ARMY PLANS A DRIVE FOR AIR CORPS CADETS

The Army plans a new enlistment drive in January to sign up 51,000 three year recruits for the expanding Air Corps. Only men enlisting for the regular three year "hitch" will be assigned to the air arm under present plans. Selective service troops will get their year's training in less technical branches of the Army.

The Regular Army Air Corps, the ground service of the Army's Flying Corps, requires high school graduates or journeyman mechanics and offers many courses of a technical nature. The liberal allowance for grades and ratings provide excellent opportunities for advancement.

Men who enlist in the Regular Army Air Corps without two years of college work may study in the Army libraries and then take the examination for the Flying Cadets Course which requires two years college work.

Flying Cadets receive $75.00 per month during their seven to nine months training period. Upon graduation, they are commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Air Corps Reserve. While funds are available these Reserve Officers will be placed on active duty at from $295.00 to $245.00 per month. A cash bonus of $500.00 is paid each officer when he returns to civil life after three years of active duty.

Candidates for appointment as Flying Cadet must meet the following conditions: unmarried, citizen of the United States, not less than half the necessary credits leading to a degree in a recognized college or university. Must present evidence of excellent moral character. Must be of sound physique and in excellent health.

Vacancies exist for the other branches of the Army, the requirements for which are less exacting.

Additional information and application blanks may be obtained at any Army Recruiting Station.

Arlington Sets A Record For Safety

ARLINGTON, TEX.—This little city, on the busy Dallas-Fort Worth pike, is establishing an enviable record for traffic safety.

This month began the 16th consecutive deathless month in Arlington.

Two years ago, traffic accidents—frequently fatal—were common on the highway that forms a main artery for Arlington. Citizens joked dryly that "I've spent my life on this side of the pike" because of fear of crossing the highway.

A citizens' committee and Police Chief Ott Cribbs decided that something must be done about the matter. Drivers usually pausing for traffic signals while going through Arlington, but they sped down the approaches to the signal zone with too-often injurious results.

Chief Cribbs consulted Department of Public Safety officers in Fort Worth and the Highway Patrol near Arlington was doubled. At least two patrolmen were on duty for 18 hours a day.

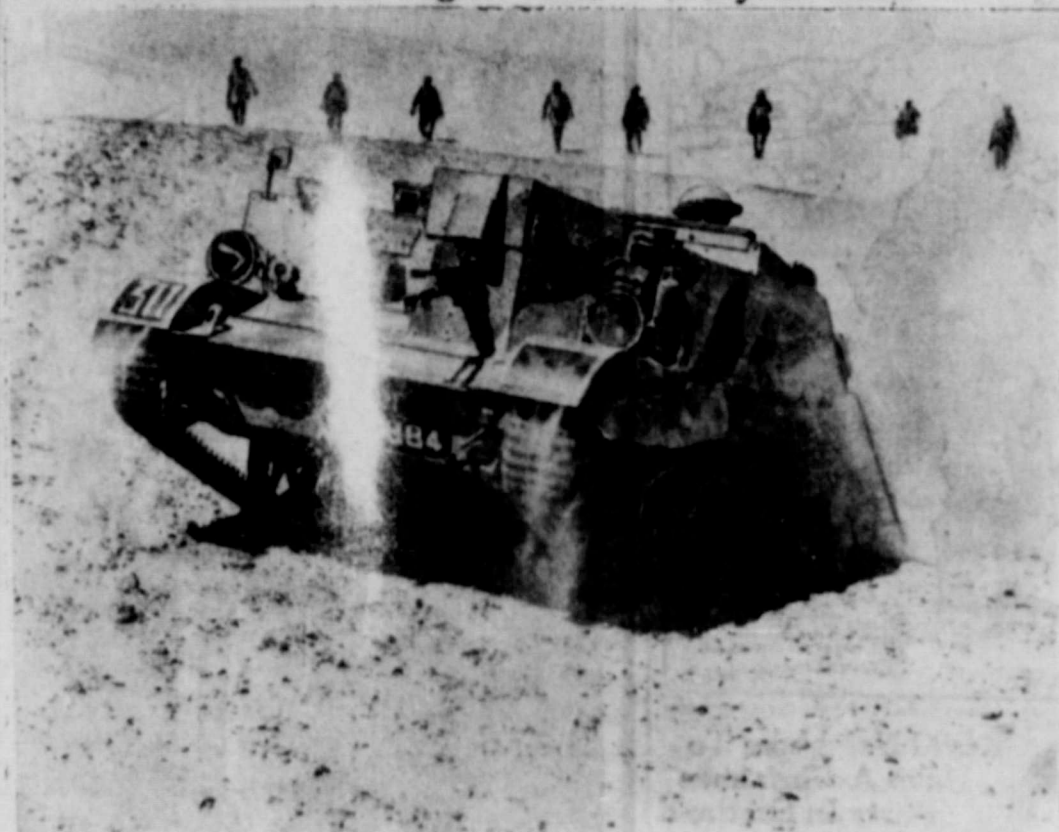

Traffic tickets began to be spread freely. Drunk drivers were the first victims of the police "crack-down." Speeders were the next.

More traffic signals, on Arlington's outskirts, were installed and warning signals established from one end of the route to the other.

But the most effective weapon was the policeman's little summons book. The number of tickets issued in Arlington has quadrupled during the 15-month deathless period.

Where British Fight—With Plenty of Sand

Their advance guided by armored Bren machine gun carriers like this one British troops struck with crushing force in surprise attacks against Italian legions in Egypt. Aided by the British sea and air arms desert troops, like the Indian fighters pictured above on recent maneuvers, forced Italians back in merciless assaults, capturing tens of thousands of the retreating foe.

BRITISH ADVANCE UPON NAVAL BASE IN LIBYA; GREEKS ALSO ADVANCE

While Adolf Hitler moved forcefully into France's government troubles today, British fighters drove against Bardia, Libya, and warplanes attacked German continental bases with renewed vigor. France's future course was considerably clouded by action of Otto Abetz, Nazi agent for Hitler, in obtaining Laval's release after his arrest Saturday.

British troops fared well against the Italians in Libya, capturing the last fort at Sollum, Egypt, to completely expel all Italian troops from Egyptian strongholds which they had held for several months. The British are now hammering against Bardia, Italian naval base inside Libya, and the Turkish road reported that Bardia had already fallen to the British, who were now fighting three miles west of the port.

Prime Minister Churchill, addressing the house of commons in London, warned, however, against any premature celebration over capture of three Italian forts in Africa and humorously reminded commons that England had little to celebrate during the last war.

British purchases in U. S. limited Morgenthau states

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., told a congressional committee today that Britain cannot order more war materials from the United States unless financial aid is obtained.

Loans to Britain are illegal under the Johnson act, and United States leaders are now stressing importance of supplying that country with all needed armaments in time for the expected Spring warfare.

English novelist is now just number in German prison camp

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Friends of P. G. Wodehouse, famous English novelist and humorist, revealed today that he was now just No. 796 in a German concentration camp. Wodehouse was captured by the Germans during the invasion of France last June.

Wodehouse was reported to be taking his internment calmly, and is said to be working on a novel, which he hopes to publish as soon as he is released from the concentration camp.

LAVAL OUSTER TO SLOW AXIS DIPLOMATISTS

By J. W. T. MASON
United Press War Expert

Misdeal of Pierre Laval from the French government should add further confusion to relations between Germany and France, interfering with Herr Hitler's "diplomatic offensive" on the continent. At the same time, relations between France and Great Britain ought to recede from the danger lines (which Laval sought to carry them).

Changes of foreign ministers in any European government always means change in details of the preceding policy. As Laval's successor at the Vichy foreign office, Pierre Flandin will have his own ideas for incorporation in negotiations with Germany. That means prolongation of discussions and postponement of final decisions.

Laval was bitterly antagonistic to Great Britain, believing that the British government's rejection of his idea for amity with Italy at the time of Mussolini's invasion of Abyssinia was a major cause of the present war. Had he been given a free hand in deciding France's present policies, he might even have carried France into the war on Germany's side.

Flandin wants better relations with Germany but he has not Laval's personal resentments against the British and before the war he did not antagonize the Anglo-French entente. He is more amenable than Laval to cooperating with Marshal Petain because he is not the dictator type as is Laval.

It would seem that Petain is developing political strategy based on holding off the Nazi "peace offensive" as long as possible. However authoritarian Petain's ideas may be, he is working for France's future interests; and a military commander he knows that the ultimate decision in the war is yet to be won.

When France surrendered last summer, it seemed to the French leaders as if Great Britain, too, were doomed. That conclusion must now be changed in Vichy at least to one of uncertainty, especially since Greek and North African developments.

Only a British victory can save France and every consideration of political and military common sense should cause Petain to hold off German demands as long as he can do so. Laval apparently wanted a contrary policy, blinded by his Anglophobia. Had he succeeded in overthrowing Petain, as reports credit him with trying to do, it would have been much to Germany's advantage, if French public opinion could have been held in hand.

That French public feeling has to be taken into account, however, is shown today by Vichy's announcement of the organization of a new advisory assembly to share responsibilities with Petain. This recognition of the weight of public opinion seems to be the start of a movement to swing France away from totalitarian ideas.

At the same time, it will cause delays in reaching decisions demanded by Germany, when delays are considered to be in France's interests. It requires much more time to obtain endorsements of policies by a consultative body than when one person assumes the right to give final decisions.

Petain now appears to be abandoning his sole authority. Germany will not relish this change but still less will Herr Hitler wish to see France thrown into domestic turmoil. A civilian revolt, if Europe, which already is smoldering among Norwegians, would have many disadvantages for the Nazis.

Velled intimations today from Berlin that Germany might insist on a change of administration in France show how uneasiness is beginning to develop over the outcome of Laval's removal. But, for Herr Hitler to replace Petain by a Nazi puppet might inflame the French people at a time when the Italian people are developing uncertainties about German benevolence.

Once civilian revolt should start to spread, it would be impossible to foresee its limits. France thus has some power left, even though the country is militarily under German control.

Steel Output Is Being Increased By A New Program

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Moving promptly to forestall any "bottle-neck" in the production of steels for defense and other purposes, members of the steel industry this year have undertaken large-scale programs for substantially increasing the industry's capacity for producing coke, pig iron, open hearth and electric furnace steel, and for rolling finished products.

According to the American Iron and Steel Institute construction of 21 new electric furnaces has been announced, most of which are already operating or will be by the first of the year. All are expected to be in production early in 1941.

The programs which have been announced for increasing the industry's capacity in other directions are proceeding rapidly, and most of the new equipment is expected to be ready for operation some time next year.

Total capacity of the added electric furnaces is estimated to be at least 900,000 net tons of steel ingots per year. Addition of the new electric furnaces will increase by nearly 50 per cent the industry's electric furnace capacity.

Approximately 1,300,000 tons of additional capacity for producing open hearth steel will be added as a result of the programs now under way.

Electric furnaces are used principally for the production of high grade steels, both alloy and straight carbon.

The steel industry has been steadily expanding its electric furnace capacity over a period of years as the result of increasing demand for high grade steels. This demand has been accelerated by the defense program's need for greater production of aircraft engines, light armor plate, gun parts, and other types of products in which electric furnace steels are preferred.

Soil Conservation District Proposal Carries By 548 to 88

In order for the creation of the district to be authorized it was necessary for the election to carry two to one.

The State Soil Board will, at their next meeting, canvass the election returns and then will appoint two supervisors who will obtain a charter for the new district and call an election to name three additional supervisors.

Meantime the British Admiralty announced one of the worst setbacks in their sea warfare, with a total of 101,000 tons of shipping being lost during the week just ended.

An Italian newspaper was quoted here as stating that Germany had built 100 new submarines and that the "last word" in the present war might be determined by the success of these u-boats.

Eight Are Killed In A Gas Blast In Cincinnati Today

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 17.—At least eight persons were killed and a like number injured in a gas blast which completely wrecked two tenement houses here early this morning.

The blast was believed caused by a leaking gas line. Windows in buildings in a two-block area were shattered and other buildings in the immediate vicinity rocked from the force of the blast. Fire which followed the explosion made rescue work hazardous.

Raymond Roy, one of the tenants in the house, said he was asleep on the second floor when the explosion occurred. Roy stated that he was not awakened by the noise of the blast, and knew nothing about it until his bed dropped two stories. He, his wife and four children were uninjured.

War Insurance Is Offered By Lloyds In Mediterranean

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Lloyds of London today renewed war risk insurance on shipments going through the Mediterranean Sea. This is the first time since Italy entered the war that Lloyds has been offering war risk insurance in this area.

The announcement was taken here as an indication that the insurance firm no longer considers Italy and the Italian Navy as a serious hazard to shipping along the British "lifeline."

Three New Bombers Stop Off In Houston

HOUSTON, Dec. 17.—Three giant Douglas bombers, enroute from the Douglas factory in California to New York, for delivery to Great Britain, landed here today. They are the first of the bombers bought by England to land here enroute to New York.

U. S. FIGHTING PLANES NOT UP TO STANDARD

By BRUCE CATTON
WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Nobody in authority will say one word for publication, but the real truth is that the fighting planes the United States is sending to England are not fit for modern aerial warfare.

This isn't true of the bombers. The heavy-duty planes ranging from the giant flying fortresses on down are good enough to fight in anybody's war. But the fighters—the planes whose job it is to down enemy planes by gunfire—are sadly outclassed by the first-line planes of Britain and Germany.

Apparently this is largely because the U. S. Army has failed to co-ordinate the complicated job of plane design.

As experts explain it, the airplanes themselves—as airplanes—are 100 per cent all right. The trouble is that the business of designing flying machines, testing metals and improving engines has gone ahead faster than the business of fitting the planes with the right sort of armaments.

The results is that the American fighting plane is uniformly out-gunned.

U. S. Wings Too Weak

The whole trend in aviation ordnance today is toward greater hitting power—either heavier guns or more of them. The British got onto this about five years ago, when they began equipping their Spitfire and Hurricane fighters with eight machine guns apiece, four in each wing.

On trial, this worked very well. But the British immediately began looking toward the use of heavier guns. The Germans went to work along the same line, and presently were sending up planes which mounted small cannon. The French—who had done some experimenting along that line as far back as the first world war—followed suit.

In with this increased offensive armament came armor. The self-sealing gas tank—again an item which the French had tried out in 1917-18—was perfected. So were various types of cockpit armor.

All of which, the experts remark, called for sturdier, heavier planes. If you're going to mount two, or four, or six heavy machine guns or small cannon on each wing of a plane, you've got to make that wing stronger. And that is where the American fighters are falling short.

Market For Good Gunsight

For the most part, U. S. fighting planes carry much less armament than do the British or German fighters. Hence they are of lighter construction.

Consequently, the British are having a good deal of trouble adapting the fighters they're getting from the United States to the needs of modern aerial warfare. These planes are under-gunned and under-armored. And it is extremely hard to re-arm and re-gun them, because in most cases they simply aren't sturdy enough to stand up under the heavier loads.

No nation has fully solved the problem of aiming a cannon mounted in a fighting plane, although the British are believed to have made the most headway. The man who turns up with a gunsight as good in its field as the American Norden bombsight is in the bombing field will give his country a military secret of real value.

Fighter pilots usually fly solo, so the handy revolving turret used in bombers is out. To aim his gun the fighter has to aim his plane. No sights now known are wholly satisfactory. A pilot in a dog-fight hasn't much time to spend training a single-shot weapon on a fast-moving target.

Laval Is Released Upon Hitler's Order

Adolf Hitler today took France to task for the arrest of Vice Premier Laval, on charges that he was attempting to overthrow the Petain government and declare war on Great Britain.

After a conference between Nazi officials and Premier Petain today, it was announced that Laval's release had been ordered by the Nazi government.

A Nazi spokesman in Berlin was quoted as saying that it was now "up to France to determine whether or not the country will comply with German policies and continue to cooperate with the new order in Europe."

Do They Still Read 'Mein Kampf'?

BY WILLIS THORNTON

It has been the part of wisdom in Germany during the past few years to have a copy of Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf" lying about the house, preferably in a conspicuous place of honor.

Do they read that strange book in Germany now, one wonders?

Do they read it in Russia, and in Japan, and in Italy? It would be interesting to know, because there is some mighty interesting reading there reading made more rather than less interesting as events have unfolded.

The book was written in 1923. It would be strange, of course, if 17 years had not at all changed the opinions of its author, or of any man. Yet there are fascinating passages which would, one thinks, make absorbing reading in Germany, Japan, Italy, and Russia.

For instance:

FOR THE GERMANS: "Coalition successes, by the very manner of their origin, harbor the germ for the later crumbling off. . . Axis enthusiasts, full of zip about the German-Italian-Japanese coalition, should like that.

FOR THE JAPANESE: "England would be doomed, were she to stand alone. Hence they anxiously reach out for the yellow fist and cling to an alliance which, viewed racially, is perhaps irresponsible. . . Grip the Hitler hand more firmly, O Japanese, with your "yellow fist."

FOR THE RUSSIANS: "We must never forget that the regents of present-day Russia are common blood-stained criminals; that here is the scum of humanity. . . a nation which combines a rare mixture of bestial horror with an inconceivable gift of laying. . . Ah, there, Comrade Molotov, you must come over again some time soon!"

FOR THE ITALIANS: "As far as I am concerned personally, I could here guarantee with a clear conscience that I could still muster sufficient courage to participate in the victorious conquest of the South Tyrol. . . True, Hitler said this mockingly to the "parliamentarians" he hated, taunting them for their unwillingness to fight for the Tyrol, but Mussolini knows Hitler hat not forgotten this once-German territory.

Yes, "Mein Kampf" is still good reading.

It should have been read more carefully in Europe and here many years ago.

But it is not too late to learn from its pages.

You'll get by all the ups and downs of life if you stay on the level.

Hitler gives certain individuals the Iron Cross and most any country the double.

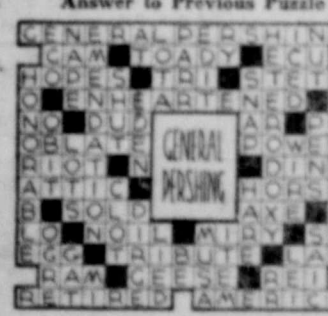

The movie actress who strip-picketed a studio, removing a garment a day, should have used a white horse for the grand finale.

SERIAL STORY

DUDE COLLEGE

BY OREN ARNOLD

YESTERDAY! Lons joins Wesley, and after brief target practice, they sit and talk. Wesley looks into Lons' eyes and is surprised when Lons displays ignorance of common Mexican customs, but he says nothing. He hardly has a chance for Lons' shoulder closer, then suddenly kisses him.

I have you beside me. You, Andre!

Andre didn't know yet where the precious instrument was hidden, but he would find out—later.

BECAUSE Ronica had no classes after 2 p. m., Andre Girardeau called at the Rocking R ranch next afternoon and again was profuse with his sympathies. The fire loss had upset Mr. Bailey rather badly; not the monetary loss, but the sentimental, the fact that his newly discovered resting place was suddenly consumed.

Andre arrived to find four trucks there, and several other men talking to Ronnie and her dad.

"Remember the business associate I introduced you to down in Guaymas, Mexico? Do you remember the man named Pico?"

"Oh come, Lons!" he was impatient. "You know what I mean! I'm not being personal, I'm just anxious. Don't you understand? We risked our lives to do a thing, and then you—"

"Yes, Why?"

Lons shrugged, expressively. "You come here with a chip on your shoulder, Andre. Sit down."

"He'd love this. He has a new hacienda on the edge of town, big home like yours will be. He asked me to keep an eye open for real Indian things. If you also like it we can order two."

"Don't be a fool!" he almost snarled that, his face lined in anger. "I let you take the thing because I had a heavier front to maintain, a cover to keep up. But I am running this show, understand? I am the one who got the instrument, but now one night later I do not have it in my possession and my hands are tied. You—you are a girl!"

"Oh, by all means get it for him, Andre. You are so thoughtful!"

He said that last almost contemptuously, standing over her in an attitude of melodramatic menace.

HE purchased the drum—$25. And then he moved to the jewelry case. Wilson, a picturesque gray-haired gentleman who had expert knowledge of Indian crafts and artistry, showed him hand-wrought bracelets and rings of silver set with turquoise, with petrified wood, with tourmaline and all manner of native semi-precious stones. He purchased the prettiest ring and bracelet set for Ronica.

He had slipped thus to her apartment at 1 a. m. as he had often done in the past weeks. No one had observed his coming and going, he felt, and he had made sure that all windows and shades were closed now. But he was not the naive Andre of past visits here. This call was not for pleasure, it was a business call by a definitely nervous man.

When he observed which Navaho ruff Ronica admired most, Andre ordered them for her, and when they discovered a great arm chair made skillfully of the light but astonishingly strong ribs from saguaro cactus, Andre ordered that especially for Mr. Bailey.

Lons Montoya was staring off. "Foot" is a strong word, Andre.

"She is just too generous, Andre. I know Dad will love you for it, though."

He looked nervously at her. Then he walked to her little kitchenette and got himself a drink. He paused, drank another glass of liquor, and let his feelings cool. He came back to her smiling.

"Ronnie," said he, "I can't very well haul in rocks to build with, but I want you to know that I feel just like those ranch men. And I can show a little of my feeling. Now you have said that the new house will be furnished with authentic Spanish and Indian things—so come in!"

"Listen, kid," he purred, "I'm all on edge, tonight. Can't help being jumpy. Forget it."

Andre acknowledged the compliment by nodding. "The 'dude' is temporary, however. I shall change that in a day or two, Wilson. I know how to pick 'em, eh? Eh, Wilson?"

Lons looked up at him with cold calculating gaze—and all at once she appeared satisfied in turn. She lifted her arms to him.

His open conceit seemed almost to have a nasty smirk to it, so that Wilson looked up in surprise. But the storekeeper just repeated, courteously, "A very lovely girl."

There is no worse, eh? Not when to shake hands and invite them to

They went in the store—which was more like a museum, in truth—and Fred Wilson in person came to shake hands and invite them to

Teacher Of 70 Says Work Really Easy

By Unruh Press
SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—A. O. Garrett, recently retired teacher at East High School is taking life easy after 35 years of teaching the fundamentals of history and biology to thousands of pupils from Kansas and Utah. Garrett began teaching in the days of the Three R's, tight trousers and gingham dresses in various schools of Kansas. He came to Salt Lake City in 1902 and was employed until his 70th birthday in the local high schools. At a birthday party, Garrett told students, who presented him with an easy chair, that the youth of his students had kept him young and spry throughout the half century he had devoted to the teaching profession.

The annual Christmas program for the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the First Methodist Church was presented Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the main auditorium of the church.

Mrs. Fred Warren was leader for the program and arranged a very effective background for the program numbers with Mrs. C. R. Squires and baby daughter in a tableau picture of the Madonna and the Child, seated on the altar. Miss Elsie Hummel, accompanied at the piano by Miss Mildred Halch, gave Christmas songs on the xylophone. Mrs. Carl Hill told the story of "Dickens' Christmas Carol" and "O Holy Night" was sung by Mrs. L. N. Griffin and Miss Francis Hatley. The devotional was given by Mrs. C. E. May.

Closing the program was an impressive candle lit contribution service for the child welfare work of the organization. The prayer of dismissal was offered by Mrs. S. P. Boon.

Preceding the program a short business meeting was held at the close of which Mrs. L. N. Griffin, president of the society, was presented a lovely gift by the members.

Barbecue and Dance For National Guard Will Be Thursday

The barbecue and dance, honoring members of the National Guard, which was originally scheduled for Monday night of this week, but which was postponed, will be held Thursday night, it was announced today.

The affair was postponed because of the bad weather over the week-end and because the guards will not leave for the year of active training until after Christmas, instead of leaving today as had been planned.

All members of the National Guard, Home Guard and Carl Barnes Post of the American Legion, with their families, have been invited to the barbecue and dance, which is being sponsored by the local Legion Post.

The barbecue will be held at the National Guard Armory and the dance, which is being sponsored by the Legion Auxiliary, will be held at the American Legion Hall.

Trees Damaged By Ice To Be Pruned

Arrangements were being made today to prune trees around the Ranger schools and churches, and to clear up the debris left after the ice storm of the past week-end.

Charles H. Bell, vocational agricultural teacher of Ranger High School, is to supervise the work, which is to be done by NYA youths. The City of Ranger is to furnish trucks to haul off the limbs and branches broken from the trees by ice.

It is expected that it will be several months before all trees damaged by the ice can be pruned back and the debris hauled away or burned.

First Cattle Drive To Fort Davis Was Caused By Drought

By United Press
FORT DAVIS, Tex.—The first cattle drive to the grassy rangelands near Fort Davis—a move that influenced the development of the Fort Davis area—was the result of a great drought in the Shafter region 85 years ago.

In 1855, Milton Favor, who also brought the first cattle west of the Pecos, realized that it would be only a matter of time after an impending drought set in until he would have dead cattle unless he found new grasslands. He drove his huge herd to Fort Davis.

This was the genesis of what is now one of the greatest cattle-grazing regions in the world.

Other cattlemen followed Favor's example, and after the marauding Apache Indians were driven into Mexico in 1881 the section began to grow in earnest.

The leaf fat of the hob makes the best lard; back fat, second best and the intestinal fat the poorest.
