Do I have to be identified, too? You might send for—"

"Oh, no, Miss Bond. And we're sorry, Colonel."

The secretary motioned for a guard to close the door—to exclude some loungers who tried to force themselves in. He took a leather dice cup down from a shelf, put two dice in it, said: "Here you are—you, Jamison—J comes before W. Roll—and high man gets the colt."

"Maybe—maybe not," Willie Bond said distinctly; and to Sherry, who had stepped to his side—the other side from Paul Wharton—he said gruffly: "This isn't finished yet—we've got a say."

elbow. She shook free the hand, glanced over her shoulder. It was Paul Wharton—an eager look in his eyes.

"Sherry!" "Well?" The steel in her manner made him pause. She spoke again, sharply: "You tried to claim my horse."

"Sherry, you've got to listen—Again she shook his hand free. Turned, saying, "You'll excuse me." She started toward the clubhouse.

Paul was beside her—was keeping pace with her going up the steps—was talking—she was not hearing a word he said—she went into the first vacant box. "Will you please go away?" she asked.

"Sherry, I was trying to protect your horse. Remember, twice I urged you not to start Pepper Boy in a claiming race? You wouldn't listen. So when I learned another man was going to claim him, I had my trainer put in a claim."

Sherry was silent; she stared at him. "Racing's a man's game, Sherry—"

"One-third of the race horses in America are owned by women."

"And raced by men trainers! There are only a handful of girl trainers in the country. This business requires experience, and you simply haven't any, Sherry."

"But fortunately my uncle has!" Paul Wharton shrugged. "Don't you understand, Sherry? I was trying to save your colt; I was going to give him back to you—as one friend to another."

So Paul had been trying to save her colt, not take Pepper Boy away from her. Sherry's smile returned slowly.

"Thanks, Paul," she said, extending her hand. "I didn't understand."

"I know, darling. He did not release her hand. "Sherry, won't you give up this racing business, marry me, now. He was almost pleading. "You've had a try at it, and you came through only by sheer luck."

"You know I love you Sherry. We can be married here, have our honeymoon at the Derby, watching Red Soldier win."

Veteran At 36 Is Off To Third War

By United Press VANCOUVER, B. C.—Wars come and wars go to John "Frenchy" Bestor, 36-year-old private in the Westminster Regiment (M.G.) Canadian active service force.

Bestor, veteran of the World War and with five year campaigning in Algeria and French Morocco with the Foreign Legion behind him, is looking forward to taking the present war in his stride.

a soldier is attested by the row of ribbons he is entitled to wear on his tunic. Among them are the Croix de Guerre with palm, the Medal Militaire, Medical Morocco and Medal Blessi.

Moving to France when 7 years old from his native Quebec, Bestor joined the French army as a drummer boy when 14, and fought through the war with the French army. At Arras he won the Croix de Guerre.

Speaking nine languages fluently and possessing a smattering of others, he became an interpreter on the French staff following the armistice and served with the army of occupation for two years.

Not having satisfied his desire for active service, he joined the Foreign Legion in 1923 and was sent to Oran for training. From there he went to Morocco and served in the campaign against the rebel chieftain Abd-el Krim, since exiled to the French island of Reunion.

When a storm is in the air, they feed as late as 8 p. m., however.

OLD HOUSE

By Ina Gene Bradford That old house where I lived. Is all tumbled down; The pretty bright green shutters. Are all russet and brown.

The roof is all spotted! With holes of darkened grey. But when I put the shingles on, said, "I know that's bound to stay."

We had flowers that used to grow. With faces of every hue; The lovely bright red roses, And violets of heaven's own blue.

The old front porch was covered. With vines of every kind; And shiny new front steps, That barefoot feet did climb.

But now the steps are rotten, And sagging to the ground; And the bright green leafy vines, Are old crumbled and brown.

The old gate we swung on. With the peach tree by its side; Is all fallen side ways. And the peach tree has died.

If that old house could talk,

Braswell Vantress has returned to Tyler Commercial College after spending the week-end with his parents.

Wedge-Sole Shoes Hard On Arches A Doctor Declares

AUSTIN, Tex.—If the wedge-sole, solid-arch, shoe forces its way from fad to fashion, it will not do so on merits of comfort or beauty, Dr. Rath Bass, University of Texas physical education assistant professor, declared today.

Checking shoe designers' latest innovation against the points of a good shoe, recognized according to their provision for as much natural foot action as possible, Dr. Bass has found the new style below average.

Of the six-good-points list, the wedge-sole shoe cannot have flexible arch, rubber heel, thin leather sole. It may possible have broad toes, low heel, soft leather top.

The steel shank, outstanding feature of the wedge-sole, has the same effect on the foot as a steel brace worn from the wrist to the last finger knuckles would have on the hand, Dr. Bass explained.

An additional bad feature of the new style is its flat bottom surface from toe to heel which makes walking dangerous and appearance "flat-foot," Dr. Bass said.

Texas oil companies furnish producing, pipe line and refining equipment free for use of students in adult vocational classes conducted by the State Department of Education. Approximately 14,000 Texans have taken these courses to date.

I know what it would say; But it will always be my home. Forever and a day.

Business Directory Of City Is Being Worked Up Locally

Horace Hill of Ranger is working up a business and professional directory of Ranger, in which he hopes to list every business firm of every kind operating in the city. The directories, when completed, will be placed in every hotel room and tourist camp in the city, in order that they may be of service to the tourist and visitor and of material benefit to those who have subscribed to the service.

Hill stated today that the idea was meeting with wholehearted approval of everyone he had contacted and his work of compiling the directory was almost complete.

He expects to have the directory completed and distributed by the middle or latter part of May.
