Our Precocious Pupils

It is hard even for Americans in this hard-boiled world of 1940 to realize how very soft-boiled we were in 1900.

Boy, did we have illusions! The war with Spain was just over, and the army was up to the hips in the unpleasant task of "pacifying" the Philippines. "Underneath the starry flag, civilize 'em with a Krag!" was a popular song among soldiers, who, waist-deep in Philippine jungles, had fewer illusions than the folks back home.

Today's cynicism attributes the American adventures in the Philippines and in Cuba to pure financial imperialism. Perhaps that entered into the picture, but there was much more to it than that.

People in general felt that in the American form of government and in the American social system they had something precious, the very last word in how to live. They wanted to share it, to evangelize. They wanted, sincerely wanted, to lift up the "little brown brothers" to our own exalted level.

But alas, nothing is more futile than to expect one people to put on and wear without alteration a suit of governmental clothes cut for somebody else. It never works, as Herr Hitler is apt to find out some of these days.

What do we have, 40 years later? We have President Manuel Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth pointing out that he favors a new type of democracy wherein individual liberties are curtailed and the two-party system is abandoned. Old concepts of personal and property rights must yield to the demands of social justice, says Quezon.

And in Cuba we find a former army sergeant who rose to power by insurrection just becoming the legitimate president under a new constitution far more "socialized" than our own, and owing his election to a strange alliance of Communists, assorted left-wingers, and the remainder of the notorious old Machado dictatorial machine. Nobody, even in Cuba, understands very exactly just what this means.

None of this is said critically. Perhaps both Quezon and Batista have adopted precisely the sort of government their countries need at the moment.

At this distance we can't be sure. Which is exactly the point.

King Carol is demobilizing his army, probably figuring it's much better that way than to have Hitler or Stalin do it for him.

Fighting having ceased in France it's now a moot point whether the term "Nazi bulge" refers to a battle position or General Goering.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

JOHN L. LEWIS SLIPPING IN C. I. O.; UNION AIDES BOOST THIRD TERM FOR F. D. E.

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO—John L. Lewis is being outplayed in the tug of war within the C. I. O.

First visible sign is appearance at the Democratic convention here in Chicago, as ardent third-term boosters, of some of the C. I. O.'s most important officials. Among these are Philip Murray, C. I. O. vice president, and Thomas J. Kennedy, secretary of the United Mine Workers, who are delegates from Pennsylvania, and R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, a delegate from Michigan.

Significance lies in the fact that Lewis has been bitterly and openly opposed to Roosevelt's re-nomination for many months.

Even more important is the way Lewis is being short-circuited in the matter of a " rapprochement" between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L.

When President Roosevelt put C. I. O. Vice President Sidney Hillman on the National Defense Committee, the way was paved for an effective C. I. O.-A. F. of L. co-operation which, conceivably, might finally heal the breach between the two labor organizations . . . by next fall, say, after the presidential election.

Hillman, whose split with Lewis came partly because he wanted to make such a peace while Lewis didn't, proceeded to set up a National Labor Policy Advisory Committee, composed of representatives of the A. F. of L., C. I. O. and the railway brotherhoods. It's this committee's job to smooth out jurisdictional fights and in general to see to it that the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. split doesn't get in the way of the defense program.

HILLMAN MANUEVERS

NOTABLE is the fact that the C. I. O. man put on this committee are leader, who have opposed Lewis at late, both on the third term issue and also on the matter of siding the C. I. O. of Communist influence—real or alleged. These men are:

Emil Rieve, of the Textile Workers; Sherman Dalrymple, of the Rubber Workers; R. J. Thomas, of the Auto Workers; Van Bitter, of United Mine Workers; and Chester S. Golden, of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

There is no longer any suspicion of Communist domination of any of their unions. On the other hand, some prominent C. I. O. unions which are commonly supposed to be under Communist influence were pointedly left unrepresented on Hillman's committee.

OLIVER RESIGNATION HELD SIGNIFICANT

ALONG with all of this—which tends to draw an important section of the C. I. O. farther and farther away from Lewis—there is the recent resignation of E. L. Oliver as boss of Labor's Non-Partisan League, and his appointment as head of the American Labor Party in New York.

This league was formed originally as the means by which Lewis-led labor could work for Roosevelt. Oliver quit because he felt the league was tending to follow the Communist party line instead of the New Deal. But when his resignation leaves Lewis in full control of the league, Oliver is the man who has the intimate contact with labor leaders in the league's various local branches . . . and it would not be surprising if a number of these surprised followed him out of the league—perhaps into some as yet unannounced extension of the American Labor Party, perhaps simply into an independent labor committee for Roosevelt.

Englishman In Texas Is Aiding His Countrymen

By United Press

AUSTIN, Tex.—The spirit of the British Lion has showed itself on the Texas banks of the Colorado River.

A transplanted Englishman is doing his part toward seeing England "stick it through." And into every stitch that Evershed knits into stockings for British Tommies goes some of the indomitable spirit that Englishman say will carry them through.

To Evershed, there is no doubt as to the outcome of the war. "England," he says, "is going to stick it out," and he comforts himself by remembering the dark days of the Spanish Armada and the era of Napoleon. The channel stopped them both.

Evershed knits in public, especially on the capital grounds. He says that he isn't ashamed of it, that practically all men in England knit and that it would be good for all men to knit.

The Britisher learned to ply the needle long before he came to Texas 50 years ago in search of health. He said the Duke of Windsor had the knitting habit, too, but that "he was not much good, that one."

Evershed spends some of his time painting. He said he didn't need a model as he possessed a photographic mind. All in all, he's British as beef and proud of it.

Food Poisoning Demonstrates Need For Special Care

AUSTIN, Tex.—"Sporadic outbreaks of food poisoning over the state in the past few weeks demonstrate the need for special care in handling and refrigerating any food that must be prepared some time in advance of serving," states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"Prevention of food poisoning requires clean food handled as little as possible and consumed while it is fresh. Food prepared hours before serving, and allowed to stand at warm temperatures becomes good culture media for bacteria. Cooked products of a perishable nature are readily subject to decomposition, and must be kept well refrigerated.

"Most food poisoning is caused by infection of certain types of bacteria which grow rapidly under favorable conditions, such as high temperature and high humidity. The infection may come from dirty hands, utensils, flies, rodents, contaminated water, infected food materials, and in some cases, from certain types of bacteria which spread rapidly and are not necessarily associated with filthy conditions.

"Picnic food is particularly susceptible to transmitting food poisoning to the members of the picnic party. Be sure you have fresh, clean food, free from stagnant odors, slime, etc. Require all who prepare the food for use to wash their hands thoroughly before handling it. Avoid excessive hand contacts with the food. See that clean containers are used and that special care is exercised in wrapping foods and in protecting them from contamination.

"If food is prepared far in advance of its use, cook it thoroughly, and keep it refrigerated or otherwise protected at a temperature under 50 degrees F. until you are ready to use it. Avoid serving food that is readily infected, such as the more perishable salads and cream-filled pastries. Any foods that are not to be served immediately should be kept on ice. Milk, ice cream, and dairy products in general should be from approved sources.

"Digestive upsets cannot always be blamed on the food served or

SERIAL STORY
FLYING CO-ED

BY MARY KINNAVEY MOORE

CHAPTER IX
"YOU'LL do it, or else!" Tony Scott said grimly. "Don't forget the dough you owe me."

"If he phones, will whoever answers tell him I am out? I'm sure he won't stop here." She felt that she really was through with him, and it was with excitement and enthusiasm that she drove Georgette to the airport, late one afternoon.

The climb became gradual, and the ship was level before it was over the familiar golf course. Georgette turned it to the right and followed the regular route that formed an imaginary circuit about the airport.

Daley nodded. "Okay. I thought so. I'm giving you a chance to wipe out what you owe me, and make some more besides—without any danger."

Georgette was to solo. It was her dreamed-of, hoped-for day. They talked only of flying as they drove along, and of the ground work and additional hours of dual instruction Anne must have before she would fly alone.

During the next 10 minutes, Captain Douglas watched the plane in all its turns, climbs, glides and straight flights. Then it turned once again into the wind and headed for the field. It came in slowly, but Georgette put the nose down too far, and the light ship bounced twice as its wheels struck the ground. She taxied over toward the hangar and brought the plane to a full stop. Immediately, Douglas was there, congratulating her, telling her to take it up again, and come in a bit easier.

"I don't like it," Daley muttered, uncomfortably. "Don't be a sop," Tony said. "What have you got to lose?"

His long and intimate friendship with Georgette's brother had given him a special interest in her work. She had been an apt pupil, and her friends were sure she'd be as famed a pilot as her brother.

On the second attempt, the ship was landed more smoothly, and a pleased and thrilled Georgette was receiving the praise of her instructor, and the congratulations of her fellow students, gathered to watch her.

"All right," Tony said. "It's a deal." "I don't like it," Daley muttered, uncomfortably.

Douglas helped her into her parachute, talking easily, though earnestly, as he helped her adjust the rigging.

"Marvelous," Georgette exclaimed. "I'll hope the moon comes out for you, and you won't meet a cloud."

The girls at the sorority house had agreed willingly to help Anne in her resolve not to see or talk to Tony, when she told them that she had had her last date with him.

Georgette's take-off was smooth, but her climb a bit too steep, and Dick and Anne watched the ship apprehensively.

"Contact!" and the engine was turning over and the wheels released.

Vegetables May Grow In A City Apartment Now

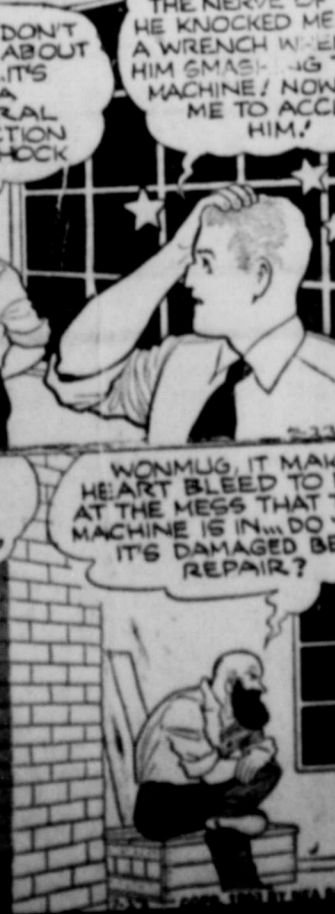

By United Press
FORT WORTH, Tex.—"Fresh green vegetables grown in a garden in the apartment" was predicted today by J. M. Sorrels, whose hobby is synthetic gardening. Sorrels, like most Texans, has plenty of land. But, he said, there is no reason why chemical gardening could not take place in a one room apartment. The 50-year-old telephone company employe today displayed fine ripe tomatoes grown in a box of excelsior with nothing but a vat of chemicals grow faster (usually in about 45 days) and ripen sooner and have an equally good flavor," Sorrels said. Most vegetables and flowers can be successfully grown in chemicals he said. Falls, most of them happening in homes and around businesses, killed more people than any other single factor outside of motor vehicle fatalities.

chemically treated water beneath. His synthetic vegetable patch springs forth in his backyard. "However," he said, "there is no reason why my vegetable box couldn't be placed either outside or inside an apartment house window." Synthetic gardening first attracted the attention of Sorrels and a neighbor, N. E. Fry, when they read about the process in newspapers and magazines. "I read a lot about Wake Island, that American Airlines stop in the Pacific where they don't have enough soil to grow things," he said. "They were raising foodstuffs there without soil, and we thought we could do it here." Sorrels built a water-resistant, cypress box and dropped a wire mesh basket filled with excelsior into it. Young plants were inserted through the excelsior so that the roots hung through the mesh into the water that was treated with seven chemicals. There was a space of about a half an inch between the mesh basket and the water line which "is very important," Sorrels said, because it prevented "wet-root." "The tomatoes developed with

HOW TO ADOPT A BRITISH CHILD FOR DURATION OF WAR

This is Adrian Boshier, 13 months old and typical of the English children coming to this country. Adrian's staying at the Guggenheim estate on Long Island.

Appalled by the very real threat of wholesale bombing of their homes, thousands of British parents are desperately anxious to send their children to the safety of the United States.

And in America hundreds of charitable families are keen to give some and shelter to the British youngsters.

The question uppermost in the minds of the Americans is just how to go about getting a child guest.

The only agency aiding this work is the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, whose chairman is Marshall Field and whose office is in New York City.

But to decentralize things and enable all parts of the country to participate, the committee has contacted community chests and community councils and child welfare societies all over the country.

Of 170 queried, 115 have already indicated their willingness to help.

MAY APPLY TO LOCAL AGENCY

Anyone willing to give a home to a British refugee child is called a sponsor. The sponsor may apply through the local existing child welfare agency, which must have had the approval of the state department of social welfare and the federal Children's Bureau.

The would-be sponsor must list full name and home and business address, annual income and financial assets. To give full proof of financial qualifications it would be well to have a letter from employer stating salary and length of time employed, notarized copy of latest federal and state income tax return, statement of life insurance carried, statement from bank, tax receipts showing real estate owned, if any. Such papers should be prepared in triplicate.

The sponsor must file a notarized affidavit of agreement to support the child and to guarantee its maintenance as long as necessary. This certainly means for the duration of the war and, perhaps, for some time thereafter. The child must attend school until at least the age of 16 and must not be gainfully employed before then.

THERE ARE OTHER WAYS TO HELP

There are other ways, however, of helping a child besides taking it into one's own home. The sponsor may provide for a child's maintenance in the home of a relative or friend or even in a home unknown to him.

Also, if a sponsor is financially unable to support a child refugee, but is willing to give it a home, provided financial assistance is given, this too can be arranged after careful examination by the responsible agencies.

At present British authorities have full charge of selection, supervision, care and transportation of all refugee children from the British Isles. Most children will go first to Canada. The responsibility of the U. S. Committee for the Care of European Children begin only when the children arrive in the United States.

The laws of the United States require the Department of Justice to pass on the admissibility of children under 16. The necessary notarized affidavits can now be cabled, so the visas can be issued by consular officers in Britain. Among other data must be full coverage, telling whether the parents can and will pay the child's passage to America or whether a responsible sponsor will do so.

ADOPTION NOT PERMITTED

It is estimated 30,000 children will be evacuated from Britain by the last of August and that about half will find homes in Canada. Children of foreign born, living in Britain, can be sponsored in the same way as British children. All, regardless of nationality, must come in on the immigration quota.

One question asked repeatedly is whether it will be possible to adopt the British children. The answer is "no." Britain passed a law January, 1940, which does not allow British children to be adopted outside the British empire.

The U. S. Committee for the Care of European Children, only agency recognized by British authorities, has the co-operation of the following: Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor; American Red Cross; community chests and councils; Child Welfare League of America; International Migration Service; Family Welfare Association of America; National Travelers' Aid Association; and state and local child welfare services.

Trained Firemen Are An Asset Says Fire Commissioner

AUSTIN, Tex.—The importance of having a well trained crew to man fire apparatus in each Texas city was stressed today by Marvin Hall, state fire insurance commissioner, as he directed an appeal to all mayors and fire chiefs in the state to send representatives to the Firemen's Training School at College Station, July 28-

August 2. The efficiency of fire departments will be materially improved by the knowledge gained at this training school, the commissioner declared.

Dr. H. R. Brayton will be director of the eleventh annual school, which will offer primary and advance courses for firemen, courses for fire marshals, a detailed study for pump operators and apparatus men, and instruction in first aid work.

Elks Play Cisco In Game Here Tonight

The Ranger Elks Club will play a fast team from Cisco at the Ranger Softball Field tonight, it was announced today.

The league schedule was started Monday night, but Tuesday and Thursday nights were left open for matched games between local and out of town teams. This is the first of these non-conference games to be played since the schedule was started. Cisco is reported to have a good team and a fast game is expected.
