Old Folks Hold Meeting; To Meet Again August 3

Due to the fact that two speakers scheduled to be present were unable to be on hand, Eastland county old folks at their meeting last Saturday at the county courthouse, did not elect new officers, but called another meeting for that purpose for August 3. There were 60 persons present. Rev. J. H. Taylor of Eastland, who called the meeting as chairman of the old folks, resigned that position at the Saturday meeting. The meeting took a vote on the question as to whether the handling of old age pensions should continue to be handled as at present or should be placed in the hands of county judges, and the latter carried unanimously. Rev. J. H. Taylor stated that he spent several hours last Saturday taking a poll of voters on the governor's race with the following results: Thompson, 1; Sadler, 2; Hines, 2; Davis, 1; Ferguson, 4; O'Daniel, 150. About 12 persons approached said they had not made up their minds about the matter.

Acker Planning a Homecoming for August 15 and 16

Residents of the Acker community met Sunday afternoon and planned a big annual homecoming to be held Thursday and Friday, Aug. 15 and 16.

At the meeting it was planned to have a free barbecue, a square dance contest, horseshoe pitching and dollar pitching contests, and many other features of the celebration, to be planned at a later date.

D. C. Goforth of Strawn, president of the Acker Homecoming committee, appointed several committees to work out details for the annual event. Included among the committees named were:

Program Committee: Mrs. H. C. Thompson, Mrs. Josie Nix and Alvin Mayhall. Finance Committee: Harve Thompson and Garve Fambrough. Grounds Committee: John Nix and Claud Beardson.

The grounds committee will meet Thursday, Aug. 1, to build an addition to the brush arbor, to install more seats and to build stands, clean up the picnic grounds and make preparations for the homecoming.

The Southern Ice Company of Ranger has agreed to furnish ice for the drinking water and Harve Fambrough announced that he would donate a yearling for the barbecue and that there were several others upon whom he could count to make similar donations. It was decided at the meeting Sunday afternoon to ask Ranger to furnish a one-hour program on the evening of Thursday, Aug. 15.

Seven Cream Cones Was Your Share In Month Of June

AUSTIN, Texas—Did you get your seven ice cream cones last month?

That's your quota turned out by Texas ice cream factories, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. Production of this summer delicacy was estimated by the bureau at 1,437,000 gallons, the peak of a steadily mounting output. June production was 5.8 per cent higher than in June a year ago. For the first half of 1940, ice cream manufacture gained 9.6 per cent over the first half of 1939.

Other dairy products likewise showed a June gain over 1939—American cheese, 2.5 per cent, creamery butter, 1.3 per cent. Production of cheese was estimated at 2,018,000 pounds, butter at 5,049,000 pounds.

Says Infantile Paralysis Largely A Summer Disease

AUSTIN, Texas—Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, states that infantile paralysis, like typhoid fever, is already a summer disease. Although cases may occur during any month of the year, over half the total cases occur during July, August, September and October. Through June 30, fifty-three cases of poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) had been reported to the State Health Department.

Direct contact between persons is the chief factor in the spread of infantile paralysis. Because of the seasonal prevalence of the disease, flies and other insects have been suspected of conveying the virus or germ. Insect transmission has not, however, been demonstrated. Although animals are subject to paralysis, they are seemingly not susceptible to the human type of this paralytic disease. Carriers are difficult to determine; this fact makes advisable the reduction to a minimum of human contact during any outbreak of the disease.

Early symptoms of infantile paralysis comprise headache, fever, vomiting, bowel disorder, drowsiness and irritability, followed by neck or back stiffness. Prompt medical care, early recognition and reporting of cases make possible the use of valuable preventive and control measures.

After the acute stage of the disease has passed and walking is permitted the patient, under no circumstances must the affected part of the body be fatigued. It is thus observed that the secret of successful rehabilitation lies in maintenance of professional guidance and larger doses of patience. Children under five are more susceptible to the disease, and all children under twelve should be watched for suspicious symptoms. Your family physician should be called at once and physicians should report all cases to local and state health authorities immediately. When the disease occurs, all cases should be isolated for twenty-one days. All milk should be boiled unless it is pasteurized.

Children should not visit homes where the disease, or symptoms of the disease, exist. Promptness in diagnosis of poliomyelitis is a most important factor in control measures.

First Cavalry To Be Strengthened By 3,000 Men Soon

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Texas—The War Department has decreed that the historic First Cavalry Division be strengthened by the addition of three thousand new men at the earliest possible date.

The present strength of the division is approximately six thousand officers and men. It includes the 5th, 7th, 8th, and 12th Cavalry regiments, the 82d Field Artillery, an armored car troop, and a large complement of signal, medical, quartermaster, and ordnance troops. The division is scattered along some six hundred miles of the Mexican border from El Paso to Brownsville, Texas. From the division commander, Major General Kenyon Joyce, to the newest trooper, the men of this division are hard, fit, and keen. Many consider this division to be the best field service unit in the United States Army. While there are a number of motorized elements, there are still plenty of horses for the young soldiers who wish to ride. As proof of the type of men who compose this division, its members point with pride to Lew Jenkins, the lightweight champion of the world, who until 1938 was a member of the 8th Cavalry stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Young men who want to do some real soldiering are invited to see Patrick Hossley, the U. S. Army Recruiting representative at Eastland.

Illegal Trotlines Are Removed by State Wardens

AUSTIN, Tex.—Game wardens in many sections of Texas are campaigning vigorously against illegal trotlines and scores of them, 500 to 1,000 feet long and equipped with illegal hooks, have been found and destroyed by wardens. Many game fish as well as catfish are caught on trotlines. One outfit found recently had 2,000 expensive, needle-point hooks on it and probably cost $50. The hooks were not baited, but the line was set in zig-zag style across a channel and hundreds of fish were caught in the sides by these "daggers."

Two wardens had a terrific battle with a 43-pound catfish caught on one of these "dagger-point hook" equipped lines, but finally subdued the cat and took it to an orphanage. All illegal gear and fish confiscated by the Game Department representatives is donated to charitable organizations in various parts of the state. Waters which have been declared fish sanctuaries by the State Game Department are closed to all activities connected with fishing, the executive secretary of the department warns and pointed out specifically that it is illegal to seine for minnow, in the sanctuaries.

It is unlawful for any person to fish in any sanctuary with nets, trotlines, seines, hooks and lines, artificial bait or otherwise in any manner take or catch or remove any fish from a sanctuary under penalty of a minimum fine of $25, and a maximum fine of $200.

Model Plane Meet In Ranger Draws Big Attendance

Fort Worth, Abilene and Graham walked off with most of the prizes in the model airplane contests staged at the Ranger Air-therport Sunday afternoon, with Ranger winning but one place, in the novelty and stunt contest.

Willie Keel of Abilene won first place and a Hrovnie motor in the rubber band contest, his plane staying aloft 223 seconds on three flights; Jack Russell of Fort Worth won second place and a Mercury kit with three flights totaling 174 seconds and Jim Bracken of Abilene won third place and a Gull kit with a total of 163 seconds on his three flights.

On his second flight his plane took off and stayed aloft 55 minutes, landing in a pasture near Caddo, where it was recovered. IS EASTLAND VISITOR

Judge Sam Russell of Stephenville, candidate for congress from this district, was in the city today seeing the voters. He was in high spirits and apparently enjoying the work of campaigning.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull of the United States, told the Pan-American conference at Havana today that the 21 American Republics should establish a trusteeship for the French and Dutch possessions in this hemisphere to prevent them from getting into the hands of the totalitarian nations.

Secretary Hull pledged that American armed forces will support the conference's decision and urged all countries to stamp out un-American influences and to cooperate for economic independence.

Europe's war had only a continuation of preliminaries of the "battle for Britain" as Adolf Hitler apparently waited for Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Britain to reply to his warning of surrender or be destroyed.

Three German planes were shot down over England today, and the British admitted losing a destroyer. The German planes were shot down Sunday and it was claimed by the British that 21 had been shot down in battles Saturday. The British were thrilled by reports that six British planes had successfully attacked an armada of 80 German fighters over the English channel.

The three Baltic states of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia joined Russia today as Rumania reportedly was being urged to adopt a pro-communist rather than a pro-Nazi form of government.

In China guards were assigned to six American newspapermen who were threatened by Japanese at Shanghai. Shore leave for United States Marines and Sailors were cancelled after an incident between sailors and police.

Sharing the Burden

Whether the National Guard is mobilized for a long term of thorough training or not, it is certain that ordinary training periods will be lengthened, and that in one way or another more and more men are going to be called from normal civilian life to longer periods of military training.

This means that the problem of meeting the dislocations in industrial and personal life will have to be considered as carefully as the military problem itself.

Already it is being proposed that married men in the lower ranks be permitted to resign from the Guard if it should launch into an 18-month training period. It is felt that special hardship might be caused in family life if men on the lowest scale of military pay were to leave their families for so long a time.

But the problem goes deeper than that. Should a full year, or an 18-month training period be decided upon, the problem of return to civilian life would be almost as great as that created by a war. In Europe, where every young man spends a couple of years in the army as a matter of course, the training period usually comes before he has established himself in civil life, and the dislocation is therefore less. But here we propose to train the National Guard, most of whose members are older and already have found a place in industry or business.

Surely such a man wants to feel that in giving up a year or more of his life voluntarily to his country's service, he does not also forfeit his prospects in his chosen trade or profession. Yet while such men are gone, industry must carry on. The vacant place must be filled, even if temporarily.

Now many employers are working on the problem of granting leaves of absence for all employes called upon for military service. Some are trying to arrange at least two weeks with full pay, some as much as 60 days. Many are trying to plan so as to assure the soldier his job when he returns.

The situation of employers is too diverse, conditions are too various, to lay down any very general rule. But we face what will soon be a fact, not a theory, and it is not too soon for every person involved to begin planning means of sharing as equally as possible the burdens that will come with increased military training.

Faced With a Reality

It'll Have to Last Him a Year

It will be a long time before sailor George Reardon again gets a kiss like this from Mildred Wiggins. They're saying goodbye at Kansas City, Mo., as he leaves for San Pedro, Calif., to board ship for a year's cruise.

THE PAY OFF

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

THE Yankees aren't out of this year's race, and they haven't stopped trying. A three-day school at Yankee Stadium attracted 110 youngsters. Phil Rizzuto, the brilliant Kansas City shortstop, walked into one of these sessions in 1937.

The next semester is scheduled for Newark in the fall, and will be held behind locked gates, as classes have been conducted since rival scouts stole two boys from Prof. Paul Kritcheff's Kansas City college two years ago.

Forty of the 110 who attended the course just concluded will be watched on sandlots.

YANKEE SCOUTS RECALL:
Miller Huggins laughing when Home Run Baker recommended a young farmer boy named Jimmy Foux, who hit the ball as far as Babe Ruth.

Tris Speaker paying not the slightest attention to Joe Medwick when Medwick worked out with the Newark Bears.

Hank Gowdy informing John McGraw that Paul Waner couldn't hit.

McGraw, getting his first look at Big Poison in a Pittsburgh uniform, and firing Gowdy.

McGraw, who had searched for a Jewish star for years, telling Henry Greenberg he wouldn't do.

Bill Terry advising Frank McCormick to stick to his job as shipping clerk in an antique shop.

Terry dismissing Buddy Lewis as being too slow and lacking pep.

Pie Traynor being chased out of Braves' field.

SO Yankee forgers, the most efficient in the business, take no chances of missing a big leaguer.

Professor Kritcheff and the Yankee staff dispel the popular belief that there are fewer ball players today than were around 30 years ago.

"There are 10 times as many," insists Professor Kritcheff. "We got 5000 tips on players in the course of a year."

But Professor Kritcheff's good news are scarce.

"That's why the Yankees are a little harder . . . check a little closer."

"That's why year in and year out the Yankee organization is the most successful in the game."

THE PAY OFF

ALL this year's All-Star game proved was that pitching is still 75 per cent or more of baseball.

The St. Louis show also gave some further indication that National League pitchers have caught and passed those of the American, which would put the elder circuit on top for a change.

Talk of the American having a permanent bulge was silly, of course, for fresh talent runs in cycles. It is only reasonable that with eight clubs on each side hustling material, the margin one way or the other will not be lopsided down through the years.

It was a rare combination of pitching and power that kept the Yankees out in front for four straight seasons.

Major league baseball is on a more even plane now that Yankee pitching has grown erratic and the attack is much less severe.

HONUS WAGNER and others ask help for pitchers, but there is no ground for their appeals on the record for the first half of the current grind.

Batting averages have been deflated.

Two no-hitters, four one-hitters and 14 two-hitters is something in the way of evidence that the chukkers are managing fairly well under circumstances allegedly unfavorable.

Pitchers haven't shown as much authority since George Herman Ruth's long ones popularized the lively ball.

There was nothing wrong with American League sluggers in the All-Star game that ordinary pitching would not have cured.

BUT they caught Paul Derringer on a day such as he had twice this season when he missed the Hall of Fame by one base hit. They met up with Bucky Walters in the form that swept the Reds to a pennant in 1939 and threatens to repeat this trip. They bumped into Whitlow Wyatt and Larry French as they were when they turned in two-hitters. They faced Old Maestro Carl Hubbell in the stride that permitted only one Brooklyn player to reach first base on Decoration Day.

CHAPTER VII
A back room of the Villa Aloha, one of the gunnery school buildings by the arm.

"That red-haired girl, who was where she?"
"I don't know. Let me go—"

"We've got to find her." The man swore angrily. "If she's dead up she'll talk."

Clarice shook her head frantically. "I tell you I don't know what happened to her!"

"She must have been out there," the man said, freezing. "If she's on foot, she can't get far."

With a half-smiled oath, his companion followed him out through a back doorway as the two crossed at the front entrance. Meanwhile, a short distance from a side road, Anne was trying as best she could. Her evening wrap was little protection against the storm, and her dress clung to her like a second skin. But Anne was long past caring about how she looked. Her thoughts were to get away, as far away as she could.

She had no doubt of what would happen if she were publicly informed in the shooting at the Villa Aloha. She would be held for questioning, she would be a witness. Headlines would tell the story.

That she had been at the Villa Aloha, in spite of the college rules, would mean instant expulsion from Midland. It would mean the end of her flying course. Curious, she thought, that she should think about that now.

In the next instant, a revulsion of the thought of running away caught her to a stop. Running away from things was not in Anne's tradition. It was true, she minded herself, that her presence at the Villa Aloha had been utterly innocent. She was not guilty to blame. Yet, the fact was that she had been there. The fact remained that she had broken the college rules. The reasons for her having been at the tavern could make no difference to college authorities. In spite of that, she could not run away. There was only one thing to do, and that was to go back to take her medicine.

Then once more, as she stood in the rain, she had that terrible feeling of being pursued. Instinctively, she drew away from the edge of the road. She saw that two men were hurrying down the road, obviously looking for someone. Instinct and quick thought told her they were the two who had done the shooting, and that they were looking for her. At almost the same instant, she heard one of them call out.

"There she is!"
Anne Norris turned and ran blindly down the road through the rain. This time she was not running from disgrace, from the fear of expulsion from college. She was running in sheer terror, from what she instinctively recognized as real and immediate danger.

The headlights of a car coming from behind her illuminated the highway. The car skidded to an abrupt stop beside Anne. The door of the car fell open, a hand reached out to Anne, and a voice called, "In here—quick—"

It was the voice of Dick Douglas!
With one swift motion he pulled Anne into the car and slammed the door. He jammed the car into gear, sent it roaring down the highway in a burst of speed. Behind them a shot rang out, and another. At the first shot the car was well ahead, and in another moment it was out of range of Anne's pursuers.

DICK slowed to normal speed. He glanced curiously at Anne, huddled, white-faced, in a corner. "I thought those two looked bad as I passed them. You have some very old friends, Miss Norris."

"At the sound of his voice, Anne felt her strength returning. "I'd hardly say their manner was very friendly!" She tried to be casual.

"Well, what has the beautiful Miss Norris been doing for excitement? Looks as if it might have been more than a rotogravure picture in the Sunday supplement this time."

Embarrassed, half-angry at herself for doing so, Anne told him the whole story. As she finished it, she added, "I don't know why on earth I should tell all of this to you."

"You needn't," he said curtly. "I'll say you should even less judgment than I'd have expected. He looked at her as he spoke, and all at once began to laugh.

"That's right, laugh," Anne snapped, her temper rising. "If you could only see yourself," he gasped. "Wait—!" He stopped the car, took out his flashlight. "Take a look at yourself in your vanity. Take a look."

STILL angry, Anne took out her mirror and stared at herself as he held the flashlight. Her hair had turned to a wet, tangled mass, there were streaks of dirt, rain, and mud on her face. Her hair, a long scratch ran the length of her nose. Her Paris gown hung in rain-soaked, muddy shreds. For a moment she stared at herself, aghast. Then she too began to laugh.

"Anne Norris, the glamorous!" Dick Douglas' voice was amused but kind.

For a few minutes they sat laughing. Then with a flash of sympathetic concern he pulled off his coat and wrapped it around her, then started the car.

"Got to get you home, youngster, before you catch pneumonia." "No, I've got to go back. Don't you see? I was—a witness. The police—"

He looked at her curiously. "You mean you're going back there—let yourself in for all it would mean?"

"I was at the Villa Aloha. I've got to go back and take my medicine."

"Anne Norris, you're certainly game." His voice could have held no higher praise. "But don't do it. In the first place, the chances are your testimony wouldn't do any good. I know how these scrapes usually wind up. In the second place, you were innocent of any intent to do wrong. You don't deserve what would happen to you." He smiled at her. "Let me be your jury and judge? Verdict, not guilty. Now let me take you home."

In her heart she knew that he was right.

A FEW minutes later he turned down the street to her sorority house.

"Captain Douglas, I can't go in looking like this—"

"No, you're right. Where's Georgette? Any other way you can get in?"
"Georgette is home for the week-end. There's the fire escape—I hate to do it, but—"

Without a word he swung his roadster into the driveway, stopped in the shadows and helped her from the car. Under the fire escape he stopped.

"Take a hot bath and get right into bed."

She nodded. "Don't worry! I will."

"Okay. Up you go." He boosted her up to the fire escape, his muscular hands hard against her arm. "And—good luck. If you get into any trouble because of this—let me help, if I can."

In the security of her room at last, Anne had only one thought. She would never see Tony Scott again, never.

FLYING CO-ED

BY MARY KINNAVEY MOORE

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY Anne could identify Dick through the storm. Dick drives her to the airport. He advises her not to return to the school, takes her home. He is instantly through.

CHAPTER VIII
Anne's alert mind, her poise, and her ease, were to be of immeasurable help in making pilot of her, Captain Douglas new during her next instruction period, a few days later. He had heard that the distressing events of the Villa Aloha incident might be worrying her and would affect her reactions to flight training. But, if she were worrying, he did not show it.

"Can you name these instruments for me?" he asked after they were in the cockpit, safety belts securely fastened.

"I believe I can." Pointing to them, each in turn, Anne recited: Magnetic compass, air speed indicator, turn and bank indicator, the oil climb indicator, altimeter, tachometer, and—she hesitated for a moment—"clock."

She brought out the last very impressively as though identifying it were a great achievement, and they both laughed.

"Fine," Dick complimented her. And then he asked her to explain its purpose, except the tachometer. What is it?"

"Oh, I really read up on that," Anne laughed. "It measures the revolutions per minute of the airplane engine."

"Okay, these are the instruments you'll use to get your instrument rating from the Civil Aeronautics Authority, but your directional gyro and your artificial horizon also are standard equipment."

"Isn't blind flying, instrument flying?" Anne asked.

"Yes," was the answer. "You'll learn a lot more about these later. Now let's see about the controls."

When the shooting had taken place, his first thought had been to get away before the police arrived. His second thought had been that this was a marvelous chance to involve Anne in a nasty mess. He had known that she would resent his desertion of her but he had thought that it would be balanced later by her gratitude to him for standing by her when other friends deserted her.

But, by some miracle, she had gotten safely away. Now she refused to have anything more to do with him. He had to admit that he had lost. Tony Scott was not a good loser.

He slumped down at the bar, his chin on his hand, and growled, "Harry, I'd give a lot to know how that girl got away from here."

The bartender stopped polishing glasses long enough to say, "If you mean your red-haired friend the other night, I can tell you."

"How?" Tony stared at him in amazement.

The bartender looked around before he spoke. "She beat it out the back way. Ed scrambled up the road. Those two guys—you know who I mean—went after her. They wanted to scare her into keeping her mouth shut. They just about caught her a ways up the road when she was picked up by a guy in a little car. He was just driving down the road."

Tony scowled. "I'd like to lay my hands on the guy. He sure upset my apple cart."

"Joe recognized his car," the bartender said casually, resuming his polishing. "Yellow roadster with wire wheels. Goes by here a lot. Belongs to that government flying instructor out to the airport."

"Douglas?" Tony asked, an ugly light in his eyes.

"Don't know his name," the bartender said.

Tony thought for a moment. Dick Douglas drove a yellow roadster with wire wheels.

U. S. HAS HEAVY CARIBBEAN STRIKING FORCE READY IF TROUBLE DEVELOPS OVER ISLANDS

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—If trouble should arise on or near any of the Caribbean islands owned by nations which have been conquered by Germany, the United States has within handily ready striking force which are believed to be substantially larger than they might expect to encounter.

Although the bulk of the U. S. fleet is concentrated in the Pacific, the force on duty in the Atlantic—and hence available for action in the Caribbean on short notice—has formidable hitting power.

The Atlantic squadron normally consists of three battleships—the New York, Arkansas and Texas—the aircraft carrier Ranger, and the heavy cruisers Wichita, Quincy, San Francisco, Tuscaloosa and Vincennes. It also includes nine divisions of destroyers, or a total of 36. In addition, 12 submarines are stationed at the New London base, and half a dozen more are normally on duty at the Coco Solo base in the Canal Zone.

It is believed that several ships have been added to this force recently, although its exact composition is a navy secret.

AIR FORCES WITHIN RANGE
SUBSTANTIAL air forces are also within range. The aircraft carrier Ranger has a complement of 81 planes. Thirty-six of the navy's long-range patrol bombers are stationed at Coco Solo, and a number of fighter planes are also available at Pensacola.

The army also has strong air forces within easy reach. Approximately 40 bombing planes plus 50 observation and reconnaissance planes are stationed at the Atlantic end of the Panama Canal. At the Pacific entrance are eight squadrons, mostly pursuit planes; these run 25 planes to a squadron.

A squadron of 13 bombing planes is also stationed at Borinquen Field, Puerto Rico, and an equal number at Miami.

SITUATION TICKLISH AT MARTINIQUE
THE capital's attention is focused on these forces at the moment because of the extraordinarily ticklish nature of the situation in the Caribbean—highlighted by the case of the French island of Martinique, where certain French warships are either under observation or blockade (depending on your interpretation of the news dispatches) by British warships.

Shortly after the outbreak of war, the new world nations declared a "neutrality zone" skirting both American continents and asserted no acts of war therein would be tolerated. Martinique lies well within the zone, and a Franco-British naval battle would hand this government a very tough problem.

In addition, the Monroe Doctrine—recently reaffirmed both by the administration and by Congress—sets the United States firmly against the transfer of title to European possessions in the New World. The Caribbean is filled with British, French and Dutch possessions. No one knows, yet, what will become of them.

The whole problem will be one of the chief topics for the forthcoming Havana conference. It is made infinitely more troublesome by France's recent transformation into a fascist state—which hints that Germany might acquire the use of air and submarine bases close to the Panama Canal without actually infringing the Monroe Doctrine.

THE need for economy may come and go, but summer weddings seem to go on forever. So many readers ask for another bride's cake recipe to be made at home, that we give this exclusive recipe today.

It is not low-cost. No rich bride's cake can be, but when made at home and iced with care, it will be cheaper and just as lovely as one ordered from a high class caterer. This cake is unusual because the top layer is made of fruit cake and the two lower layers are made of rich pound cake.

FRUIT CAKE (Upper tier)
One-half lb. butter, 1/2 lb. brown sugar, 5 eggs, 1/2 lb. flour, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 1/2 cup brandy, 1/2 cup rum syrup, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon mace, 1 lb. seeded raisins, 1/2 lb. currants, 1/2 lb. pecans, 1/2 lb. lemon peel, 1/2 lb. orange peel, 1/2 lb. citron, 1/2 lb. candied cherries, 1/2 teaspoon allspice, pinch salt, 1/2 teaspoon cloves.

Cream butter, add sugar and beat well. Beat egg whites and beat them into creamed butter and sugar until light. Add brandy, fruit, rum syrup, nuts and flour mixed and sifted with the cinnamon, spices and soda. Bake in buttered and floured pans 4 hours in a slow oven, or until done.

POUND CAKE (Lower tier)
Two lbs. butter, 2 lbs. sugar, 20 eggs, 2 lbs. flour, 1 teaspoon mace, 12 tablespoons brandy or non-alcoholic brandy flavoring. Cream butter, add sugar gradually and continue beating. Then add first the egg yolks, which have been beaten until they are thick and lemon-colored. Next add the egg whites, beaten stiff. Then add flour, mace and flavoring. Beat vigorously 5 minutes. Bake in deep pans 1 1/2 hours in slow oven (300 degrees F.), or if to be baked in shallower pans, bake a shorter time, until done.

BASIC ICING
Three cups sugar, 2 tablespoons water, 1/2 cup egg whites, vanilla or lemon flavoring to taste. Beat the egg white until stiff. Meanwhile, boil sugar and water until the syrup spins a thread. Then slowly stir the syrup into the beaten egg whites, and continue beating until the icing is of the proper consistency. Spread on cake and when nearly cool, decorate it as desired.

TOMORROW'S MENU
BREAKFAST: Fresh plums, waffles, a cold dried beef, jelly, coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Hot chicken broth in cups, cottage cheese and fruit salad, gingerbread, iced tea, iced cocoa.
DINNER: Poached frozen fillets of haddock, parsley cucumber sauce, boiled potatoes, spinach timbales, lettuce fresh cherry pie, cheese, coffee, milk.

This award is given annually to the group that accumulates the greatest number of points during the camp period.

She will be working this term for a bronze all-star award given to girls who hold high the ideals of the camp, who typify the spirit of Waldemar.
