SHEEP, GOAT DAY AT CISCO BIG SUCCESS

CISCO, Sept. 7.—The second sheep and goat day sponsored by the Eastland County Sheep and Goat Raisers association drew an estimated 300 people to Lake Cisco Friday to hear experts discuss proper management methods and other phases of the industry and to witness demonstrations during the afternoon.

Speakers for the morning included A. K. Mackey, secretary of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers association, who presented statistics dealing with the industry and discussed the future of wool and mohair in the state; W. H. Dameron, who spoke on pasture building and preservation. Dameron is superintendent of the Sonora Experiment station, and Beal Humphrey, of the San Antonio stockyards.

Dr. Bob Hodges of Ranger, president of the county association, County Agent Elmo V. Cook, secretary of the association, introduced the visitors. T. G. Caudle, Cisco vocational agriculture teacher, F. E. Harrell, G. P. Mitcham and R. W. Mancill were in charge of the entertainment of the visitors. Mr. Mancill supervised preparation of the barbecue of chevon which was served at noon.

Delegations were here from Stephens county, Callahan, Shackelford and other counties. One group came from Goldthwaite.

Frank Grayson, representing the agricultural marketing service of the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., discussed grading of wool and mohair with an actual demonstration. Mohair from the Wright and Harrell ranch was used in the experiment.

Speakers were W. R. Niblett, extension sheep and goat specialist of A. and M. college, who discussed management of sheep and goats; and Mr. Mackey, who gave a demonstration in selection of breeding animals.

Mr. Humphrey, representing the San Antonio stockyards, spoke on the market for goat meat. Goat meat, known as chevon, he said, is now being widely used in sausage to take the place of vegetable products, notably soy bean meal, formerly used. The market now at San Antonio, largest goat market in the world, is from $2 to $2.50 per 100 pounds, he said. It has been higher.

Mr. Dameron recommended that for the best use of pastures, a rancher should run sheep, goats and cattle together, where there exists grass, weeds and brush. He advised deferred grazing for four or five months every few years to insure preservation of grass and weeds. He recommended a sheep and cattle ratio of about seven to one.

Grazing small grain in the winter with sheep and goats serves as a rest for permanent pasture, he said.

Mr. Mackey told the meeting that there are now twenty million sheep in Texas, producing about 20 per cent of live wool grown in the United States.

Tiny Cross Marks Grave of Seagoing Mongrel Terrier

ANAHUAC, Tex.—A tiny cross today marked the grave of Watch, a 13-year-old mongrel terrier whose voyages with his master made him known to seamen around the world.

Watch died at a Houston dog hospital. Someone had poisoned him.

The dog had been the favorite pet of Capt. E. Sherman, retired pilot who guided the first ship up the Galveston-Houston ship channel at night.

Watch had travelled in every state and had circled the world with his master and Mrs. Sherman.

"He was just a black and white mongrel but I wouldn't have traded him for the next ship which comes into port," said Sherman.

Deaf Mutes Turn Robbers But Fail In First Attempt

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—In the still hours of the early morning, seven silent men banded together as partners in crime and committed a single, silent and unsuccessful robbery.

And in a room in a district hotel today, a room so quiet you could easily hear the point of a pencil snap, the seven silently confessed to their crime, police reported.

The seven, all deaf mutes between the ages of 19 and 28, used countless gestures and a half-dozen scratch pads to tell this story to police.

Over coffee in a Bronx restaurant early today, they decided to end their unemployment and become robbers.

Armed with a knife, they quietly crept up on a victim. One pressed the knife into his back, the others encircled him. He handed over $15.

The victim, Siorindo Passanto, a clerk, proved no mute. He yelled for police and then ran to a telephone.

Police caught four of the deaf mutes at an elevated station after one officer fired a shot into the air. The deaf mutes didn't hear the shot, but they saw the upraised arm and the gun. The three others were arrested at their homes.

Detectives William Colby and Arthur Seyffert said it took 75 handwritten notes just to get the names and addresses.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—The Harvard Business School has announced it will offer two new courses this fall in connection with the national defense program. They will be "Industrial Mobilization" and "Economic Problems of National Defense."

RANGER HIGH SCHOOL WILL START CLASSES ON TUESDAY MORNING

The Ranger High School will begin classes at one o'clock Tuesday, Sept. 10, after the formal opening to be held in the high school auditorium at 10 o'clock, Tuesday morning.

Registration will continue through Monday. More than 350 students have registered since Wednesday and it is expected that 400 will have registered by Monday afternoon.

Each class will meet for a 30-minute period on Tuesday afternoon, thus giving teachers time to issue books and make assignments. It is hoped that all students will be present at those classes.

"We are looking forward to a great school year, one that will serve the Ranger school community in its best interest. This goal can be reached only when each individual does his best. This means not only the teachers, students, and parents, it means all citizens of Ranger. It is especially urged that, throughout the year, students attend classes with the greatest regularity. Regular attendance is very necessary if a student does good work and statistics show only a few failures among students who do attend classes regularly.

"The public is invited to attend opening exercises Tuesday morning and to visit with us at any time during the school year," P. O. Hatley, principal of the High School said Saturday.

Registration in the fine arts department of Ranger Junior College will start Monday, Elwood R. Priesing said Saturday, and indications are that the enrollment in this department will be much larger than last year.

Priesing stated that already a large number had enrolled and that many more had expressed the desire to take the courses being offered in music. So large has been the demand, Priesing stated, that it has become necessary to have an assistant in the department in order to take care of this demand.

The Ranger Junior College offers a course, comparable to that of any major college, and the course is fully accredited throughout the state. Facilities include two pianos, a blackboard, sound proof studio, a record collection of classical music, library facilities and auditorium in which public performances may be held, in addition to the studio.

Last year nine performances were conducted, besides the music club performances by the children, which included recitals, receptions, concerts and an operetta.

Both instructors in the fine arts department have obtained their degrees in music and have had experience in teaching both beginners and advanced students.

Priesing stated Saturday that he did not follow any fixed method of teaching, as each student was considered on his own individual requirements and the needs of the pupil were considered in all teaching. The content of the courses one takes is determined after an interview with each pupil.

Two rooms, fitted as studios, will be utilized in instructing the pupils this year, so that both instructors in the department may teach at the same time to take care of the demand for musical instruction. There is a chance to increase this service, Priesing stated, and he hoped in time to reach the entire county. Rates for instruction are low, being only $6 a month for two hours a week, or $10 a month where two instruments are taken.

Transportation Is Sought For Youth Going To A School

Legionnaires Saturday were seeking transportation to Austin for Pete Brown, whose tuition at the State School for the Deaf is paid by the Carl Barnes Post.

Brown attended the school last year and plans to return this year. Anyone going to Austin on Monday or Tuesday, who can take the youth to Austin, has been requested to get in contact with any member of the Carl Barnes Post.

It was stated Saturday that the post would help defray expenses of the trip to Austin for anyone who would take Brown to the school there.

Hull disclosed that formal notification of the acquisition of the bases in an historic trade for 50 U. S. destroyers had been sent to all Latin American nations.

"The government of the United States," they were told, "has taken this step to strengthen its ability not only to defend the United States but in order the more effectively to cooperate with other American republics in the common defense of the hemisphere."

"The resulting facilities at these bases will of course be made available alike to all American republics for the fullest cooperative basis for the common defense of the hemisphere and in entire harmony with the spirit of the pronouncements made and the understandings reached at the conferences of Lima, Panama and Havana."

Smith, Democratic nominee for State Senator from this district, along with Sam Russell of Stephenville, Democratic nominee for Congressman from this district, was invited by Dulin-Daniels, Post No. 70 to address the meeting. Judge Russell, who was holding court in his district, was unable to be present.

The Morton Valley Parent-Teacher Association will hold its first regular meeting Tuesday, September 10, at the school at 3:45, it was announced today.

Plans that were discussed and made by the executive board at the meeting last Thursday will be given at that time and the program for the coming year will also be read. A social will follow the business session.

WOOL, MOHAIR WAREHOUSE OPENS TUESDAY

The Ranger branch of the Midwest Wool and Mohair Marketing Association will be opened in the old Garza Building, former location of the Traders Grocery and Market, at the corner of Walnut and North Rusk Streets on Tuesday, it was announced here today.

The building has been secured as temporary warehouse for storing wool and mohair.

Frank Grayson, wool and mohair grader of the United States Department of Agriculture, and W. R. Niblett, sheep and goat specialist of the Extension Department will be on hand Saturday, when they will grade all wool and mohair brought into the warehouse.

Growers in this part of the country have been urged to bring their wool and mohair into the association's warehouse in Ranger, and to be present on Saturday, if they desire, to see the fall clip graded by experts of long standing and of wide experience.

A grower may see his own clip graded into one of the five classifications under which it will be sold, if he is present at the warehouse Saturday.

It is expected that through the Ranger branch, which will be the second in Texas, the first being at Fort Worth, growers in this part of the country will be able to secure as high as six cents a pound more for mohair than they have been getting in the past.

It was stated Saturday that as soon as 30,000 pounds has accumulated in the Ranger warehouse it will be shipped to Fort Worth. Not more than 30,000 pounds will be kept on hand at any one time.

U. S. Destroyers In British Navy Will Hunt Submarines

By NORMAN McLEOD
United Press Staff Correspondent
A CANADIAN PORT, Sept. 7.

Rear Admiral Stewart Bonham-Carter, chief of British naval operations in the North Atlantic, disclosed today that the destroyers obtained in a trade with the United States will be used in an intensive drive against German submarines.

Bonham-Carter in an interview said he did not know when the transfer of the destroyers would take place but that there would be no ceremony. British captains will board the ships and take over command from the American captains, he said, the flags will be changed, and that will complete the transfer.

"These ships will be used almost exclusively to hunt submarines," the Admiral said. "The British navy is short of destroyers, and these ships will remedy that shortage."

McLeod telephoned his dispatch to New York, and at this point the censor broke in and prevented continuation of the foregoing quotation.

"They are simply magnificent ships," Bonham-Carter said. "They are in perfect condition. They are equal to our VNV's and the equal of any ships we are getting."

The impression was given in the interview that an intensive submarine drive is imminent as a result of Britain having obtained the United States destroyers.

Open the Way to Alaska!

There is no longer any valid reason for delay—the building of the overland highway to Alaska should be started at once!

For years this project has languished. There were Canadian fears that United States influence might be too heavy along such a highway—that it meant some sacrifice of sovereignty. There were American fears that it meant dumping money into a project which would, after all, principally benefit Canada.

Neither fear means anything today. Canada and the United States have submerged all last lingering distrusts in mutual understanding of a mutual problem of defense. And the need for safeguarding Alaska by development as well as by military establishments is now clear.

Well, what are we waiting for? The 1200 miles of this highway would cost only around $14,000,000. It is hard to see how a more valuable defense asset could be acquired for the same amount. There need be no quibbling about the share of the two countries. Canada is very busy right now. Let the United States build the road, and settle later with the Canadians for their share. We can trust them to make a fair adjustment later.

The engineers have studied the situation. They say it is practicable. China's experience in supplying material for two years of an exhausting war by truck over long roads despite the bombers shows that the road has practical value.

But more than that. Most money spent on preparedness has no value in enriching civilian life. You build shells and guns because you have to, but you do not pretend that they are of any value except for stark defense.

The Alaska road might well be of the highest civilian value in addition to its defense worth.

It would open up the northern reaches of British Columbia and the Yukon territory and make them accessible to the Canadian and American west coast.

It would open Alaska to those who might not be able to afford steamer or airway fares, but who would make the trek via "tin-can" cavalcade.

The road is one defense measure which could not possibly be construed as a threat to anybody. It unites a strong defense measure with a forward-looking civilian improvement.

Martin Enlarges Store By Moving Partition To Rear

Although only a few months old, and one of the youngest business concerns in Ranger, the E. L. Martin Company has already had to remodel the store building, located at the corner of Main and North Rusk Streets, in order to accommodate more merchandise and to allow for more display room.

The partition across the rear of the store, which separates the store from the storage space at the rear, has been moved further to the back, enlarging the shopping area of the store.

This change gives more room in which merchandise can be handled and also allows more room for the customers.

Although the store was not crowded with its former arrangement, the new layout adds much to its appearance and to the convenience of the store.

CHAPTER XI
TERROR froze Mark Deuel's heart as he stood in Taylor's yard, watching the fire licking closer, listening to the shrieking wind, and knowing Carrie and Mrs. Taylor had not escaped in the wagon.

For a long moment he seemed stunned, stood looking in at the horses through the gaping hole the wind had torn in the corner of Ed Taylor's barn. He was clammy with the thought of what might have happened to the women. A cyclone had ripped through Taylor's, raked the roof off one side of the barn, upset the wagon.

The wagon! The wagon! That was it. Mark remembered the overturned wagon by the dugout. With the first fury of that storm Carrie and Mrs. Taylor would have rushed for the shelter of Ed's shallow cellar. The wagon had overturned on the heavy door, pinning them in. Mark saw it all clearly now.

With a cry, he ran from the barn to the dugout, calling, "Carrie!—Carrie!—Mrs. Taylor! Are you in there? Are you all right?" But the wind swept his words away.

He reached the cellar, saw the storm had overturned only the light wagon box and that the door was free of the wheels. Almost frantically then, Mark tugged at the box, pulling it away.

"Carrie! Mrs. Taylor!" he shouted as he jerked the heavy box. "Mark—Mark!" It was Carrie. "That you, Ed?" came a second voice.

With one final heave, Mark cleared the door, pulled it open. Carrie and Mrs. Taylor, white and disheveled, stood before him.

EXACTLY what happened after that Mark never knew except that Mrs. Taylor was inquiring anxiously about Ed, he was reassuring her, and Carrie, crying softly, was close in his arms. It seemed an eternity they stood there, before he remembered that they were in greater danger than ever. The fire was burning straight toward the soddy. No crew of fighters could stop it now.

He ordered the women to go to the house, grab whatever they could while he hitched Ed's team. In the semi-darkness Mark felt his way through the barn door, into the stalls. The horses, sensing the danger, their nostrils irritated by the smoke, pawed nervously, backed out quickly when he untied them. He led them to the wagon, hoisted the box back on the wheelbase. Then he hooked the traces, whirled around the little farmyard and rattled up to the soddy.

He jumped down, yelled, "Carrie, Mrs. Taylor!" stopped short, as if shot! IT WAS RAINING!

It came like that, the rain that night at Rock Creek. The air charged, suffocating one minute; purged, cooling the next. Mark remembered that he'd felt the first warning drops on his face as he rode through the burning bottomlands from Carrie's to Taylor's, but in the anxiety of the moment he had dismissed them. The fire, eating its way steadily toward the homesteads, had seemed indefinitely closer.

They were discussing all this, the fire, the cyclone, the experience in the dugout, over a breakfast of corn cakes and salt pork the next morning at Taylor's. The rain that had started the moment Mark drove the wagon up in front of the soddy had continued all night, had completely drowned out the fire. Big Ed, black, soaking wet but happy, had come home in the midst of it. So the breakfast was a celebration extraordinary.

Ed, looking out of the window at the black, water-soaked bottomlands, blazed so fiercely a few hours earlier, began chucking, turned to Carrie.

"Carrie," he said, winking at Mark, "think you can stick it out now? About everything's happened out here that can happen."

"Say, Ed cut in, "that reminds me. Did you ever file on that piece of land you went looking after last time you rode out here, Mark?"

Mark reddened. "Why, yes and no, Ed. I get that homestead, but you let your plans changed for you once in a while, you know."

Carrie, listening closely, looked up suddenly, a bit startled. Mark knew he had said too much.

"Change plans? Who's a change-plans on a young buck like you?" Ed asked bluntly. "Only time a fellow gets plans changed on him is when he gets married."

Mark knew he was in a corner and squirmed to get out of it. "I mean," he said, avoiding Carrie's intent glance and deliberately lying, "another homesteader beat me to it. But," he recovered quickly, "I may have news for you sooner than you expect."

LATER, Mark was to recall how prophetic that statement was. Carrie had flushed a bit, he imagined, when he said it and Taylor hadn't helped any, deliberately interpreting it in his own fashion.

"Well, it's about time," Ed said, "you had news for us. Good looking young cuss like you ought to be married and settled down long before this."

Mark had risen from the table, saying he wanted to start back to town, and the conversation had ended. Now, riding back to Sioux Springs in the hot midday sun, he recalled Carrie's sudden interest in his words and the thought left him infinitely happy.

He was thinking of her and the blunt way in which Ed Taylor had reached conclusions for both of them, when he looked up to see a man riding hard, out of Sioux Springs, toward him. Instantly, Mark was alert, spurred his own horse.

The figure drew closer—a tall rider on a fast sorrel. Mark recognized the horse. It was Newt Gale's. A second later he knew the man. It was Ashton Oaks.

Instinctively, Mark stiffened in his saddle, leaned forward, pressing hard on his stirrups. Oaks rode straight down on him, 20 yards, 20 yards, 10 yards—and then Oaks fired.

Like that it happened: without a word, a single flash of warning. With a shout, Mark raised high in his saddle, lurched toward the left. His own gun roared twice in the prairie stillness. Oaks' horse went down, and simultaneously Mark crumpled from his saddle.

It was over quickly. Oaks, kicking himself free of an entangling stirrup, abandoned his dead horse, rushed over to Mark, knelt down. Mark's eyes were closed, he scarcely breathed.

"Dead!" Hoarsely Ashton Oaks whispered the single word. And then he looked back. Other riders, two, three, five, were now sending up a cloud of dust straight behind him. With a single bound Oaks reached Mark's horse, vaulted into the saddle. He glanced at the ground. Mark was stirring.

By United Press PHILADELPHIA.—The Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences is taking advantage of the major league night baseball games to aid it in its collection of insect life.

After a recent game between the Phillies and the Boston Bees, collectors John W. Cadbury, 3d, and John W. H. Rehn climbed to the lights above the press box and caught some of the insects which had collected around the huge racks of powerful lights.

They suggested that the lights may be useful to insect collectors in other cities where night baseball is played, particularly should rare nocturnal insects fall into the collectors' nets and cyanide bottles.

It was bound to happen sooner or later in one of these modern wars, we mean, which sank the Greek warship.

Don't shoot where you cannot see. There might be another hunter behind those trees.

Don't leave gates open, and do not hunt in places where you do not have permission to hunt.

Don't forget that quail season does not open until December 1.

Last but not least, don't forget a game warden might be watching you.
